

MESSINA WORLD'S CHARNEL HOUSE

'Frisco Disaster Insignificant Compared to Italy's.

VIVID PICTURE OF RUINS

Sicilian City Shaken Like Terrier Shakes a Rat.

Convulsion Hurls Walls of Buildings in Every Direction, and All Indications Are that Quarter of Million Souls Were Buried in Space of Half Minute—Walking Amid Ruins Rougher Than Mountain Climbing.

By H. R. CHAMBERLAIN, Chief European correspondent of the Laffan News Bureau.

Messina, Jan. 16.—A tiny fraction of the earth's surface readjusted itself to the changing forces of nature a few weeks ago, and a few score thousands of the insignificant creatures who had built habitations thereon were buried in the ruins of their frail dwellings.

That is one point of view of the incident which has drawn the attention of the race to a spot blessed and cursed with the most lavish beauty of scene and climate that is vouchsafed to man. The more human aspect of the event which obtrudes itself upon all the senses—even in the reeking atmosphere of death as I write—is that we are in the presence of the most dramatic, the most stupendous tragedy in the history of mankind.

It is easy to register the loss of 160,000 to 250,000 lives, blotted out in the space of half a minute, and to record the fact that nine-tenths of the buildings over an area of about 7,500 square miles have been destroyed, but neither pen nor camera can give a faintly adequate impression of even the residue of utter desolation which nature has left.

I have had some experience of grave disasters and of the depicting of so-called important events, and I arrived here in the expectation that with the aid of a well-equipped photographer I might be able to give a fairly comprehensive idea of the effects of a great earthquake. I had not been half a day in Messina before I abandoned that ambition. At this writing it seems to be true in general terms that half the population within a radius of about eighteen miles from San Giovanni, which is roughly the center of the devastated region, have perished.

Death Toll May Reach 250,000.

The mayor of Messina to-day estimated the city's victims at 168,000. The figures for Reggio are approximately 28,000. There remain the heavy death rolls of Palmi, San Giovanni, Scylla, Gallina, Bagnara, Galati, and Pellaro, not to mention scores of smaller villages. The exact total will never be known, but there is little hope that it will fall below 200,000, and 250,000 will probably be nearer the truth.

It is the ineradicable custom for the Italian race to build its habitations, even in the smallest villages, crowded and huddled together. This was not true of Messina. Yet even there the streets averaged less than forty feet in width. To this, more than to the violence of the earth's convulsion, is due the phenomenal proportion of the casualties.

San Francisco thought she suffered from an earthquake of the first magnitude. It was child's play compared with this catastrophe. Messina was shaken as a terrier shakes a rat until she dropped, bleeding and lifeless, into her own dust.

I have asked many to describe what actually happened in that fateful half minute. No two impressions agree. One man said it was like being rolled inside a hoghead down a steep and bumpy hill. Some say that it was an incredibly violent and swift jangling from side to side, followed by equally rapid upheavals and depressions.

Thunder Accompanies Convulsion.

It is hardly worth while to give more versions of that bitter hour. I will refer to but one, the most intelligent that I have heard given.

Dr. Francesco Dentice, chief of the cabinet of the precept, or governor, of the province, was one of the fortunate ones. He lives in the aristocratic quarter of the town, some distance back from the sea. His house did not fall, and he and his family survived.

He happened to be awake when the first tremor came, but there was really scarcely a moment's warning before the full violence of the convulsion was upon them. A great and terrifying roar or series of subterranean thunders made more hideous the jumping, dancing, battering, flinging about which everything movable received.

He was flung from his bed, before he could get to his feet voluntarily. He called to the others, and all managed to get downstairs, while the shaking continued with ever-increasing violence. The last and worse paroxysm was finishing as they reached the street, and to this delay they probably owed their lives, for they escaped the danger from falling masonry.

I asked Dr. Dentice and many others what was the effect upon them of the black terrors of those two hours of suspense before the dawn. Did they lament, did they cheer each other with sympathy, did they abandon themselves to despair? All who were able to give an intelligent account of that dreadful time of waiting said the same thing:

"We did nothing; we stood silent in the rain, dull, dazed, half-stuporized."

Naples, 200 miles away, was already one of the hospitals of the disasters, when I arrived there on Friday. The city was in mourning. Half the population seemed to be in the street watching with evident grief and sympathy the stretcher-laden automobiles, which lashed back and forth bearing the injured from the wharf to various hospitals, permanent and temporary.

We went ashore at Messina, landing on a half sunken stone quay, depressed and continued on Page 10, Column 4.

FINES GIRL FOR FLIRTING.

