

ALL BEY MISSING FROM LEGATION

Turk at Calvert Street House Makes Statement.

GONE FOR THREE DAYS

Informer Refuses to Divulge the Name or Details.

Air of Mystery About the Former Turkish Legation Gives Rise to Various Inexplicable Rumors—Report that Deposed Diplomat Has Been Moved to a House in Columbia Road—Mundji Bey in City.

"Mehmed Ali Bey, former Minister from Turkey to the United States, has left Washington. He has been gone three days. His present whereabouts is unknown."

This statement was made to a reporter of The Washington Herald last night by an inmate of the former legation, 1510 Calvert street. The man declined to give his name. He said he was an attaché, but when questioned further refused to answer, and asked to be excused.

The man was undoubtedly a Turk, and spoke in broken English, but he was emphatic in the announcement concerning the departure of the former minister. He repeated the assertion a number of times, as though he wished to make himself clearly understood.

Efforts to verify the statement were futile. The main door to the legation was ajar, but rings at the door bell, were unanswered. A servant entering the house said the secretary of the deposed minister was away, but would return at 11 o'clock. At 11:30 o'clock the secretary had not returned.

Report Was Denied.

About three days ago it was rumored the former minister had left Washington. This report was denied at the legation, where, it was said, preparations for leaving were being made. This was afterward proved to be untrue. It was said All Bey would remain in Washington until he had recovered from his illness, which confined him to his bed. His illness had previously been termed a "diplomatic illness."

Shortly after the reporter left the legation two men were seen to leave the house. Before walking down the stone steps leading to the main entrance, they looked carefully down the street, as though they were in fear of being seen. Apparently reassured, they walked to Eighteenth street and Columbia road, where they engaged in a fifteen-minute conversation. They separated, the tall man, who had said he was an attaché, and who strikingly resembled the secretary, going to a house in Columbia road. The latter carried a bag and entered the house in Columbia road without ringing the doorbell. The house was dark and looked as though unoccupied. A ring at the doorbell, a few minutes after the man had entered, failed to bring a response.

It is thought probable that All Bey has been carried to the house in Columbia road. While the legation is carefully guarded by Secret Service men, the house in Columbia road is also watched. A man was seen standing across the street from the house, who scrutinized passers-by. When approached by a newspaper man he walked away. The man returned to his station three times, and left every time he was approached. It is considered likely Mehmed Ali Bey has been removed to a house not more than two blocks from the legation to escape curious persons and newspapermen. All Bey is said to have candidly admitted he has received threatening letters, and it is known he regarded these letters seriously. This is the reason given by the State Department for requesting Chief Wilkie, of the Secret Service, to station agents at the Calvert street house.

Sensation Is Promised.

The statements and denials said to have been given out at the legation are expected to terminate in sensational developments in a few days. A hint to this effect was dropped by a Turk living in Washington, who is known to be intimately acquainted with both Mehmed Ali Bey, former minister, and Mundji Bey, charge d'affaires of the Turkish Legation. The man requested his name be not used for reasons which he did not care to state. He is known to have an intimate knowledge of the diplomatic relations between this country and Turkey. When questioned with a view of ascertaining the nature of the developments, he replied it would not only be undiplomatic, but probably dangerous, to give out such information.

As though in corroboration of the Turk's hint, many mysterious moves were noted yesterday, a day of rest, when, ordinarily, international affairs are temporarily forgotten. It is known the secretary to Mehmed Ali Bey called on Mundji Bey at the New Willard, but this was denied both at the legation and at the hotel. What occurred at the conference has not been divulged. Mundji Bey announced his intention of returning to New York to-morrow. In November he will return to Constantinople, where he will start a liberal newspaper.

Found His Home Looted.

White Plains, N. Y., Aug. 16.—A bold robbery was reported to the sheriff of Westchester County to-day by Henry Marquand, son of the late Henry Marquand, the banker and patron of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, who has a large country place at Mount Kisco. Mr. Marquand returned to-day to find that his house had been broken into and silver and other things taken amounting to several thousands of dollars.

