Boston and Washington fought it out to the end in the Nationals' ball yard yesterday afternoon, the visitors winning out in the final inning after having nearly clinched the game in the early sessions.

It was the Nationals' final chance before a trip of a month's duration, and every player tried his best to help cope with the game. After smiling genially on them in the late rounds of the game, Dame Fortune frowned severely at the finish and allowed their opponents the tantalizing lead of a single tally.

For six innings the game was slow and uninteresting, without a single feature to create excitement. But when trouble came, it arrived with a rush. With the score 5 to 2 against them in the eighth session, the Nationals pounced upon Pitcher Wood, who up to this time was a complete quip, driving him to the timbers and finishing up on one Mr. Steele for the necessary runs to even up matters.

Johnson a Failure. At this juncture Capt. Donohue, who held the reins in the absence of Manager Cantillon, saw a chance to clinch the game, and sent the redoubtable Walter Johnson to save the day.

There are times when the Idaho phenomenon fails to deliver the goods and yesterday was one of them. The visitors managed to bunch a couple of bingles for the necessary tally, and a sadly disappointed crowd made for the gates.

Nick Altrick informed the manager before the game that he felt as if he could trim the bunch that mangled his shoots last Thursday. He gained his point and was sent to the mound to turn the trick.

He failed, but again proved that he is good for many more turns in the box. The visitors managed to hit him freely, but most of the bingles were of the homeless variety. The handsome slabman was forced to contend with one piece of hard luck after the other. To clap the climax, he was hurt running to the initial sack in the seventh inning by colliding with Jake Stahl's outstretched hand. In the eighth he retired in favor of Bob Groom without loss of confidence, but greatly discouraged.

For six innings, Wood, who was opposed to him, pitched a clean ball and posed to him, pitched a couple of bingles, one of which was decidedly scratchy. In the seventh, he showed the effects of a recent surgical operation, and was forced to retire. Steele, who stepped in during a part of an inning, was given a dizzy reception, a sacrifice fly and a timely bingle resulting in two runs for the Nationals.

Players Are Injured. Players Gessler, of the Boston club, and Conroy, of Washington, were slightly injured. In going after Delehanty's long drive in the first inning, the Boston player ran into the right field bleachers, injuring his hand to such an extent that he was forced to retire.

In the eighth inning, Conroy was struck on the head by a ball thrown wildly by Street in an attempt to catch a runner. The game was delayed for several minutes while the wound was dressed.

Locals Score First. Washington scored first, tallying one in the opening inning. Milan worked Wood for a base. Conroy laid down a neat sacrifice. Unglaub forced Milan at third. Delehanty, the next, the face Pitcher Wood, connected with a straight one for a long drive to the left field bleachers, scoring Unglaub.

The visitors came back strong in the second. Thoney grounded out to McBride. Stahl contributed the visitors' first hit, a Texas League, over second. Wagner connected for a long fly to deep left, which Levitt misjudged. Stahl scored and Wagner reached third.

After a short consultation, Messrs. Altrick and Street decided to pitch. Spencer, who has been swatting the ball for keeps, and to take a chance on Piche Wood. He furnished the goods in the nature of a teaser which wended its course toward shortfield. Wagner crossed the pan with the second tally of the inning.

The Red Sox scored again in the fourth on successive hits by Wagner and Spencer.

Both teams went out in quick order until the seventh, when Wood's unexpected ascension resulted in another for the locals. Levitt's double and Street's timely single brought this one. The Nationals had a chance to score another when Altrick contributed a bingle. However, Milan's best effort was a sod cutter to McConnell.

Boston added two more in the eighth, while Washington went one better. For the Red Sox, Hooper was passed, and advanced to second on Thoney's sacrifice, and reached third on Stahl's infield hit. Hooper scored on Wagner's third contribution in the bingle line, Stahl contributing three. Niles' sacrifice fly sent Stahl over the plate.

Nationals Tie the Score. In the Nationals' half of the inning Conroy singled, reached second on Unglaub's out to short, and scored on Delehanty's hit to right. Donohue followed with a drive that bounded over first. At this point Wood sounded the signal of distress, and Steele was sent to stop the onslaught. He, too, was unequal to the occasion. Delehanty scored on McConnell's sacrifice fly to right, and Donohue followed suit on Levitt's lucky bingle over second. Levitt attempted to steal second and was nabbed for the third out. Lord's two-bagger, followed by Hooper's single, furnished the winning tally for the

SIGNS NEW TWIRLER

Manager Cantillon Purchases Hovlik, of Peoria, Ill.

HAS AN EXCELLENT RECORD

Credited with Twelve Wins and One Draw Out of Seventeen Games Pitched—Has a Fielding Average of .987 and a Batting Mark of .245, a Very Giant in Stature.

Before leaving for New York last evening, Manager Cantillon announced that he had purchased the release of Pitcher Hovlik, a highly-touted player of the Peoria team of the Three I League.

Hovlik was recommended to the local manager by Jim Johnson, the young outfielder who accompanied the team on the Southern trip last spring. Johnson is loud in his praise of the pitcher, and claims that he will make good without doubt.

A Giant in Stature. Hovlik, two years since, was pitching corner-lot ball in Iowa. He is a giant in stature, calm, and seemingly devoid of all feeling. He is a master of the spit-ball. He is willing to work at all times, and always ready on short notice to step into the box with a bewildering array of shots and floats.

Three weeks ago he finished the last four innings of a game, pitched the first game of a double-header the following day, and went into the second game in the third inning, finishing off a fifteen-inning battle by getting a double in the fifteenth. In another game which is not credited to his record, he was given ten assists without a break, but was replaced in the seventh, after being hurt slightly during the second.

Has Good Record. He is a Bohemian first played professional ball with the Clinton Three-I team last season. When their franchise was sold to Davenport his release was offered and Peoria signed him. So far this season he has worked in seventeen games, to credit with twelve wins and one draw, beside the many games which he has entered during the final innings, owing to his ability with the willow.

His official fielding record for the season to date is .987 and his batting is .245. He is not a mixer and is consequently not overly popular with the fans except when a hit is needed or a batter is to be retired. He will join the locals in New York to-day.

Interior Escapes Shut-out by Nery Base Running. BARNHART CHIEF PILFERER

Fast Interior Player Steals Second Base Four Times and Establishes New Record—Men Hit the Ball Hard, but at Inopportune Moments. Whitney Gets His Bumps.

Interior escaped a shut-out yesterday through the medium of a startling triple steal in the first inning, but after that they were never able to get near the counting block, and were defeated by Commerce and Labor, 5 to 1.

The Interior boys are certainly the champion pilferers of the league, for in addition to the triple crime, Barnhart broke the league record by stealing the second cushion four times; in fact, every time he got on he managed to reach second or third with one or more down, but with the exception of the first inning, when he stole home, he was left stranded there, the following batters being unable to get the ball out of the diamond. Whitney, the Eastern High School recruit, started the game, but he was nervous, and Balzer was substituted, and was in such form that after the Laborites had a commanding lead he exchanged places with "Clown" Handlose, for a more important game. Interior, as usual, led in batting, but as most of their hits came when there were two out they were never dangerous. Hart pitched a good game in the matter of hits and strike-outs, but he was too liberal with his passes, and his defeat, at the hands of Commerce and Labor, was a sensational catch of the latter having to go about ten feet in the air to nab a liner and being knocked flat by the force of it when he did reach the ball. Julien received well for the losers and banded out two clean hits. Score: INTERIOR, R. H. O. A. E. Commerce and Labor, R. H. O. A. E.