Roonoke Judge Assesses Woman $10—Flirted from Window. Special to The Washington Herald. Roonoke, Va., Jan. 16.—Mayor Joel H. Cutching's reform, which was inaugurated a week ago when he put the "lid" on Roonoke, continues unabated. In police court to-day Judge John Randolph Bryan fined Miss Nannie Crook, a handsome young woman, $10 for flirting from the window of her home, in Jefferson street, with a young man standing on a near-by corner. This is the first time a person has been fined here for flirting.

HELD FOR BRIBERY.

Two Men Accused in Pittsburgh Bank Wrecking Scandal. Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 16.—At a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner W. T. Lindsay late to-day George W. Worley, brother-in-law of J. B. F. Rinehart, convicted bank wrecker, and James L. Smith, a wealthy brewer, of Waynesburg, were held for the grand jury on the charge of trying to approach Charles A. Sec. one of the talemans on the panel which returned a verdict of guilty against Rinehart last Friday. Evidence was introduced in an attempt to show that Rinehart was engineering the scheme to bring about a disagreement of the jury, and Prosecutor Dinkle intimated that the quick action of Secret Service men in causing the arrest of the two men alleged to be implicated furnished the reason for Rinehart's sudden change of front and expressed desire to have sentence imposed immediately after the verdict was rendered.

CHENEY BODIES COMING HOME

Funeral of Consul and Wife Will Be in New Haven.

Caskets with Remains of Former Consul and Wife on Steamship Venezia.

Naples, Jan. 16.—The bodies of Arthur S. Cheney, American consul to Messina, and his wife, who died in the earthquake, were started for New York this evening aboard the Venezia, of the Faber Line. They will be taken to the Cheney's former home at New Haven for burial.

The bodies were in a bad state of decomposition when found by sailors from the battle ship yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Cheney's body was recognized only by her wedding ring and jacket.

Death certificates came to them instantly, for the bodies were found in bed, from which they had not had time to escape before being crushed by the falling walls.

SHOCKS STILL CONTINUE.

Tremors at Messina Alarm Inhabitants—Supplies for Refugees.

Rome, Jan. 16.—Shocks continued at Messina all night. There was one rather violent tremor this morning which lasted several seconds. The American relief ship Bayern landed at Palermo to-day with her remaining provisions and stores. Commander Belknap purchased all the available mattresses from the North German Lloyd Steamship Company and gave them to the hospitals.

The Duke of the Abruzzi left Turin to-day for Paris and London, where he will make the final arrangements for his Himalayan expedition.

GOVERNMENT NOTIFIED.

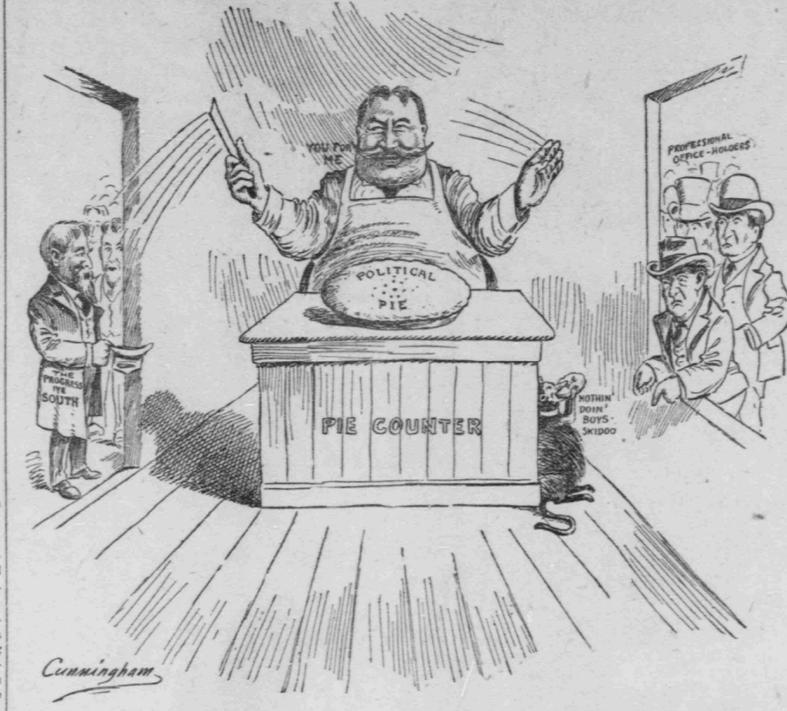

Admiral Sperry Cables News of Recovery of Cheney Bodies.