GIRL IS CRUSHED WHEN PONY FALLS

Crowd Was Watching Merry Race at Chevy Chase.

WAS PICKED UP UNCONSCIOUS

Physician Believes Miss Beatrice Siford's Back Was Broken by Accident, in Which She Was Thrown Over Animal's Head and Then Crushed Under Her Steed.

In the sight of hundreds of pleasure-seekers at Chevy Chase Lake, at 9 o'clock last night, Miss Beatrice Siford, twenty-three years old, of 706 Eighth street northwest, was thrown from a pony and the animal fell across her prostrate form. She was unconscious when picked up, and her condition is critical.

Miss Siford was carried to a street car and hurried to Fifteenth street and New York avenue, where she was transferred to an ambulance from the Emergency Hospital. At that institution it was learned that she is suffering from possible internal injuries, fractures of both hips, and bruises about the abdomen and back. Her condition is serious.

Miss Siford, who is employed as a cashier in a florist's shop on Ninth street, started for the lake at 7 o'clock in the evening, accompanied by William Seals, fourteen years old, son of the woman with whom Miss Siford boards. The two, upon reaching the resort, took in the various amusements and finally hired ponies. After a couple of turns about the track, Miss Siford's pony stumbled. The two, upon reaching the resort, took in the various amusements and finally hired ponies. After a couple of turns about the track, Miss Siford's pony stumbled. The two, upon reaching the resort, took in the various amusements and finally hired ponies. After a couple of turns about the track, Miss Siford's pony stumbled.

The Neck-and-neck Race.

The boy dashed in pursuit of his fair companion, and they were almost neck and neck, the ponies running at a gallop, when Miss Siford's mount stumbled. The pony tried to regain his equilibrium, but caught one foot in a depression and turned a complete somersault, landing on top of its rider.

A crowd was standing about the inclosure watching the riders, and a cry of horror went up when the accident occurred. Women screamed and several fainted when they saw the accident. Half a dozen men and the attendants at the track rushed to the injured girl and carried her to the waiting station. There she was given temporary treatment by a physician who happened to be in the crowd. He pronounced her injuries serious, and ordered her taken to a hospital at once.

A special car was run from the lake to Fifteenth street and New York avenue. A telephone message had been sent to the Emergency Hospital, and Dr. McLaughlin was waiting with an ambulance when the car arrived. The patient was hurried to the hospital and taken upstairs. An examination was made of her condition, but the seriousness could not be determined last night. It is stated that she had probable internal injuries, besides serious bruises and fractures of both hips.

Back May Be Broken.

Miss Siford complained of severe pains in her hips and back, and said she believed that in falling the pony had crushed her and probably injured her spine. The physicians concurred with her in this belief.

Miss Siford could say very little about the accident last night. She told Dr. McLaughlin how the accident occurred while her injuries were being attended.

Young Seals was so excited over the accident that he could not give a coherent account of the accident. The accident attracted much attention and caused a great deal of excitement, not only at the lake, but in the heart of the city. News of the accident was transferred from the street car to the ambulance.

WOMAN MAIL CARRIER BUSY

Substitutes Man for Route to Attend Convention.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Farmers living along the country roads in the towns of Lawrence and Stockholm, up in St. Lawrence County, missed the cheery voice of their mail woman yesterday and had to suffice the grog hells of a mere man.

Mrs. Oia Converse, the regular carrier, one of the few lady mail carriers in the whole State, was in Utica, sending the State convention of rural mail carriers into wild spasms of delight by informing them that during her year's service as treasurer the association had been freed from a $500 debt, with a healthy balance left over.

She is the first female treasurer the Rural Carriers' Association has ever had, and she is also the first treasurer to put the organization on a self-sustaining basis. She travels 11,000 miles a year as a mail carrier and in five years has not missed a trip. She was re-elected to office.

Betting Arrests at Empire Track.

