MUST RECALL STARS

Clubs Have Until Thursday to Exercise Option.

MANY PLAYERS ON THE LIST

Sawyer, of Des Moines, Is Only Man on Whom Washington Has Placed an Option on Records of the National Commission—Rules by Which Major League Clubs Can Draft Men.

Major league clubs having "strings" attached to minor league players must notify the national commission by Thursday next of their intention to recall these players.

The majority of these players have been loaned to the minors in order to try them out, and find if they were good enough for faster company.

If these options are not exercised by that time, the clubs now holding title to such players can sell them to any big league club, and if they are not disposed of by the time the drafting season arrives, they can be drafted by any big league manager.

By September 1 the men whose duty it is to search the minor leagues and other organizations for promising material for the big leagues must have their lists of players ready for filing with the secretary of the national baseball commission.

From that date until October 15 it will be a case of first come, first served. These two dates denote the opening and closing of the drafting season, and it is during the intervening time that National and American League clubs must file their "wants," accompanied by the required amounts of money, with the secretary of the commission.

In organized baseball there are four classes of clubs—Class A, B, C, and D. The clubs in Class A, B, C, and D are divided into two groups—the majors and the minors.

When a player in the minors is selected by a major league club, the money which must be deposited with the secretary of the national commission in connection with the notification, and unless the money accompanies the "intention" it is not considered until the club has been forthcoming from the club which desires the player.

For a man near the forty mark, Fred Clarke is a lively player. He can hit, run, and throw.

Dave Brain is ill, and did not go to St. Louis. He is expected to return to the team shortly.

Rein Ames is rounding into shape, and may be a good man for the Giants on the last lap of the pennant race.

The work of building the new stands at the Polo Grounds was begun as soon as the Giants departed for the West.

Frank Farrell says that there is going to be a big shake-up in his club, but Hal Chase is the one Highlander who won't be hit.

BALTIMORE CRICKETERS WIN.

Washington Club Is Beaten in Well-played Game.

Special to the Washington Herald. Baltimore, Md., Aug. 16.—The Washington Cricket Club was defeated by the crack Baltimore eleven at Sutton, Md., yesterday, by 105 to 33.

King, Pigott, Mosley, and Norman for the Washington aggregation, put up the best stand at the bat, while McCribbin, Hunt, Hunt, and Barr fielded their positions finely.

In the latter part of the game the Orioles put the crack bowler, Tommy Oldham, in the popping crease, and though Sousa made a stand against him for six runs, he soon succumbed in breaking down the remaining two wickets, thus winning the game for the Baltimoreans.

King, the new bowler of the Capital City eleven, proved a wonder at the bat. Score: King, 100; Mosley, 50; Norman, 30; McCribbin, 20; Hunt, 10; Barr, 10.

Chasley Adams, of Louisville, who belongs to Pittsburgh, is somewhat of a cricketer. He played in the Washington aggregation, and was one of the best batsmen in the Association when consistent work is taken into account.

Because the new owners of the Washington club of the Tri-State League are anxious to get the club into the money, they consider a reasonable figure, the club will not play there during the remainder of the season, but will finish its games in other cities.

The popularity of Ty Cobb, as evidenced by six days' loads of wedding presents, should be a bunch for all youthful ball players. The "Georgia Peach" is popular because he always gives his employers the best he has, under all circumstances. He keeps everlastingly at it and does not know the meaning of the word "shirk."

Even ball players' nerves give way now and then, like overworked piano strings. The National League race is gradually drifting along to that climax where the single victories count tremendously. As the end of the season approaches, the opportunity to regain lost ground grows less and less, so that a man to be up must be in the thick of every battle. It is not astonishing that now and then mind and body will crave rest from the task of pitiless exertion.—Pittsburg Sun.

President Pullman announces the following contracts and releases: Coach J. H. With Boston, Thomas Tucker; with Brooklyn, Thomas D. McMillan; with Cincinnati, John T. Sullivan. Releases: By New York to New Orleans, Jack O'Brien; by New York to Newark, Fred Beecher; by Pittsburgh to Louisville, Harry Swain.

Announcement of the suspension by Cincinnati of John S. Duescher is also made.

There was one man who, if he were alive, would have traveled from Cleveland to Boston to be present on "Cy" Young day. His name was George Warner. He was an honorary member of the National League in his later years, and an active supporter of the Cleveland club for many seasons. It was George W. Howe's good counsel and his kindly advice that assisted Detroit's Cy Young when he first became a National League player, and the cordial relations between the men was one of the gratifying features of the Cleveland club.

A Western writer has picked a team which, if it were possible to get together, would, in his estimation, trim anything in the line of a baseball team that could be pitted against it. Of course, it would be practically impossible to get the proposed players together. If it were possible to purchase the release of the various stars the sum would be so great that, combined with their salaries, the team would be a losing proposition. The price of the release of the players when totaled would reach more than a quarter of a million dollars. The team, with the minimum cost of the respective releases, follows: Mathewson, $1,000; Young, $1,000; Donovan, $15,000; Waddell, $10,000; Breenahan, $15,000; Kling, $10,000; Chase, $15,000; Lajoie, $15,000; Wallace, $15,000; Wagner, $15,000; Donlin, $15,000; Crawford, $15,000; Cobb, $15,000; Hofman, $15,000; total, $225,000.
