

WOODILL JURORS REPLY TO CENSURE

Four Members of Body Represent Prosecutor's Attitude.

CRITICISE ACTION OF TURNER

Hold that State's Attorney by Calling Up McDaniel Gave Eastman an Opportunity to Escape with Small Boat in Harris Creek—Assailed Man Blames Political Enemies.

St. Michaels, Md., June 30.—Four members of the jury which originally passed upon the manner of the death of Mrs. Edith May Woodill, and which body was severely censured by State's Attorney Turner for failure to bring in what was considered by the prosecutor as a proper verdict, have drawn up a reply to what they term were his caustic remarks, and in return they censure the State's attorney for his conduct in the case.

This paper, which was drawn up today, has been signed by Alexander Radcliffe, foreman of the jury, and three others. The paper which will be forwarded to the State's attorney is, in part, as follows:

"The State's attorney had firmly fixed in mind the character of the verdict he considered would be the only one which the jury could return; this before he had heard the entire evidence and before the examination of the witnesses at the inquest by Mr. Turner was conducted in an indifferent and negative manner.

Say Turner Lost His Head. "In reply to his caustic criticism of the action of the posse in endeavoring to arrest Eastman, we hold that had Mr. Turner not lost his head by calling up McDaniel by phone on the Wednesday evening before Deputy Sheriffs Mortimer and Hamilton had time to reach that place that Eastman would not have escaped with any boat in Harris Creek."

State's Attorney Turner was not in McDaniel to-day, but he stated yesterday before he left that he expected that some of his political enemies would seize upon this affair as a means of hammering him. He further stated that politics was the incentive for the disagreement among the jurymen.

JEWELRY IS IDENTIFIED.

Eastman Pawned Rings and Pin Belonging to Mrs. Woodill.

Baltimore, Md., June 30.—Col. Charles H. Thompson, foster-father of Mrs. Edith May Thompson Woodill, who was murdered on the Eastern Shore by Robert E. Eastman, this morning absolutely identified the jewelry held by Benjamin & Co., and which were pawned on Tuesday of last week by Eastman, as having been worn by Mrs. Woodill when she left home for the last time.

After a short conference with the marshal and Capt. Humphrey, Col. Thompson, accompanied by Sergt. Day, of the plainclothes force, went to the pawn broker's office and was shown the jewelry pawned by Eastman.

Husband Can Recover. He identified both rings and the breast-pin, and then took up the matter of the recovery of the jewelry with the pawn broker. As the matter now is, Col. Thompson has no standing in law regarding the jewelry, and he understands this perfectly. He said he expected Mr. Woodfill to come East shortly, and the matter would then be taken up. In the event Mr. Woodfill does not come East, the matter will be placed in the hands of a local attorney.

Benjamin & Co. have agreed to surrender the jewelry without recourse to a suit, if ordered to do so by Marshal Farnam. The company will ask in return only $200, the sum for which the jewelry was pledged. It is not thought there will be any hitch whatever regarding the turning of the jewels over to Mr. Woodfill.

Denies Love Letter. "My daughter never wrote that letter to Eastman," is the statement made by Col. Charles H. Thompson, foster-father of Mrs. Woodill, to-day when asked about the love letter found under the bungalow.

"Nothing could convince me that she wrote it. It does not sound like her. It reads as though it were copied out of a book. Only the testimony of experts would make me consider the possibility of it being written by her."

George B. Taylor, who is the Thompsons' nearest neighbor, when asked about the letter to-day, said: "I have not seen the handwriting. Edith did write letters in that style about three years ago. I saw lots of them, and we all teased her about them. She stopped writing that way long ago."

"I understand the letter has the appearance of having been written some time. I wonder if Eastman got hold of an old girl's love letter and threatened to show it to her husband? She has not written anything like it to my knowledge for about three years. I cannot explain it."

Clew of Negro Not Found. No trace has been found of the negro who attempted to enter the residence of Dr. J. Winslow Taylor, 650 East Capitol street, on Tuesday night, though the bathroom window, while Mrs. McDermott, wife of Representative McDermott, of Chicago, was bathing her child. The police investigated the case yesterday, but failed to obtain a clew.

WITH THE WRIGHT BROTHERS AT FORT M.

ORVILLE WRIGHT EXPLAINS.