Yonkers, N. Y., Aug. 16.—Leopold Puffer and Emanuel Schoen were arrested just before the close of the races at the Empire Race Track yesterday on the charge of violating the anti-betting law. The detectives say they were operating a bookmaking game through the means of a cipher code.

CIVIL AUTHORITIES WILL TRY HAINS

Slayer of W. E. Annis Not Army's Prisoner.

MUST ASK FOR LEAVE

Otherwise Young Officer Could Be Tried for Desertion.

Wealthy Captain of Artillery, Whose Brother Aided Him in Killing Man Suspected of Wrecking His Home, Must Face a Hard Battle for His Life Independent of His Military Connection—Chances Against Him.

Army officers are deeply distressed over the position of Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., who on Saturday shot and killed the man he is suspected of having wronged his honor.

The facts all go to show deliberate purpose and careful preparation, and the result of the trial is looked forward to by army officers with apprehension.

The action of Capt. Hains' brother, Thornton Hains, who himself has killed a man under circumstances that were never fully explained, and who Saturday held back bystanders while his brother emptied his service revolver into the body of an unarmed man, is believed to aggravate the enormity of the crime, and there is a grave fear that Capt. Hains, an officer of the army, may pay the extreme penalty of his act with his life. There is no record that an officer of the army has ever died a felon's death.

The shooting of Annis by Capt. Hains will give the War Department no little anxiety. The legal department of the army will follow every development of the case with the greatest care. The crime was committed on territory of the State of New York, and Capt. Hains surrendered to the civil authorities. He now is under court arrest. Primarily, therefore, in the opinion of the best-informed legal officers of the War Department, the Federal government has no jurisdiction in the case. Gen. George B. Davis, Judge Advocate General of the Army, was called yesterday, but an officer of the department who has given military law thoughtful study for many years discussed the case yesterday afternoon.

Army Has No Jurisdiction.

"Capt. Hains is an officer of the United States army," he said, "and therefore he is subject, under any and all circumstances, to the law of the army. His crime was committed outside a military reservation. Therefore, the War Department has no jurisdiction over his crime, although it has the power to try him after the civil authorities have acted. It makes no difference whether the result of his trial in the civil courts, he is still answerable to the military authorities."

"Even if he is acquitted by the New York courts, he will probably go before a court-martial afterward. The law could not be court-martialed on the charge of murder. And for two reasons: "In the first place, the Constitution of the United States protects a man against being placed twice in jeopardy of life, and, in the second place, there is no provision under military law for the court-martial of an officer for murder. Article of War 21 provides for a court-martial for murder by an officer in time of war, but in time of peace, as at present, there is no such provision. An officer may be court-martialed for manslaughter or the various legal degrees of homicide, but not for murder. Consequently, if Capt. Hains is acquitted by the New York court for the shooting of Annis, he can only be tried on the charge of manslaughter, which will depend on the nature of the evidence adduced in court."

"The War Department will follow the trial very carefully, and will give every phase its most careful thought and attention, for the importance of the situation is thoroughly understood. To Keep Hands Off. "Absolutely no action will be taken by the War Department in Capt. Hains' case, pending his trial by the civil authorities. As regards the shooting of Annis by Capt. Hains, and his arrest, expected to-day by the War Department from Gen. Grant, who is in command of the Department of the East. "Capt. Hains is stationed at the Presidio of San Francisco, which is in the Department of the Pacific, but Gen. Grant will probably make the official report. It is not probable that Capt. Hains himself will make a formal statement to Gen. Grant, which will be transmitted along with the report. "On receiving the report, the department will carry Capt. Hains hereafter on its rolls as 'in the custody of the civil authorities of the State of New York.' Otherwise his status as an officer of the United States army will not change. "If he is released on bail, which does not seem likely, he will be at liberty to resume his station at San Francisco, and if he is not released, he will be enabled him to remain away from his station and to stay in New York to consult with his lawyers in the preparation of the evidence for trial, the department would probably grant him that leave. "As a matter of fact, I assume that he is now on leave. In the consideration of Capt. Hains' case, the War Department will scrupulously observe the principle of Anglo-Saxon law that a man is innocent until convicted by court, and therefore, until after the verdict is rendered by the jury that tries him, Capt. Hains will be an officer of the army in good standing.

