BUILDING IS RESUMED

Pickford Apartment Again Under Construction.

USE OF PILASTERS ALLOWED

Acting Building Inspector Approves Course for Which Snowden Ashford Was Criticized—Philadelphia Expert Declares Walls Did Not Bulge, Despite Contrary Assertions.

With a force of eighty men, Thomas H. Pickford yesterday resumed the construction of the apartment house at Twentieth and P streets northwest, after an enforced halt of ten days, pending investigation into the collapse of the structure, which resulted in the death of two men and the injury of several others.

Shortly after the coroner's inquest, which blamed the poor construction of the corner pier for the accident, Pickford entered into communication with Amos B. Barnes, an expert structural engineer, of Philadelphia, to inspect the building and lay plans for the continuation of its construction.

Mr. Barnes came to Washington, and after a week spent in going over the wrecked apartment house had the debris cleared away and started the contractors at work at noon yesterday.

Not Due to Bulging.

In his statement to Pickford, the expert said not one of the walls had bulged an inch, except the pier which had buckled, in being torn down by the District authorities. This he corroborated by making the owner of the building to employ the owner of the building to the scene and showing him the walls as they stand.

This statement shows a marked discrepancy with the testimony offered by several of the witnesses at the inquest. Under Barnes' orders, additional structural iron work has been put into the interior of the building, making it in a degree different from the original plans of the architect.

Most of the contractors and men who were working upon the building at the time of the accident on June 9 are again employed there, and it is expected that the structure will be completed by October.

The work was allowed to go ahead by permission of the District building department, which has had inspectors at work on the building since the crash.

Harry Blake, of Barber & Ross, one of the four men held by the coroner's jury, having been charged with allowing improper iron construction work on the fallen building, is again in charge of the iron construction for his firm.

Allows Use of Pilasters.

In granting permission to go ahead with the construction work on the apartment house, Thomas Francis, acting building inspector of the District, sanctioned the use of pilasters or steel columns as supports for the walls from the fourth to the sixth floors. The question of allowing the use of pilasters was considered at length at the inquest, and the former building inspector, Snowden Ashford, was accused of acting without sufficient care when he allowed the architect to install them. Although Mr. Ashford denied any knowledge of the additional supports, other employes in his office stated that they had seen the plans and had heard the architect say he had Ashford's permission to use them.

Since the new chief of the building office has taken the case to the use of pilasters, many persons connected with the District government take it to mean Ashford's vindication, so far as this detail is concerned.

Delay in Pressing Prosecution.

Assistant District Attorney Turner, who is in charge of the investigation for the government, said yesterday that he did not know just when the case would be taken before the grand jury. In so far as the work of gathering evidence for presentation at the trial goes, he was of the opinion that it was finished.

While this has not been officially announced, it is expected that the district attorney will use some of the experts of the Geological Survey as witnesses at the hearing, and probably will make use of the laboratories of that department to analyze the materials used in the construction of the building.

Judging from the number of cases at present before the grand jury, it is believed that the men indicted by the coroner's jury will not be called for trial until July.

ADDRESSES BY HORSESHOERS.

Betterment of the Trade Is Urged by the Speakers. Addresses dealing with the betterment of the horseshoeing trade in this city were made at the open meeting of the International Union of Journeyman Horseshoers in session at Costello's Hall last night.

Members of the local unions participated in the speechmaking. Several of the visiting delegates urged a closer union between the two organizations of horseshoers, saying it would be of material benefit to both.

Examples of the progress of the trade in other cities were related to show the increase of the prosperity since the amalgamation of the Master and Journeyman Horseshoers.

Pending the report of committee on laws, little business was transacted at the morning and afternoon sessions of the international body.

Fourth Competitive Drill.

The fourth annual competitive drill between Companies A and B, of the Industrial Home School, will take place on the school grounds, 2525-25th Wisconsin avenue northwest this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The companies have been under the instruction of Maj. J. R. Webb, of the high school cadets, and the contest will be close and spirited.

EMBEZZLEMENT IS CHARGED

J. O. or Bernard Fitzsimmons Locked Up at Sixth Precinct Station.

United States Express Company Alleged He Has Failed to Account for About $1,200.

J. O. or Bernard Fitzsimmons, employed by the United States Express Company, was arrested last night by Central Office Detectives Berman and McNamee on a charge of embezzlement. He is locked up at the Sixth precinct station.

Fitzsimmons disappeared from his home, 35 Q street northeast, early on the morning of June 8. After being missing for several days he returned home, saying he had been ill. During his absence his employers examined his accounts and found a shortage which they state will reach $1,200. He was arrested on a warrant sworn out by William C. Johnson, charging embezzlement of $65.

Fitzsimmons was a clerk in the office, and had access to the bills. In the last few weeks a number of bills were presented that were found to be fraudulent. An investigation was made, and the blame fixed on Fitzsimmons. He was accused by Mr. Johnson, and is alleged to have confessed to taking $100.

TO-MORROW SUMMER BEGINS.

But "Official" Opening Does Not Wait Upon the Thermometer.

Though the calendar refuses to mark the opening of summer until the longest day, popular opinion has claimed June 21 as a midsummer day.

In this instance, as in many others, however, popular opinion is erroneous. Midsummer rarely falls in June. One may, indeed, look on it as one of the movable feasts, shifting with the turn of the seasons, now in mid-July, but seldom in June. Probably mid-July is oftener midsummer than any other time of the year.

The year mounts steadily to June 21, and then begins to decline—in space, but not in ardor. The ardors of July are more fervent than those of June. June is, or should be, a month of delicate, warm sunshine, of westerling breezes, of zephyrs, of the budding prime, July brings maturity itself, full blossom, midsummer heat, midsummer madness, midsummer irresponsibility, the glorious Fourth!

The fact remains that to-morrow is the official beginning of summer, and that the days will thereafter decline.

LABOR MEN FILE APPEAL.

Buck Stove and Range Case Carried to Local Appellate Court.

The appeal of the American Federation of Labor from the decision handed down in the Supreme Court of the District by Chief Justice Claiborn, finding the boycott conducted by the labor organization against the Buck Stove and Range Company, of St. Louis, in the American Federationist to be illegal, was filed yesterday in the Court of Appeals of the District.

Some time ago, owing to the fact that the stove company kept the "open shop," that is, refused to restrict their employment to union men, according to the rules of the labor organization, that organization placed the name of the stove company on their "unfair list"—namely, the list of firms throughout the country which refuse to employ union men exclusively. Union men are urged not to patronize these firms.

Thereupon the Buck company took the matter into court. In the preliminary hearing of the case before Justice Ashley M. Gould they succeeded in having an injunction pendente lite issued against the labor body, which action was approved later in the final hearing by Justice Claiborn, and a final decree was granted to restrain the defendants from further publishing the stove company in their "unfair list."

This is a very important and far-reaching case, as it involves the whole question of boycotting in all divisions of labor unionism. It is thought that the case will not be finally rested until it has been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States.