Admiral Sperry, commanding the Atlantic battle-ship fleet, notified the Navy Department yesterday that the bodies of Dr. Arthur S. Cheney, American consul at Messina, and his wife, who lost their lives in the recent earthquake, had been found in the ruins of the consulate. The battle ship Illinois, of the fleet, was sent to Messina to recover the bodies, and a party of bluejackets was sent ashore to remove the debris from the consulate. The supply ship Culgoa (ok th) bodies to Naples yesterday, where arrangements will be made to ship the remains to New Haven, Dr. Cheney's former home.

HOGAN WEARS A SMILE.

Engineer Dines with Taft, and 'It's Big Bill for Him.' Atlanta, Jan. 15.—Engineer Joe Hogan, of the Georgia Railroad, is wearing a broad smile because he was the special dinner guest of President-elect Taft. Hogan handled the throttle of the engine which brought Taft from Augusta to Atlanta at an average speed of sixty-four seconds, the run of 171 miles being made in 183 minutes. So impressed was Mr. Taft by the speed and the smoothness with which the run was made that at Social Circle, where a brief stop was made, he had Engineer Hogan and Fireman Watson to dine with him in his private car. "I have been a Democrat," says Hogan, "but it's big Bill for me now."

ADVISES TEACHERS AGAINST WEDLOCK

Taft Says Women Educators Have High Mission

HEAPS PRAISE ON OLD MAIDS

President-elect Declares that Secret of Domestic Infelicity Is that Marriage Is Thought to Be Essential. Tells College Boys of His Experience at Yale—Talks of Ministry.

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 16.—Mr. Taft thinks that most of the unhappy marriages in this world are due to a mistaken notion on the part of young women that they must get husbands in order to make their lives successful. Mr. Taft expressed this opinion in a speech before the Normal School girls at Athens this afternoon. He was speaking of the probability of competent women teachers in the future commanding equal pay with men.

"I hope," said Mr. Taft, "that this progress will be as rapid as possible for the benefit of you all, but, whatever happens, you may always have the satisfaction of knowing that while there are higher professions, there is no profession in which self-sacrifice is manifested more clearly and none in which more good can be done than that of a teacher.

Not Necessary. "I congratulate you on beginning your life in that way and I hope that you will not regard matrimony as necessary. I think that the secret of most domestic infelicity is that young women think that unless they are married their lives are not a success. As a matter of fact, I think the reverse is exactly true.

Look into your own lives and your families. Take some aunt of yours, who never married. What a sweet, self-sacrificing, disinterested, and lovely character she has grown to be, 70 and 80 years of age, and think what beneficence shall spread over all the family circle in which she lives, and then tell me she would have been better off if she had been married. I don't believe it."

The Central school girls received Mr. Taft's expression with every show of sympathy and approval.

Regard for Teachers. In this little informal address Mr. Taft stressed his regard for the American teacher, further by speaking of his brother, Horace D. Taft, who is at the head of a boys' preparatory school at Waterbury, Conn., and who gave up the practice of law to instruct the youths of the country.

Mr. Taft delivered four other speeches in the course of the day. Two were before students at the Georgia School of Technology, in this city, and the University of Georgia, in Athens.

Mr. Taft spoke twice to negro audiences. Mr. Taft's reception at Georgia's Historical State University was wet. The President-elect went down to Athens from this city on a special train. It was raining hard when he left, and the down-pour continued while he was in Athens.

Hall Is on Fire. The Georgia University meeting was enlivened when the hall took fire just as Mr. Taft was entering it. Sparks began to fall from a stovepipe hole in the ceiling. The academy procession, including Mr. Taft, halted outside, while the students and the Athens firemen carried in a ladder and started to fight the blaze through a scuttle hole.

About 60 persons were in the hall. The fire was put out, however, without the audience leaving.

Mr. Taft told the college boys what he felt when he was a student at Yale. "When I look back to that period in life," he said, "it seems to me that we felt that Daniel Webster did not have any great advantage over us in matters of statesmanship or anything. Certainly, when we became seniors we knew a good deal more than our fathers did, and it took the subsequent year after you had stepped down and out of the great dignity of that last year in college to convince you that you were not altogether indispensable to the growth of civilization in this country.

"At least, if the world needed you, and was yearning for you, the world was able to conceal it."

Mr. Taft told the college boys further that he never came under the influence of an alcoholic atmosphere without feeling uplifted.

Mr. Taft spoke of the professions. Of the ministry he said: "I think during the last twenty-five or

SONS OF IRELAND HONOR THEIR RACE

Banquet Given by American-Irish Historical Society.

DISTINGUISHED MEN SPEAKERS

Dr. Quinlan Tells of Effort to Vindicate Men of Irish Blood Who Have Helped Make American History. Justice White and Senators and Congressmen Make Addresses.