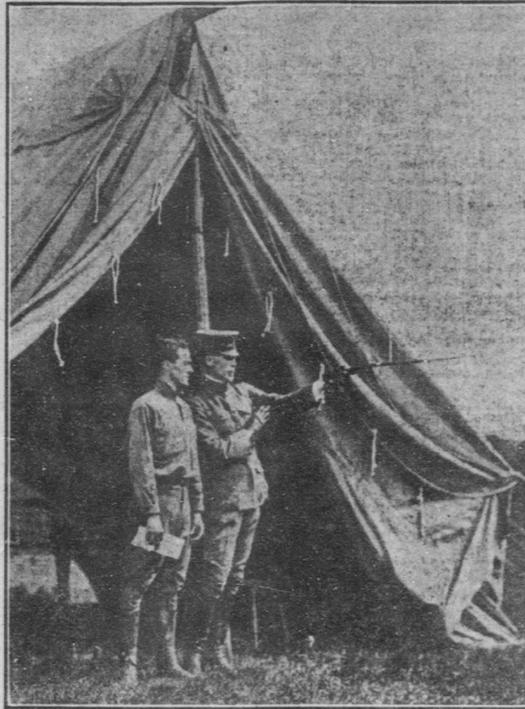

"The flights we are making now, and shall continue to make until we are entirely satisfied with the action of the aeroplane, are purely experimental," said Orville Wright yesterday.

"The canvas area of this machine is slightly smaller than that of the one I operated here last fall. Consequently, more power is needed to drive the machine through the air fast enough to get the necessary wing reaction on the planes. The increase in speed needed is three miles an hour.

"These are new elements, and we have to use a 'cut-and-try' method in finding out how the engine should be run to give the effect we want. There are several adjustments in the motor that affect the power it gives, and the only way of making them is to get up in the air and see how things go.

"When this 'cut-and-try' process has been completed, we shall be ready for the test flights to qualify for the government contract. "This machine is stronger than the one I used last fall, which never could have stood the jars this has received already. It will also be considerably faster.

"No, I hardly feel it is all when the machine comes to the ground with something of a jar, as it has three times in the last two days. Practically all the jolt is taken up by the frame. As an illustration of that, every bone in my body would have been broken in the accident last fall if it had not been for the fact that the rods and braces running to the forward planes struck the ground first and broke the force of the impact."

BUSINESS MEN GO TO THE BAY SIDE

corner, his hair stood on end from actual fright. Ralph Lee glided off and came near wrecking the building with the awful thud with which he struck the floor.

Harry Cunningham demonstrated to all observers that he could crook his legs in more angles than any one else in the party. Tom Kirby found a girl that equaled him in height, and their departure from the wheel resembled the unloading of two Douglas fir telegraph poles from an overland journey across the continent. It was wild fun, and almost every one in the party, except Whit Herron and Cuno Rudolph, accepted a dare and took a fall from the wheel. They said they represented the dignity of the party and could not submit to such horse play. The most strenuous amusement either of them took part in during the afternoon was having their palms read by Mrs. Verner in the coasting booth.

Some Ride the Switchback.

Many of the party rode the switchback railroad several times. On one of the trips a scream from Tommy Rice brought out the fire department at the beach, and on another the car was blocked half way up the incline until "Bill" Peet got out and walked up.

Some drew boxes of candy in the paddle lottery, some circled gayly around on the carousel, others shot at a mark, and Justin Forest spent most of the afternoon trying to lift the rubber weight to the bell on the sledge machine.

Dinner was called at 7 o'clock, and while empty stomachs were gnawing the photographer came in for another scoring while the bunch posed for pictures.

The dinner was good, spiced with sharp appetite from the exercise of the afternoon. Paul Waters presided and welcomed the guests in behalf of the company. He said there would be no set speeches, but many good people were called out by the speaker. The dinner continued all through the dinner. W. F. Gude held up the honor of the business men by a six-minute talk, often interrupted. He was seconded by Cuno H. Rudolph, the only surviving member of the Board of Trade from the previous night's festivities over the joy of winning the ball game.

Hon. A. W. Rucker, Representative from Colorado, was the only member of Congress who could be enticed to Chesapeake Beach from the pleasures of tariff tinkering, and he made a good speech, having the courtesy to say that since he had come to Southern Maryland with such lively company he had no desire to go back and look the mountains of Colorado in the face.

"Judge" Owen and F. D. McKenny spoke for the legal fraternity, and everything would have been lovely if the "judge" had taken down his suspenders. There were some good speeches from the newspaper men, especially by Brother Snyder that drew a hearty laugh from George White and W. H. Hoover spoke for the bankers.

The dinner was a very merry affair, and after it was over the guests wended their way to the train, stopping at the creek and returned to the city voting the outing one of the happiest events they ever attended.

Guests of the Afternoon.