Army Trial Possible.

"It is true that, pending his trial in the civil court, he can be ordered before a court-martial on some charge other than murder, such as 'conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman,' or 'conduct prejudicial to discipline,' but it is the inevitable policy of the department never to intervene or to anticipate the action of the civil authorities. "If an officer commits a crime on a military reservation the Federal government demands and insists on jurisdiction, but when he commits a crime on civil territory and is actually in the hands of the civil authorities, the government does not interfere."

HAINS BROTHERS WALK HANDCUFFED

Arraigned and Transferred to Queens County Jail.

HEARING GOES OVER A DAY

Slayers of William E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht Club, Not Represented at Arraignment, Through Error—Nonchalant, They Expect an Early Indictment—Father Calls.

New York, Aug. 16.—Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., who shot William E. Annis at the Bayside Yacht Club Saturday afternoon, and T. Jenkins Hains, writer and brother of the captain, who held the crowd back at the point of an army revolver, and who, when interference was attempted, declared that he was "running this business," were transferred to-day from the Flushing police station to the Queens County jail, at Long Island City.

Meanwhile, they had been arraigned in the Long Island City police court, but, through an error, they were not represented by counsel and nothing was done, the hearing going over until to-morrow morning and the two prisoners being held without bail. The police make no differentiation between the offenses of the two men, so patiently were they working in concert, and it is expected that the grand jury will indict both for murder in the first degree. The grand jury does not meet until the first or second week in October.

Want Early Indictment.

District Attorney Ira G. Darrin said to-night that he would ask that the indictment be handed up as soon as possible after the grand jury assembles. It is possible that the case may be brought to trial in November. Meanwhile the prisoners will remain in their present quarters, the county jail.

They were talking matters rather calmly to-day. They had spent the night in the Flushing police station and expected to be arraigned in the court in that village in the morning. Their father, Brig. Gen. Peter C. Hains, and W. C. Percy, of Manhattan, their lawyer, had been told that there was where the arraignment would be made. But the wife of Magistrate Maurice C. Connelly, who was to sit in Flushing, was sick at a summer resort, and the magistrate went to her, after requesting Magistrate Matthew J. Smith, in the Long Island City Court, to take care of both districts. So the prisoners were department into a patrol wagon and taken to the latter's court.

Capt. Hains and his brother seemed to have no desire to attempt to get away, but the detectives, taking no chances, so T. Jenkins Hains, the larger and fiercer brother, was handcuffed between Detectives Fallon and Peigel, and Capt. Hains was attached by a single bracelet to Policeman William G. Baker, who made the arrests. This token of their condition was not pleasing to the brothers, but they said nothing.

Followed by Father.

The trip in the patrol from Flushing was begun about 5:30 o'clock. Half an hour later, on the arrival of the 9:30 train from Long Island City, Capt. Hains and Lawyer Percy reached the station house, and were taken to the prisoners had been taken to Magistrate Smith's court. The father and lawyer then boarded a car and got back to Long Island City after the brief court proceedings were over and the brothers had been taken to jail.

Capt. Hains showed some evidence of nervousness in the morning. He was not at all broken in spirit, and, in fact, was most optimistic; but the nonchalance of bearing which was his at the time of his arrest had given place to what may have been something like a realization of the position he is in. His brother, on the other hand, was the same cold, self-confident man who, according to his own words, as well as according to all appearances, had "run the business" of shooting a man with an automatic gun of heavy caliber without warning and without giving the victim a chance for his life.

He did not act as if this were his first appearance in the role of fighting for his life in a court of justice; nor is it. Some seventeen years ago, when he was little

HURLED TO HIS DEATH

Motor Cyclist Killed in Presence of Five Thousand.