The Irish being unconventional, a toast was drunk to Theodore Roosevelt amid thunderous cheers, the exploits of the pioneer Dutch in the rock-bound village of Manhattan were strongly approved, and Mr. "Dooley" Dunne was extended both indorsement and sympathy for removing his effects from Chicago to Broadway.

Had a Strenuous Day. As the dinner closed after a strenuous day for the Historical Society, including a visit to the White House, there was a great deal of Irish sparkle and wit and merriment unworked. New York contributed the largest delegation, but Providence, Boston, and other near-by suburbs contributed their quota. There were more than 200 persons gathered in this Capital to delve into ancient records and "give the Irishman his rightful place in American history, which has been so long withheld from him."

They are just beginning to discover what a glorious part the American Irishman has to play in history.

There were many distinguished sons of Erin present. William Sulzer, Representative of New York, was at the speaker's table; also Senators Thomas H. Carter, of Montana, and R. J. Gamble, of South Dakota; John D. Cullinan, of New York; Edward D. White, Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; Victor J. Dowling, Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York; Michael T. Maloney, former attorney general of Illinois; Humphrey O'Sullivan, of New York; Rear Admiral John McGowan, former president general of the society; Lawrence O. Murray, treasurer general, and others.

A splendid send-off was given the round of speech-making by Dr. Francis J. Quinlan, president general of the society. Dr. Quinlan had just been re-elected to his office at the afternoon session, along with the other officers, who are Patrick T. Barry, of Illinois, vice president general; Michael F. Dooley, of Rhode Island, treasurer general; Thomas Z. Lee, of Rhode Island, secretary general; Thomas B. Laffey, of New York, librarian and archivist.

An Army of Truth. "We are employing the army of historic truth in vindicating to men of Irish blood that place in American history of which they have been defrauded, either willfully or through ignorance," declared Dr. Quinlan, emphatically. "We smile at the memory now, but the ignorant and the vulgar not so very long ago had but two well-defined ideas about Irishmen. One was that they were red whiskers and carried hobs; the other that they loved to fight."

"As the latter, we are not I fear, in a position to deny it without some reserve. It may, however, be fairly claimed that this society has already done much to proclaim its sympathy with the arts of peace in electing a member of my profession to be the immediate successor of such a man as Admiral McGowan. (Cheers and cries of "Hear! Hear!")

"It has been said that an Irishman would rather fight another Irishman than a man of an alien race, simply because he recognizes in an antagonist of his own blood the most promising opportunity of an exciting battle. But it has been borne in upon me how easily a public man's peaceful achievements may be eclipsed by his military

DELIVING INTO BOOKS.

District Attorney Sims Looking for Evidence Against Packers.

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 16.—United States Attorney Sims will spend the fourth Sunday of the investigation into the suspected beef trust, as he has his preceding rest days, by delving into the freight bills of Morris & Co., in the hope of discovering evidence of an alleged unlawful combination. Up to the present the government has failed to find indictable evidence.

After the sweeping search of Morris & Co.'s books for evidence of unlawful criminal freight transactions, unless the quest is successful, another company's records will be searched. Before determining what corporation shall be next subjected to inquiry Sims will confer with the Attorney General. The grand jury will resume work Monday.

Hughes Joins Mystique Krewe. Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Gov. Charles E. Hughes was one of 30 people who rode the goat of the Mystique Krewe of Kappa Noo-to-night. The governor arrived in this city this afternoon and addressed a meeting of Syracuse University students. In the evening he was initiated, and a banquet was tendered him at the Albemarle by the Krewe.

AMERICAN FLEET PRAISED.

Admiration for Ships and Men Unstinted in French Press. Paris, Jan. 16.—Admiration of the American battle-ship fleet is unstinted in the French press. Its arrival in European waters in the same week as the news of the death of Admiral Rojestvensky in St. Petersburg leads to many contrasts between the two voyages which for the part of the way at least covered much the same water, Rojestvensky with a heterogeneous collection of ships and the American admiral with a homogeneous fleet.

French writers insist on two points, the impossibility of France's navy undertaking such a feat and the difference between the conditions at the start and at the end of the voyage. M. Berlin, who became the head of the French ministry of marine, says it is a veritable feat that the Americans have accomplished. Commercial fleets are made for long voyages; war ships are not. "That is why," says M. Berlin, "we must admire unreservedly the prowess shown by the American navy."

WILL SUE SENATOR TILLMAN.