Among those of the party were: J. Harry Cunningham, M. W. Flynn, J. Clifton Hanson, Robert E. Joyce, C. N. Odell, William Peet, F. M. Case, G. E. Stauch, G. P. Johnson, J. Whit Herron, G. A. Lyon, Clifford K. Berryman, Dr. Roy W. Herron, W. H. Landwehr, Thos. Bee, Quaba Bee, G. V. Knox, G. H. Waterwright, H. P. Baldwin, William H. Flannery, George W. White, president of the Bank, Ward Evans, J. A. Johnson, J. A. Beckles, Ralph W. Lee, F. D. McKenny, Cuno Rudolph, G. A. Allen, E. C. Graham, Dr. F. V. Rocks, T. A. Wickersham, C. A. Drake, Hon. A. W. Rucker, Thomas W. Smith, W. H. Callahan, Robert W. Wells, George Hoover, Odell S. Smith, A. G. Plant, E. C. Bates, C. A. Drake, Hon. A. W. Rucker, Thomas W. Smith, J. T. Moffett, W. F. Donnet, C. S. Kimball, Charles J. Columbus, Justin Forrest, James W. Owen, Annapolis; Robert H. Welch, Annapolis; B. Hamilton Magruder, Marlboro; Dr. Charles H. Waters, E. E. Taylor, William B. Hoover, W. F. Roberts, W. F. Gude, and Dr. William H. Talbot.

Census Delegates Selected.

The Director of the Census has appointed Dr. Tressy L. Wilbur, chief statistician for vital statistics of the Census Bureau, and Dr. William R. Datt, State register of vital statistics of Pennsylvania, delegates to the convention of the international commission for the revision of the international classification of causes of death, to be held in Paris the latter part of July. Another delegate will be appointed next week.

NEW YORK POLICE

IN BIG SHAKE-UP

McClellan Upholds Gaynor Against Bingham.

SEQUEL TO THE DUFFY CASE

Retaining of Picture in Rogue's Gallery Leads to Appointment of an Inspector at Large, with Powers Equal to Those of Commissioner. Resignation of Bingham Expected.

New York, June 30.—Mayor McClellan has upheld Supreme Court Justice Gaynor's charges that Police Commissioner Bingham was guilty of injustice and oppression in retaining the picture of George B. Duffy in the Rogue's Gallery and has appointed as inspector at large (a brand new job) Thomas J. Kelly with powers equal to that of the commissioner's.

He orders Commissioner Bingham to send First Deputy Commissioner Baker back to Brooklyn with full authority over that borough. He orders that Third Deputy Commissioner Hansen and Secretary Slattery be removed from office for their implication in the case because they should have been the first to check the case.

Many Changes Ordered.

He directs that Commissioner Bingham name Assistant Corporation Counsel Stover as Hansen's successor and to submit to him the name of Slattery. He reduces Borough Inspector Russell, of Brooklyn and Queens, to the rank of captain, and makes Inspector Hollahan borough inspector in Russell's place. He orders that Inspector Thomas J. Kelly be designated as inspector at large, with headquarters in the mayor's office.

He orders the police commissioner to submit to him for approval the names of captains that the commissioner desires to be made inspectors, the names of inspectors to be reduced to captains, and the assignment of inspectors. He gives the police commissioner twelve hours, or until 6 o'clock to-morrow morning, to carry out these orders.

Expect Bingham to Resign.

The opinion had become very definite to-night that the commissioner will resign the first thing after breakfast to-morrow morning. Third Deputy Commissioner Hansen and Secretary Slattery, declining to the commissioner, declined to comment on the mayor's orders.

The city hall reporters were so sure this evening Commissioner Bingham would resign promptly that they had already selected his successor, Park Commissioner Henry Smith. Commissioner Smith has been in and out of the mayor's office two or three times a day for the last few days, several of the conferences being an hour or more.

DARTMOUTH GIVES DEGREES.

Prof. Lord Presides in the Absence of President Tucker.

Hanover, N. H., June 30.—A class of 191 received diplomas at Dartmouth's commencement exercises to-day. Following a service in Rollins Chapel, the senior class, faculty, and alumni, headed by the oldest living alumnus, Joseph M. Rockwood, of the class of '38, marched twice around the campus, finally entering Webster Hall, where the exercises took place. The senior class was led by Chairman Edward Dillon Rich, of Denver, Colo.

In the absence of President Tucker, who retires next month, Prof. John K. Lord presided.

HONORS FOR DR. ELIOT.

Harvard Grants Highest Honorary Degrees to Former President.

Cambridge, Mass., June 30.—Dr. Charles William Eliot, Harvard's distinguished ex-president and now its president emeritus by action of the governing boards, was the central figure in to-day's commencement exercises.

The two highest honorary degrees which the university can give, those of doctor of medicine and doctor of laws, were bestowed on him by his successor, President A. Lawrence Lowell. The giving of the LL. D. has been generally expected here, but there had not been the slightest rumor of the double honor.