CRASHES INTO GRAND STAND

"Sonny" Briggs Thrown Fifty Feet in the Air When Machine Strikes, Breaking His Neck, Arm, and Leg. Machine Had Been Pronounced Defective by Paterson Officials.

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 16.—"Sonny" Briggs, the motor cyclist and former amateur light-weight champion boxer, was killed to-day in the presence of 5,000 people at the Clifton Stadium. Briggs came here to pace Jimmy Moran in a twenty-mile motor-paced race.

He was testing a machine that the Stadium officials declared to be defective just before the racing began. After making four laps of the track, Briggs was preparing to slow up when the machine wobbled and crashed into the grand stand.

Thrown High in Air.

Briggs was hurled fifty feet through the air, landing on the track. His neck, and one arm and leg were broken. Jake Derosiere, the mile champion motor cyclist, carried the unconscious victim to an automobile and broke all speed laws in a race for life to St. Joseph's Hospital, two miles away, but Briggs died before reaching the hospital.

Briggs was twenty-eight years old. He was born in Waltham, Mass., and he began his cycling career with Jimmy Moran and Dutch Waller. He acted as pacesetter in this country for Jimmy Peckmaker, the former English champion cyclist.

NIGHT RIDERS ACTIVE.

Burn Two More Barns and Make Get-away.

Murray, Ky., Aug. 16.—The night riders' situation is again becoming alarming in this county. Since the grand jury was dismissed Friday afternoon three tobacco barns have been burned.

Last night they destroyed one each for Dave and Smoot Hendricks, father and son, respectively. These men were both prosecuting witnesses in the late trials of Jake Ellis. They have been bitter in their condemnation of night riders and their operations. This is the second barn lost by Smoot Hendricks, and it is believed it is an attempt to intimidate him and his father to keep them from testifying at the next term of court.

An attempt has been made to get bloodhounds here but so far none have been obtained, as the owners say they are afraid that both themselves and their dogs would be killed.

WOMAN IS DYING OF NEGRO'S BLOWS

Mrs. Cole Choked and Robbed in St. Elmo Home.

SCOUR COUNTRY FOR CULPRIT

Left Victim Unconscious and Escaped with $95, but When She Recovered Mrs. Cole Straggled to the Home of Constable and Gave Alarm of Early Morning Attack.

As a result of being choked into insensibility and brutally beaten by a negro, who entered her home early yesterday morning and robbed her of $95, Mrs. Mary J. Cole, of St. Elmo, Alexandria County, Va., is lying dangerously near death.

Awakened by Noise.

According to the story told Constable E. J. Pennypacker by Mrs. Cole, when she ran to his house for assistance an hour after the assault, it is that she was asleep on the second floor of her home when the noise of the intruder awakened her. Being alone she became convinced with fear. The negro, realizing his presence had been discovered, lost no time in preventing her from making an outcry.

She Had Risen to a Sitting Posture.

She had risen to a sitting posture and the negro's attack bore her down, he continuing to choke her until, apparently unconscious, she loosened her hold of his arms.

Not Fearing Further Molestation.

Not fearing further molestation, the negro rapidly concluded his work of ransacking the bureau drawers. Finding nothing of much value there, he threw the woman to the floor and lifted the mattress from the bed. Here he found the money.

Goes Out for Aid.

Mrs. Cole lay in a state of semi-unconsciousness for about a quarter of an hour, and when she recovered sufficiently to realize the happening was afraid to stir, fearing the negro was still in the house.

After waiting for what seemed an interminable length of time she arose, hurriedly dressed herself, and went to the home of Constable Pennypacker, to whom she reported the affair.

After telling of the affair, Mrs. Cole returned to her home, more than a half-mile away, and collapsed just as she gained the door. She was discovered in a highly nervous condition shortly afterward, carried to her room, and the physician summoned from Alexandria.

It is understood the negro had been lurking in the vicinity for several days, evidently suspecting Mrs. Cole had money in her home. Mrs. Cole conducts a boarding-house and it was only after all of the boarders, who are mostly railroad men, had departed that he entered. Mrs. Cole said the same negro had approached her door Saturday evening and asked for something to eat. He received some cold victuals and went away.