Bryan R. Dorr Alleges Malicious Libel and Claims $100,000. Special to The Washington Herald. Portland, Ore., Jan. 16.—Bryan R. Dorr, whose use of Senator Tillman's name in advertising an alleged fraudulent scheme to acquire land, and in the fight between Ureidist Roosevelt and the Senator, has arranged "to begin suit against the South Carolinian for $100,000 damages. He alleges malicious libel.

Dorr says a law firm in St. Paul has undertaken to prosecute his case. The lawyers advise Dorr that a Senator is no more exempt than any other person in such cases. Senator Tillman caused a fraud order to be issued prohibiting Dorr from use of the mails when he discovered the use of his name. The order was revoked soon after President Roosevelt began his investigation.

FEUD LEADS TO THREE DEATHS. Iowa Man Kills Neighbor, Wife, and Then Himself. Davis City, Iowa, Jan. 16.—An old grudge between John Brooks and the family of Butler Thompson at Pleasanton, south of here, was wiped out this afternoon, and as a result three persons are dead and one is dying.

Brooks went to the Thompson home armed with a repeating rifle, and after killing Butler Thompson and his wife and mortally wounding Howard Thompson, Butler's brother, he placed the rifle to his own head and blew out his brains. Just before he committed suicide, Brooks remarked to Howard Thompson, who lay on the floor at his feet, "at last I am even with your family."

CRUISER'S STATUS PECULIAR

Commander Marsh to Haul Down Flag on Sunken Ship.

Captain of Ill-fated Yankee Gets Orders to Put Vessel Out of Commission.

Boston, Jan. 16.—Commander Charles C. Marsh, who was this week reduced fifteen numbers for negligence in allowing the cruiser Yankee to run aground on Hen and Chickens Shoal, Buzzards Bay, is at the navy yard, preparing to put that ship out of commission. The status of the cruiser in the navy is said to be one of the most peculiar ever known to naval officers.

The ship was grounded on September 23, and remained fast on the rocks for several weeks, but the Navy Department still has kept the ship technically in commission, that is, she has been retained in the active list for nearly four months since becoming entirely out of doing service of any sort.

Now comes the order from Washington to put the ship out of commission, and in order to go through the form, Commander Marsh, who still is retained in command of the unofficer and sailerless sunken ship, must go to her and read his order.

He said to-day that he was in doubt until he got to the scene just how he would proceed, whether he would board the ship and read the orders while standing on the bridge, which is above water, or go through the formality on the deck of one of the rescue vessels lying near at hand.

Whatever takes place the ceremony prescribed by regulations will be most unusual.

FAREWELL TO RADCLIFFE.

New York, Jan. 15.—President Eliot, of Harvard, made a farewell talk to the graduates of Radcliffe College this afternoon at Delmonico's. He was the guest of honor of the girls of Radcliffe at luncheon. They entertained Richard Watson Gilder and President Radcliffe, of the college, also.

Before the luncheon the alumnae club held a reception for President Eliot, and he was deluged with good wishes. He retired from the presidency of Harvard next March.

President Eliot made a brief talk, which was preceded by a short speech by President Radcliffe.

President Eliot said that Radcliffe and its affairs had always been "of the greatest interest to him, and he was gratified to know that the college was on so firm a footing.

SHOPS CONTINUE CLOSED.

Both Sides Resting on Their Oars in the Hatters' Strike. New York, Jan. 16.—There was a general understanding in this and other cities affected by the strike of the hatters to-day that until the executive committee of the National Hat Manufacturers' Association meets to-morrow evening at the Knickerbocker Hotel, and decides upon a plan of action, no steps will be taken to open the shops.

The tie-up, it is admitted, is practically complete and this is the result of the unanimity with which the order of the association to discontinue the union label was obeyed.

Meantime, the officers of the union will make no further move, it was learned, until they know the next move of the manufacturers.

FRIGHTFUL CRASH ON RIO GRANDE

Twenty-three Bodies Taken from Debris of Wreck.

CONFUSION AT THE SCENE

Road Torn Up for Hundreds of Feet, Ties Ripped Up, and Cars Smashed to Bits—Graphic Story Told by Fireman—Little Girl Only One Found Alive in the Day Coach. Passengers Fight Against Flames.

Glenwood Springs, Col., Jan. 16.—Twenty-three bodies had been taken from the debris of the frightful wreck on the Rio Grande Railroad near Dotsero when darkness fell to-night.

Forty-five injured persons have been brought here. A number of men who had been slightly hurt remained on the scene to aid the train crew in the work of recovering the bodies, four more of which at least are thought to be in the wreckage.

Owing to the confusion at the scene of the accident and the reticence of the officials it has been difficult to get at the exact figures, but this estimate, based on reports from Dotsero, are thought to be reliable.
