Walter Johnson was the insurmountable barrier to Boston in the first game of the double-header yesterday, and Arrelanes had something that resembled the Nationals' goat in the second. The score of the opener was Nationals, 2; Boston, 1, and in the final battle, Boston, 3; Washington, 2.

Both teams played great ball all of the time, and the big crowd was kept on tenterhooks throughout. The honorable Silk O'Loughlin got himself in bad again on two different occasions, and our esteemed Vice President, Mr. Sherman, went so far as to leave the grand stand for a visit to the Washington bench, between innings, to find out why Mr. O'Loughlin called Conroy out at home in the eighth inning of the first game.

Johnson was master of the situation at all times during the first encounter. He allowed but four scattered hits, and was given perfect support. The home folks got to Southpaw Wolter in the first and eighth innings, butting out enough runs to win.

Groom in Trouble. Groom, the lanky twirler, assigned for slab duty in the second game, was touched up freely for five innings, but managed to keep the hits fairly well scattered. In the sixth he got into hot water and, with nobody out and the bases full, Manager Joe decided that Bob needed a rest, and Gray was led like a lamb to the slaughter. "Dolly" was the victim of circumstances, for two punky infield hits scored two runs and won the game for the Bunker Hill crowd.

The Nationals had several chances to tie the score, but missed out for lack of a hit, as Arrelanes had the goods when it came to the pinches.

The brilliant fielding of McBride and Wagner, two sensational one-hand stops by Capt. Jiggs Donohue, and Unglaub's clever base running proved the features of the double.

First Game. Lefty Wolter was Fred Lake's choice, and the little chap pitched better ball than the score shows. Washington drew first blood in the opening inning. Milan did on a grounder to Stahl, but Conroy singled cleanly to left and immediately stole second. Unglaub fanned, Delehanly cracked out a beauty over Lord's head, and Conroy came home.

From the first until the eighth both teams were held harmless. Only Wolter's steady pitching and good support saved the visitors from a worse defeat, as the home team had men on the bases in the fourth and sixth innings.

In the first of the eighth Boston tied the score. Carrigan led off with a smashing two-bagger to center, and right here Fred Lake made one of his crazy moves, by substituting Jack Thoney on the base for the ponderous Carrigan. Thoney went to third on Wolter's sacrifice, and scored a minute later on McConnell's grounder to Johnson, sliding home under Donohue's return to Street.

The home team grabbed the game in the second half of this inning. Milan led off with a hit, Conroy walked, and Unglaub, who was substituted for Wolter, struck ball through Wagner. Milan came home, owing to Hooper's weird throw to the plate, the hit hitting the grand stand.

Brave heroes, Spencer hit to Niles and Conroy crossed the rubber, but Umpire O'Loughlin declared him out, claiming that he did not go back to third when the outfield fly was caught, Johnson threw the victory in order in the ninth, and the game was over.

Second Game. Arrelanes, for Boston, was just about as effective as was Johnson in the first struggle. For three innings the Nationals failed to collect anything that resembled a hit.

Groom was in tight places from the start, and was lucky to escape trouble in the run line. Snappy work by the home defense held the Boston sluggers safe until the fourth, when, after Hooper had gone, Gessler singled, after Hooper had added another, and Wagner's safe rap scored Gessler. Niles was hit by a pitched ball, filling the bases. Lucky for our brave heroes, Spencer hit into a double play. Score, Washington, 2; Boston, 1.

Cantillon's crew bumped Arrelanes hard in their half of the fourth, when two runs crossed the plate. Conroy walked, and scored on Unglaub's two bagger to right. The best piece of base running during the afternoon showed right here, when Unglaub went all the way from second to home on Delehanly's slow grounder to Lord, Jake Stahl making a dashy throw to Spencer, while Unglaub slid safely under. Later in the inning, McBride got as far as third and Lelivelt to second, but Street fanned when a hit would have won the game.

Groom's finish came in the sixth, when he threw to Spencer, while Unglaub slid safely under. Later in the inning, McBride got as far as third and Lelivelt to second, but Street fanned when a hit would have won the game.

Cooling—and Economical

Our new "Unity" Serge at $15. We are still harping on it—not because there is any lack of demand for these splendid suits, but because we want more men to know about them.

Loose, cool, comfortable, and GUARANTEED non-shrinkable and fadeless.

Other Serges in many, many styles, at $18, $20, and $25.

