ORGANIZED LABOR SHUTS OUT PRESS

Central Union Amends Constitution for Purpose.

MEMBERS SCORE PUBLICITY

One Delegate Declares Colorado Miners Were Hounded to Trial by "Yellow" Journals—Question Was Warmly Debated, but Vote on the Proposition Was Overwhelming.

By an overwhelming majority, delegates to the Central Labor Union voted last night to make their sessions held every Monday night executive, and that hereafter only such news as the press committee may deem proper will be given to the newspapers.

This action was taken after a stormy debate lasting more than an hour, in which time the president of the central body threatened to have certain members ejected from the room if they did not keep their seats and refrain from speaking when some other member had the floor.

Charges that it was due to the publicity of the meetings that caused strikes, open-air meetings and various other hardships organized labor has suffered were loudly proclaimed on all sides.

Another member declared that certain delegates would take a more active part in the meetings of the central body if the newspaper men were kept out, basing his claim on the theory that they were timid and afraid the press would ridicule their actions and speech.

Milton Snellings, a prominent organizer and strike arbitrator, said that, without any disrespect to the newspaper men present, he could cite cases where the papers suppressed news of conditions between employer and employe that would have been to the advantage of the employe, and that they did it because they received a costly advertisement from the employer.

When the employers' association wishes to know anything about the movements of labor in the District they pick up the papers and our schemes of combating them (the employers) are laid bare, and we (the employes) go openly into the fight against men who are concealing their movements.

Threat to Eject Delegate. A delegate from the bakers' union kept matter moving along in a lively manner by attempting to argue every question a delegate on the floor spoke upon.

Without regard to the injunction order issued by Justice Gault, of the District Supreme Court several members of the central body placed Meyers Brothers, of Alexandria, in the "unfair and don't patronize list." This action was taken after a letter had been read from Meyers Brothers stating they never did and never would recognize organized labor, and that they employed and contracted with employers who employed whoever they desired.

SCORES HERDIC CABS

Unable to Find One When Wanted, Says Citizen.

CRITICISES THEIR METHODS

Herdic Company Management Indignantly Refutes Every Allegation Made by theirate Customer, and Say that Cabs Run on Schedule Time and Are Always Clean.

The long-criticized herdic cab is the recipient of another attack, delivered by an irate and indignant citizen, who arises to inform the street railway commission that he has been standing on streets where the cabs are supposed to be passing until he is tired and footsore, and unless the herdic company does something, and does it with celerity, he will do something desperate.

The letter, brought in by a perspiring carrier yesterday, indicates that the writer is desirous of universal warfare, slaughter, and carnage. He has been waiting for herdics that never passed until his patience is melting before the heat of his anger.

Have to Use Herdics. In his opening paragraph he explains that there are some 100 or more persons desirous of riding in herdic cabs.

"We live mostly in F street and East Capitol street," he resumes, referring to himself and the ninety-nine other persons, "and we have to use the herdic to transfer to Fifteenth and R streets, where our church is located."

Continuing with his letter, he criticizes in a grumbling, dissatisfied manner the whole herdic company. At those irregular and unexpected intervals, he says, when he is able to catch a herdic—going with his ninety-nine friends—he and they are always sorry that they did catch it and fall to wondering why they didn't walk.

There is an omnipresent, nonquenchable, penetrating, permeating odor about those herdic cabs that savors too much of the hope to encourage comfort. "I do hope that you are already these conditions for us before the bad weather sets in," he closes, and with a silent tear he hastily writes his name and the letter is done.

Not True, Say Proprietors. The herdic company management are grieved and pained at this martial attitude on the part of one of their patrons. They want to know if he hasn't been riding in herdics long enough to know these amiable little eccentricities are counted among their chief charms.

What does he think a herdic cab is going to smell like, demanded the management of the stables reproachfully, "a drug store?" "The herdics are washed out every morning and are kept just as cabs are kept. I don't see why a man has to object to a little herdic smell in a cab, anyhow. If he charged him a dollar instead of a nickel for use before the bad weather sets in," he closes, and with a silent tear he hastily writes his name and the letter is done.

WILLS AUNT HIS BROTHERS.

John J. Siggins Provides for Her After Bequeathing Property.

The will of John J. Siggins, dated November 2, 1897, was filed for probate yesterday. The testator, who died June 7 last, appointed his brothers, Michael and Thomas, as executors of the instrument.

To his brother, Michael Siggins, who at present lives at Cristobal, Canal Zone, Panama, the testator leaves all his savings on deposit to his credit in the savings department of the Traders National Bank. To Patrick J. Siggins, James B. Siggins, and the mother, Margaret M. Siggins, is left in equal parts all the property which may be an deposit to the testator's credit in the National Bank of Washington.

Concluding his will, the testator says: "I have not granted or bequeathed anything to my aunt, but I recommend her to my brothers' care, which needs no further commendation."

Appointing his wife, Monterey T. Herbert, his sole executrix, and leaving her his entire estate, the will of William E. Herbert, testator, who died November 1, 1898, was filed for probate yesterday. Herbert died August 9 last.