Mrs. Cole, in describing her assault to the constable, said he was about twenty-three years old and was short and heavy set. He weighed about 150 pounds and was about five feet six inches in height. He wore black clothes and a slouch hat.

It is said he went toward the Potomac railroad yards after committing the robbery.

MOBS COWED

Rioters Flee Before Guns of Soldiers.

MANY ARRESTS MADE

Thirty Negroes in One Party Put Under Guard.

ALL STREETS ARE CLEARED

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 16.—Two riots broke out in Springfield about 6 o'clock to-night, and but for the prompt arrival of the militia at both places other dwellings would have been burned, and probably another lynching would have taken place. At Sixth and Edwards streets a crowd had gathered, composed principally of miners and foreigners, and one man was urging his hearers to attack dwellings in the black belt, several blocks east. The crowd was interrupted by a patrol, which ordered it to disperse, but instead of doing so turned and attacked the soldiers. A shot fired in the air attracted the attention of a company of the First Regiment, and fifty soldiers were rushed to the place.

Soldiers Prepare to Fire.

With rifles in readiness, the soldiers advanced upon the mob. For a time it stood its ground, but when the captain declared he would order his men to fire unless they broke up, the men turned and ran down the street. Several of the rioters were captured and taken to the county jail. There they were locked up. A crowd of about thirty negroes gathered at Eighteenth and Kansas streets about the same hour, and were threatening vengeance on the white people living in that neighborhood when they were surrounded by two companies of the Second Regiment. When they discovered they were surrounded by militiamen, the negroes gave up and surrendered.

On receiving instructions from Maj. Gen. Young the captives were taken to a vacant lot on Kansas street, where they will be kept over night. They probably will be ordered to leave the city to-morrow morning, as the officers fear if they are released to-night they may mobilize in some other part of the city and do damage to property before they can again be approached.

Streets Cleared by Troops.

Sixth and Seventh streets, the two principal streets in the city, began to become crowded early in the evening, and Gen. Young ordered the militia to drive all persons without passes from the business district. Jams and insults were hurled at the soldiers while discharging this duty, and attempts were made to circumvent the soldiers, men dodging down alleys and across streets. The streets were finally cleared.

Early in the evening an old, decrepit negro woman, hardly able to move on account of illness, painfully climbed the hill on the capitol grounds to the tents of the headquarters staff and fell fainting just outside Col. Sanborn's tent. "They'll burn me alive," she cried, piteously. "They told me I would have to leave Springfield to-day, or I'd be killed at the stake."

Capt. Skeeter helped the woman into the colonel's tent, and Col. Sanborn ordered her cared for in the arsenal.

Approximately 2,500 troops are in Springfield now, and before morning 500 "hill" men are expected to arrive. This is the total number, including staff and field officers, to nearly 3,500.

Weapons Taken from Rioters.

At Gen. Young's headquarters there are over 200 revolvers, shotguns, old Revolutionary muskets, rifles, razors, and brass knuckles taken from negroes and miners during last night by the fourth companies.

Company M, of the Fourth Regiment, stationed in the black belt, at Eighteenth and Kansas streets, stopped and searched every man found on the streets, securing over fifty weapons.

Other companies in that territory were nearly as successful.

One other death was added to the number of fatalities in the race war to-day, when Frank Delamore, who was shot during the rioting Friday night, died of his injuries at St. John's Hospital.

QUIET DURING THE DAY.

Citizens Stay Indoors and Churches Are Empty.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 16.—Following a night of false alarms, which came in rapid succession after the lynching of William Donegan, the aged negro, the militia and police by the means of scores of arrests have secured a semblance of quiet.

The better class of citizens of Springfield, still frightened by the scenes of rioting and lynching and promiscuous shooting, which, during the past three days, has changed the beautiful capital city into a veritable hell, dared not leave their homes, although the principal streets are patrolled by the National Guard.

Churches for the first time in years were practically deserted, and in many