Also all the other kinds of suits that bring comfort on the hottest days. No burden to wear—no burden to pay for.

Some very special values for the boys to-day.

Head-to-Foot Outfitters "Ninth and the Avenue."

"Mac" between the bugs. He was finally run down and tagged by Street.

Carrigan batted for Niles in the sixth, and his best effort was a liner that McBride gobbled up in time to throw out Wagner at second. Wagner kept on running and collided with "Cripple" Delehanly, thus interfering with the manipulation of a double play. McBride and several others claimed interference, but Ump O'Loughlin couldn't see things that way. The Red Sox proceeded, and when the dust cleared had scored two runs and clinched the game.

BROWNS BEATEN AGAIN. Lose Seventh Consecutive Game to the Detroit Tigers.

Detroit, June 25.—Detroit battered Graham hard in the sixth and eighth innings and again defeated St. Louis in a game that was featured by its many brilliant plays on both sides. Summers was hit hard throughout the game, but fast fielding saved him. Criss, of the Browns, displaced his thumb in practice and was out of the game for a week. Score: Detroit, 7; St. Louis, 2.

McQuillan is Invincible. His Masterly Twirling Gives the Phillies Easy Victory Over Doves.

Boston, June 25.—Only three of the locals were able to hit McQuillan safely to-day, while Ferguson proved easy for the visitors, and they scored a shut-out. Score: Boston, 0; Philadelphia, 0.

YANKEES ENJOY SWAIFEST. Fall on Athletic Pitcher's Delivery for Fifteen Bingles.

Philadelphia, June 25.—The Yankees defeated the Athletics to-day in good shape. They walloped the ball all over the lot, and fairly cleaned up the field with the elephants by the score of 12 to 2. Score: Philadelphia, 12; Athletics, 2.

Commerce and Labor and Aggies Go Ten Innings.

BOTH TEAMS PERFORM WELL

Doyle and Priest, for the Farmers, and Brunner, for the Laborites, Keep Crowd in an Uproar by Their Good Playing—Newberry Pitches in Grand Form and Should Have Won.

In one of the best games of the season, on the White Lot yesterday, the Agriculture and Commerce and Labor teams played a ten-inning tie, resulting in a final score of 3 to 3. Both teams were edge during the entire game, and sharp fielding marked the contest, both infielders being on their toes. Doyle and Priest, for the Farmers, and Brunner, for Commerce and Labor, kept the crowd busy applauding their good fielding.

Newberry, on the slab for the Farmers, was in grand form, and would have won his game but for errors, as he allowed but five hits, striking out six, and passing one. Knowing himself to be the only pitcher on the team in form, he sacrificed his college exercises to pitch this game, showing an interest in his team that is rarely shown in amateur circles.

"Smoker" Balzer pitched a good game for Commerce and Labor, striking out thirteen and passing four, but was touched up for nine hits.

Bryan and Murphy's batting was the features of the game, Murphy bringing home the Aggies' runs by timely swats. Score: Agriculture, 3; Commerce and Labor, 3.

Commerce and Labor, 2; Agriculture, 2. Earned runs—Agriculture, 1; Commerce and Labor, 2. First base—Agriculture, 1; Commerce and Labor, 2. Struck out—By Newberry, 6; by Balzer, 4. Peck Blanks Northwest Squad 4 to 0 in Good Contest.

Peck shut Hamilton out yesterday in the Sunday School League, 4 to 0. Greer twirled a great game for the winners. Allowing only four scattered singles and fanning twelve batsmen, Peck was touched up for ten safe drives, which, together with a number of costly errors, gave Peck their four runs.

Riddie starred at the bat, with a double and two singles in four trips to the plate. Sheffer made two of the four hits secured by the losers. Score: Peck, 4; Hamilton, 0.

Score: Manhattan, 11; Advent, 2.

Station Barely Escapes Defeat at Hands of Southern Railway.

The Union Station squad, which to date has not lost a game in the Railroad Y. M. C. A. League, narrowly escaped being beaten by the Southern Railway team yesterday. With the score standing 1 to 0 in favor of the Station crew, Umpire Flynn made the teams play another inning, but called the contest before Station had got their last bats, the Southern team having scored two runs and taken the lead in their half of that round. The manager of the Southern Railway team claims that the umpire awarded the game to his team because the Station boys refused to play any more, but the matter will be thrashed out fully at a league meeting.