By the will of Eliza Jane Hyland, dated July 30, 1904, and who died July 30 last, the testatrix, who is the widow of William L. Hyland, a retired Episcopal clergyman, left her real property to her son, Charles Hoge Hyland. A number of cash bequests are left to the son, William Machir Hyland; the granddaughter, Harriet Elizabeth Hyland, and the daughter, Harriet Elizabeth Hyland. Charles Hoge Hyland is named as executor.

Work of Erecting Shafts at Treasury Continues. Unless there is some marked defect in the remaining months the work of erecting the shafts on the east side of the Treasury Building will be continued without interruption.

After a careful examination of the month-old shafts, it was found that the pillar now resting in place, it has been decided the shaft is not the result of some defect in the granite, but the natural coloring caused by some foreign substance in the stone.

Daniel Webster.

DESCENDED from a stern unbending race of Puritan Pioneers and Indian fighters, this colossal personality ("With eyes of power and love's own brow") was born in the village of Franklin, N. J., where his father kept a roadside tavern, and where his intellectual development began.

The principles of "Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable," so eloquently enunciated by him, in after years nerved the arm of Lincoln, flashed from the blades of Sheridan, and glinted from the bayonets of Grant.

And some of his most memorable orations were delivered in taverns and at public banquets, where the delicious juices of the barley fields gurgled cool and invitingly from a thousand bottles; filled every bumper glass, and delighted his own palate; developing within him, force and energy, intellect, eloquence, mind and soul.

AEROPLANE WILL FLY SOON

Engine Expected Here Thursday or Friday. Trial Flights of Baldwin Dirigible Continued by the Signal Corps Officers.

High winds and information from the Weather Bureau that a heavy storm would break over Fort Myer, Va., before dark yesterday, prevented further trials of the Baldwin dirigible balloon. Lieuts. Lahm, Foulis, and Seifridge were on hand to take up their post-graduate course in aeronautics, and Capt. Baldwin was waiting for them, but the weather conditions were deemed too unfavorable for flights in the balloon.

Capt. Baldwin said last night he wanted to give his pupils at least two more lessons in ballooning before leaving Washington. The lieutenants are expected to report for high-air schooling at 5 o'clock this evening.

Capt. Baldwin is planning to leave Washington the latter part of this week. By that time he will have been paid for his balloon services to the Signal Corps. He likes Washington, is especially fond of the Signal Corps officers, and will reluctantly leave the city.

Work on the Wright brothers' aeroplane is still progressing rapidly. The engine has not arrived at Fort Myer, but is expected Thursday or Friday. It is doubtful, however, that Orville Wright, who is here to prove the merits of the invention, will make any ascensions before the first of next week.

PADUCAH LOSES PROPELLER.

Unusual Accident to Gunboat in the Caribbean Sea. The gunboat Paducah, now en route from Port au Prince, Haiti, for New York, lost a propeller while one day out of Haiti, and is proceeding up the coast on her remaining screw.

A wireless dispatch was received at the Navy Department yesterday from Commander Thomas D. Griffin, of the Paducah, reporting the accident. The gunboat was then off Cape Haitiers and steaming slowly. She will probably arrive in New York the latter part of this week. The loss of a propeller is an unusual accident in the navy, although it is not serious, except in the case of single-screw vessels. After landing some condemned ammunition at New York, the Paducah will proceed to the Portsmouth (N. H.) Navy Yard for repairs.

TREASURY CLERKS WARNED. Advised Not to Pay Attention to Political Assessments. A circular letter has been issued by Beekman Winthrop, Acting Secretary of the Treasury, warning employes of the department against political assessments.

INDIANS ASK FOR INJUNCTION

Would Prevent Payment of Judgments Against Land. Also Ask Receiver for Fund of Protective Association, Amounting to Twenty Thousand Dollars.

The Indian Protective Association, by their attorneys, Berry & Minor, yesterday applied to the District Supreme Court for a writ enjoining Charles H. Treat, treasurer of the United States, from paying a judgment in the Court of Claims in favor of several persons interested in litigation growing out of the opening of Indian reservations in Washington State.

The petitioners also ask the court to appoint a receiver to take charge of the fund, amounting to $20,000, until further orders of the court. It is claimed that the Conville Indians in the State of Washington sold or ceded in the United States the north half of their reservation for the sum of $1,500,000, through certain commissioners appointed for the purpose.

Congress by an act passed in 1906 appropriated the full sum of $1,500,000 in payment for the Indian lands, and left it to the Court of Claims to determine as to the disposition of the lawyers' fees. This tribunal on April 6, 1898, allowed $60,000 as the total fee. The suit brought yesterday is for that part of the fees which were assigned in 1891 by Gordon, in the name of Maish & Gordon, to Henderson & May, and by them assigned to the Indian Protective Association. The petitioners contend that Gordon, the Maish heirs, and May deny the validity of the assignment to the Indian Protective Association.
