IN THE SOCIAL WORLD

Housewarming at Artistic (Olcott Residence).

DESIGNED BY MRS. BARNEY

Miss Cannon hosted at a Bridge Party, and, with Father, Entertains at Dinner on Sunday in Honor of Mr. and Mrs. Horne—Venezuelan Legation Changes Domicile.

Society's rendezvous last night was the new home of Representative and Mrs. Van Vochten Olcott, in R street, built for them by Mrs. Albert Clifford Barney, and reflecting the artistic taste of the designer in every detail.

Last night's function, a housewarming, took the form of a dance.

The attractive Italian ballroom, with its rose hangings and gilded antique furniture, was further beautified by clusters of white roses and carnations. The dining-room, reached by passing through an artistic niche resembling a small pergola, was hung in festoons of smilax.

The stuccoed walls, with beams of old oak, were unadorned. From the ceiling hung trailing streamers of smilax, in whose depths gleamed tiny incandescent lights, which also shone forth from the hearts of garlands of roses.

The hostess welcomed her guests in a portfolio of pink satin, embroidered in tulle. Her house guest, Miss Mary, Watson, of New York, wore pale green chiffon satin and lace.

Schroeder's Orchestra played continuously throughout the evening. The guests, recruited mostly from the younger set, included Mrs. Dexter, Mr. H. P. Fairbanks, and the Misses Cheesbore, of Baltimore, house guests; also the Counselor of the Japanese Embassy and Mme. Miyooka, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Harlow, the Danish Minister, Mr. Brun, the Swiss Minister, M. Vogel, Miss Cameron, Senator Warren, the Misses Oliver, Senator Brandegee, Gov. WEARS A BIG SNAKE

New York Society Woman Poses as "Salambo."

STAR AT MRS. ASTOR'S PARTY

Mrs. James B. Eustis Shudders When Huge Python Shifts Its Coils While Perched on Her Shoulders. Entertainment for Benefit of Poor People in the State of Virginia.

New York, Feb. 24.—The bright particular star in the all-star cast of Mrs. Waldorf-Astor's entertainment given this afternoon and evening in the ballroom of the Plaza Hotel for the benefit of the poor mountaineers of Virginia was the six-foot spotted python which coiled itself comfortably about the neck and shoulders of Mrs. James B. Eustis as she posed as "Salambo."

The old gold velvet curtains which temporarily veiled the "living pictures" from the eager eyes of "society" (for all society was there) parted to disclose "Salambo" in a robe of sapphire blue, shimmering with silver and gold and glistening with gems.

The cold blue moonlight which flooded the scene did not lend any sparkle to the sleepy eyes of the snake, and at once the audience thought it was imitation, or, at most, stuffed. Immediately after the tumultuous burst of applause which paid tribute to the artistic triumph of the picture, however, the reptile slightly shifted itself with a sinuousness which could not be accounted for by the theory of hidden wire springs. It seemed to cling a trifle more tensely to the white neck of the diaphanous azure robe, or whether she was prompted simply by an exuberance of spirits, was not revealed, but as a matter of fact, just before the golden draperies swallowed up the vision of her, the tiny toe of her right slipper was suddenly elevated at least two inches from the ground, with a resultant frou-frou of chiffon, satin, and lace, and a spirited renewal of applause.

Mrs. Astor is Applauded.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor's portrayal of Romney's conception of Lady Hamilton as This was voted by many who were present the most beautiful picture in the collection. Mrs. Astor stood on a staircase, holding aloft the scepter of Alexander the Great. She wore a clinging robe of white gauze with overdraperies of pale blue. These were plentifully bespangled with brilliant, multi-colored diamonds.

Another popular picture was that of Mrs. Benjamin Guinness, as Semiramis. She reclined on a leopard robe against a background of red velvet. Over her robe of golden gauze she wore a gem-embroidered cloak of pink velvet, and on her masses of titan hair rested a crown of diamonds.