Just as a departure from precedent was made in creating a presidency emeritus, so in bestowing an honorary doctorate of medicine, the university went outside of ancient custom to honor its greatest leader. Seven other higher degrees besides the two given to Dr. Eliot were awarded as follows:

Nathan Matthews, 75, mayor of Boston for four terms beginning with 1891 and recently chairman of the finance commission of the city, doctor of law; Eugene Kuehnemann, German exchange professor, from the University of Berlin, at Harvard for two terms, doctor of literature; Francis Greenwood Peabody, '63, plunger professor of Christian morals in Harvard, and Charles Lothrop Noyes, pastor of the Winter Hill Congregational church in Somerville, Mass., doctors of divinity; Samuel Franklin Emmons, 81, of Washington, D. C., for many years in the National Geological Survey, doctor of science; Thomas Franklin Waters, 72, of Ipswich, a writer of Massachusetts local history, and Wilfred Thomason Grenfell, graduates of Oxford and physician missionary to the fishermen of Labrador, masters of arts.

Commencement was celebrated with all the customary splendor and solemnity. Overseers elected are W. L. Richardson, of Boston, former dean and professor in the Harvard Medical School; George Wiglesworth, of Milton, Mass.; F. J. Swayer, of Newark, N. J.; J. Howard Elliott, of St. Paul, Minn., and J. P. Morgan, Jr., of New York. The above were sworn in for six years. To fill vacancies made in the board during the year L. E. Seaton, of New York, was elected for two years and J. W. Early, of Boston, was elected for one year.

Victims Out of Danger.

Miss Julia A. Clifford and Miss Lucinda Washington, of 38 Third street northwest, who became violently ill after taking a dose of medicine thought to have contained arsenic placed therein for the purpose of poisoning a young woman, are out of danger. The police will make no further investigation into the case until the health department furnishes them with a report of the analysis of the contents of the bottle of medicine.

ston passed, New Haven folks largely, who wanted catch a glimpse of Mr. Taft. Following the Secret Service men came Secretary Stokes and Treasurer McClung and then the invited guests and members of the corporation, after which came the candidates for degrees.

The procession wended its way to Woolsey Hall, the body of which was kept clear until the procession arrived. Mr. Taft sat with the members of the corporation, of which he is a member, but he was on the right hand of Secretary Stokes, with whom he kept up a conversation from time to time.

President Hadley then announced the prize awards, among them the Philo Sherman Bennett prize for the best essay on the "Principles of free government," to George Edward Cuppleman, B. S., of Bristol, Tenn., a graduate of Romance College, and a member of the Yale graduate school, on the subject "The constitution of Oklahoma."

Then came the presentation by the dean of each faculty for the candidates for degrees.

Degrees for Co-eds.

Among the doctors of philosophy were three women. These Yale co-eds were cheered enthusiastically. One of them was Mary Shore Walker, B. A., of the University of Missouri, 1903, and M. A. at the same place the next year.

These men were made doctors of law: President Lowell, of Harvard; Admiral C. E. Sperry, Secretary Dickinson, and Prof. W. C. Sumner. The greatest applause greeted the honor for Billy Sumner. President Taft led it. Throughout the presentation of these degrees the President stood with the other members of the corporation present.

Another hymn was sung and then all remained standing while the dignitaries marched out and commencement was over.

Following the alumni banquet this afternoon, the Yale graduates gathered in Woolsey Hall to consider the erection of a memorial to the Yale men who died as soldiers in the civil war on both the Northern and Confederate sides. President Taft presided at the meeting, and stated that he was heartily in accord with the proposal, which would tend to bring the North and the South ever nearer together and make Yale University more of a national institution than it is at the present day.

There were a large number of men present who had fought in the war on either side. Chief of the Southerners was Gen. William Washington Gordon of Savannah, of the class of '54, who is spending commencement week at the home of President Hadley. He was in the civil and the Spanish wars. The most prominent of the Northern soldiers present was Judge Henry E. Howland, of New York City, also of the class of '54, who united with Gen. Gordon in endorsing the erection of the memorial and moved that President Taft appoint a committee of seven to take up the matter and bring it to a successful conclusion.

Fitting Tribute to Soldiers.

President Hadley said that it was fitting tribute to the soldiers to erect a memorial. President Taft appointed a committee of seven to have charge of the matter. Following the action of the memorial meeting, a reception of President Hadley and President Taft to the graduates was held in Memorial Hall, and President Taft was not as closely guarded as he had been during the afternoon. Several hundred graduates, many of whom brought their wives, called and shook hands with the presidents. After the reception President Taft took a short automobile ride about the city, preceded and followed by machines filled with detectives and Secret Service men.

President Taft went to the home of President Hadley for dinner, and left immediately afterward for the Skull and Bones Society house. His father, Judge Abner Taft, was one of the founders of the society, and President Taft and his son Robert, now a junior in the university, are both members. That was one place where he could not take the Secret Service men. Leaving the society house, he left on a late train for New York City, his son going with him.
