Officers Take Walking Tests. Ninety-mile walks as an evidence of physical fitness are being taken through the streets of Baltimore by various naval officers at the order of the Navy Department. The officers taking the walk choose in preference to a lovely but monotonous stroll through nature's domain. They are working on the theory that unlabeled scenery and plenty of restaurants surpass Inns at intervals of thirty miles, with admirable views.

Temperance Meeting To-morrow. A mass meeting under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at Wesley Methodist Episcopal Church, Fifth and F streets northwest. Mrs. Clinton Smith will preside, and Mrs. M. C. Hill and Mrs. K. C. Fernald, who were delegates to the National W. C. T. U. convention at Omaha, will give reports. Mrs. Annie E. Grigsby, Mrs. Clayton E. Emig, and Mrs. J. H. Robinson, will have charge of the music.

STRAW HAT IN F STREET.

The fashionable throng of women and men who promenade the north side of F street from Ninth to Fifteenth streets, every fair afternoon to see and be seen were rudely shocked yesterday by the appearance of a well-dressed young man wearing a spick-and-span new straw hat of the last summer's vintage.

Such an unusual piece of head-wear at this season of the year, when the unwritten law of Dame Fashion had set September 15 as the last day a straw hat could be worn by men, set the throng guessing as to the identity of the daring young man, and tongues wagged in disapproval.

I verbally advised my concurrence in the original conclusion, for which no fee was charged.

Consulted as Lawyer.

"The coal land law of 1888, approved by President Roosevelt, provided for the entry of up to 2,500 acres of Alaska coal lands by corporations formed for that purpose, and in my private practice after I ceased to be commissioner I was consulted in the preparation of articles of incorporation under that act. But to say that I have ever advised, aided, or lent support to any effort to perpetuate a fraud upon the government in this or other connection is not only false, but is intentionally so if made by any one who has taken the trouble to inquire into the facts."

"Mr. Mathews says you stated to him in a recent interview that the proper course to take with the public domain was to divide it up among the corporations and let the people who know how to make money out of it."

"So absolute a statement hardly merits a denial. Of course, I made no such statement. Such a thought could not be entertained by any one of normal intelligence."

"I have not only been consistently in the vanguard of the conservation movement, but I have suggested and secured performance along lines reasonably within the spirit of the present law and to secure adequate additional laws."

Mr. Ballinger made this reply to the statement that his firm is known as the Standard Oil legal adviser in Seattle:

"You may say for me that this is cloth from the same shoddy bolt. We have never held a retainer from the Standard Oil, and the whole Seattle bar will tell you so. In the long years of our law practice we had just one Standard Oil employment that I recall—we once examined and passed upon the title to some property that corporation had purchased. The inference is also plain that the firm of Ballinger, Ronald, Battle & Tennant (dissolved since my incumbency as Secretary of the Interior) are attorneys for what are called 'big iron trusts,' etc. It happens that that is also false. We have had no public-serving corporation clients, such as railroads, etc. As a matter of fact, our clientele has been on the other side."

Severe with Mathews.

Mr. Ballinger is severe in his reference to Mr. Mathews, the author of the article attacking his administration of the Interior Department.

"The caliber of Mathews," he said, "may be illustrated by his reiteration of the story that I granted power sites on the Missouri River. In his November emanation he mentioned the alleged beneficiaries by name, applied for live stock watering reservoirs. Before that publication he was supplied with the official records showing that in fact the proposed reservoir filings had been rejected. He now repeats the false statement."

"Mr. Mathews makes great public protestation of what he conceives to be exorbitant charges by corporations against the public, and in many instances what he really believes should be charged where his personal financial interests are concerned is best illustrated by his statement in his prospectus for a $10,000,000 water transportation company, in which he is now engaged in selling stock, in which prospectus he states that a conservative estimate of the income to be earned by his corporation will be $2,500,000 per annum, and naively adds 40 per cent of this will be required for construction and maintenance and 60 per cent will be available for dividends."

W. M. LAFFAN DEAD

Fails to Rally from Operation for Appendicitis.

LONG IN NEWSPAPER WORK

While in Baltimore in 1872, He Married Georgianna Radcliffe, Daughter of Judge Radcliffe, of Washington—Became Publisher of the New York Sun in 1884.

New York, Nov. 19.—William M. Laffan, proprietor of the New York Sun, died to-day at his home in Lawrence, Long Island. He was taken ill last Sunday afternoon with appendicitis. An operation was performed on Monday, from which he did not rally.

The funeral and interment will be private.

Mr. Laffan was the proprietor of the Sun and its publisher for twenty years, and was identified with the work of that newspaper thirty-two years. He founded the Evening Sun in 1857, and remained in active direction of both the Sun and the Evening Sun until his death.

He was a connoisseur in art, and applied expertise of judgment in criticism. He would have been sixty-two years old if he had lived until January 22, 1910. Mr. Laffan was born in 1848, in Dublin, Ireland. There were two sisters and a brother, all of whom are living—M. F. Laffan, of this city; Mrs. Walter Noel Hartley and Mrs. Morier, of London.

Studied Medicine.

He received his preliminary education at home from tutors, and was sent afterward to H. T. Humphrey's school at Black Rock, near Kingstown. He was to divide his time between the City College, Booterstown. After leaving Trinity College of the university he studied medicine at St. Cecilia's School of Medicine.

He went to San Francisco in 1868 and went to work as a reporter. He was the first city editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, which was established in 1868.

From San Francisco he went to Baltimore early in 1870, and worked as a reporter and editor until he became the editor and half owner of the Baltimore Daily Bulletin. Subsequently he acquired full ownership of the Bulletin and the Sunday Bulletin. While in Baltimore Mr. Laffan married, in 1872, Georgianna Radcliffe, daughter of Judge Daniel Radcliffe, of Washington, D. C.

He left newspaper work for a while to become general passenger agent of the Long Island Railroad. In 1877 he first became connected with the Sun as a general writer, and in 1881 he became art editor for Harper & Bros., and remained in that capacity and as their agent in London for three years.

Intimate Friend of Dana.

In 1884 he was elected publisher of the Sun. He started the Evening Sun in 1887. He had been the intimate friend and associate of Charles A. Dana. In 1900 he purchased from the Dana estate its interest in the Sun, and was elected president of the Sun Printing and Publishing Company.

Outside of journalism he worked most of his time. He modeled in clay, painted in oils and water colors, and etched for his own entertainment and that of his friends. As a trustee of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and a member of its committee on acquisition Mr. Laffan went abroad frequently searching for objects worth while.

He was especially interested in Oriental porcelains. He edited the "Catalogue of the Chinese Porcelain in the Morgan Collection at the Metropolitan Museum of Art" in 1896. With S. W. Bushnell, C. M. G., he edited "Chinese Porcelains in the Metropolitan Museum of Art," which appeared in 1896. In the same year Mr. Laffan edited "Oriental Porcelain," which was published by the Appletons. He had written "American Wood Engravers," which was published by the Harpers in 1882.

In politics he was independent. His home in the city was at 335 Lexington avenue.
