Fashionable Wedding Season Now Over, Having Many June Brides to Its Credit—Where Honey-moons Are Being Spent.

MISS FREDERICA MORGAN, who has recently returned from a visit to Kentucky.

THE past week has seen the last of the fashionable weddings until the fall season. The wedding season in Washington went out in a blaze of glory with the wedding of Miss Mattingly to Maj. David D. Porter on Wednesday. It brought a large party of distinguished visitors to Washington from the far West and from the North, to say nothing of the near-by places, which was unusual at this season of the year, and but proved the popularity of the fair bride and distinguished bridegroom. Miss Mattingly was one of the greatest belles of Washington from the time of her debut a few years ago to the day of her marriage with her old playmate and almost life-long friend, Maj. Porter and his bride were going for but a short bridal trip, and they will return here soon to take up their residence in the former home of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Hitchborn, where they will spend the remainder of the summer.

The other brides and bridegrooms of the spring season have been heard from in various places. Mr. and Mrs. Mandeville Carlisle, have returned to Washington, where they will at once become factors in the country life thereabout. The bride, who was married last month, has also returned here and is in her home in Jefferson place; Lieut. and Mrs. Charles R. Train, have arrived in their home in Ardmore, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leiter, who are en tour in their auto, have been heard of from various places, lastly New London, where they went for the yacht races, taking Miss Grace McMillan Jarvis with them from Manchester-by-the-sea, where she arrived from Detroit with her grandmother, Mrs. McMillan, and her grand-nephew, Mrs. Kettler early in the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick K. Stevens have been in Mr. Stevens' home in New York for some time, after a honeymoon visit in the Murray home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Wade Chance, the latter formerly Mrs. Van Rensselaer Cruzer, whose marriage was a great surprise to all their friends, owing to their success in keeping the engagement a secret, have become settled in their English home, which will be their headquarters hereafter, although they will make frequent visits to their own country. Mrs. Chance is expected to write some new and interesting works on life in rural England, on the study of which she means to spend a great deal of time and thought. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel William Baker are now on their wedding trip, and will soon return to Mr. Baker's country home, near Germantown, Md., where they will at once become factors in the country life thereabout. The American bride across the seas who has become a British subject in wedding Hon. John Hubert Ward is enjoying a real English honeymoon in the ancestral home of the Dudleys in Worcestershire, of which Mr. Ward is a younger son, his brother being the Earl of Dudley. They will go from there to Lord Dudley's Irish seat, Leore Lodge, Movud Cross, Galway, for the more intense part of the summer.

The spring brides have really received so much attention and thought that the brides of the fall have almost been lost sight of. Chief among these will be Miss Katherine Elkins, according to revived rumors, who will become an Italian subject by marrying the royal Duke of the Abruzzi. The marriage is now confidently expected to take place in Washington in the early fall, and should these expectations prove true, this will be the most important international wedding which has yet taken place in this country. The latest news from Italy of the expected wedding is that the Dowager Queen Margherita has been completely won over in favor of the match, and is now most anxious for the union of Miss Elkins and the duke. She is alleged to have gone so far as to select the gifts which she will send this American bride, and these gifts are said to consist of some rare old Venetian lace, the value of which will approach the million dollar mark; a splendid collar of six large emeralds surrounded by diamonds, and several strands of her almost priceless pearls. These are but a few of the magnificent gifts which will be showered upon Miss Katherine Elkins should the duke's wooing be not in vain. It is pretty generally understood among the connections and intimate friends of the young woman that she has not yet said the magic word, and that the royal duke is as much in the dark as to his future as so brilliant a man and so clever and attractive a girl is a pleasant thing to anticipate and to look forward to, and Washington is more than ready to accept the distinction of being the scene of the affair. Meanwhile, Miss Elkins and her family are maintaining the discreet silence they observed at the start, and nothing more definite will be known on the subject until the official announcement from the royal house of Italy and the Elkins home in West Virginia, which will come, if it comes at all, simultaneously.

There was a very general exodus from Washington during the week, but with all that, the porches and grounds of the Chevy Chase Club and the Country Club will be filled with well-known men and women who are tarrying, few from preference, in Washington. Wives are, more and more, remaining in town late with their husbands, and as though duty was growing fashionable, one woman follows the example of some other woman a little higher up on the social ladder, perhaps, until the number of temporary widowers is growing less each year. This is, much of it, due to the country club and automobiles. To spin out to the club in one's own machine, where every tempting viand of the season awaits one, and cooling breezes are the rule and not the exception, and where one is sure indeed to look forward to during the long, hot afternoon. It is far more comfortable to remain late in one's town house under such circumstances.

Golf and tennis are still the attractions at Chevy Chase, and Miss Marion Oliver, who is an adept at both, is among the late stayers who may be found on the grounds almost any afternoon, and, indeed, many a morning also. She will, however, leave early in the week for the Northern home of her parents.

WEDDINGS. Miss Nanny Armbruster, of this city, was married yesterday to Mr. Carl Wolf, of Philadelphia. The ceremony was performed in the Church of the Good Shepherd at 11 o'clock by the rector, Rev. Charles Stetson. The bride wore a princess gown of white silk trimmed with lace, and carried Brade roses. The future home of the couple will be in Philadelphia. Miss Armbruster was a popular member of the choir of the Church of the Good Shepherd.

On Monday, July 6, Miss Mary Ellen Lutz, of Chevy Chase, will be married to Williams F. Lemon, clerk in the Supreme Court of the District. The ceremony will take place in the apartment of the bride's father, Francis A. Lutz, at the Sterling, and will be performed by Bishop Frank M. Bristol. Miss Gertrude Lutz, sister of the bride, will be bridesmaid, and Harry M. Lemon, brother of the bridegroom, will act as best man. The ceremony will be attended by the relatives of both parties and a few intimate friends.
