G. W. U. SCHOLARS RECEIVE DEGREES

Winter Convocation Held at Belasco Theater.

WICKERSHAM MAKES ADDRESS

Attorney General Traces Power of Monopolies from Earliest Civilization Down to Present—President Needham Makes Few Introductory Remarks—Marches to Playhouse.

George Washington University celebrated Washington's Birthday yesterday morning at the Belasco Theater.

The trustees, faculty, graduates, students, and many prominent men assembled for the winter convocation. An address by Attorney General Wickersham on "The progress of law," was the feature of the exercises.

Led by President Needham, a hundred men marched from the university halls to the theater. The faculty, graduates, and students, made an imposing appearance, many wearing the gown and cap, decorated with Pennant.

The stage was elaborately decorated with palms and evergreens with the American flag in the center with the word "Nobles." The mezzanine tier was decorated with the George Washington University pennant.

The Attorney General, in his address, traced the power of monopoly from the earliest civilization down to the present. President Needham made a few introductory remarks, stating the law stood for efficiency and strength in government and country. Prayer was offered by Rev. U. G. B. Pierce, and the following degrees were conferred:

Students Receive Degrees. Bachelor of arts—Oscar Henry William Carson, of Pennsylvania; Cos. Augustus McKenna, of Oregon, and Silas Wesley Rogers, of Arkansas.

MILK PLANT VISITED.

Physicians See "White Cross" Establishment at Frederick, Md.

Physicians, 100 in number, left town at noon yesterday to visit the "White Cross" milk plant at Frederick, Md. The doctors and the few laymen were the guests of the White Cross Milk Company, the journey being made for the purpose of studying the new process of preparing milk for the market.

Edwin M. Cockrell, president of the company, said it was not his intention of taking the party on a regular tour, but that the plant was in its every day condition, and the visitors were free to ask questions.

The plant, including a large two-story building of concrete, germproof walls, ceiling, and floors; an ice plant, a milk filtration plant, a pasteurizing plant, and a bottle department, is practically new.

The milk that is used in the plant is purchased by the company's own agents, as well as by the government officials, appointed for the purpose. After the milk is placed in the separator, following acceptance, the cream is pasteurized.

The two things of particular interest to the visitors was the facts that when the milk is heated to a temperature of 140 degrees, it is subjected to a cold blast of sterilized air, which condenses all the water and blows it away, the cream then being added to the milk and placed in sterilized bottles, sealed, and packed in refrigerator cars, in which it is hauled to Washington or Baltimore.

The other point of interest was the process of sterilizing the bottles and sealing them. It has been said that half of the impurities of milk received in the District enter it while it is on its way to the consumer from the farmer, either in the milk cans or the bottles.

WAR ON HOUSE FLY.

Films Will Show Progress of Battle at District Building To-day.

The life drama of the common house fly will be played eight times to-day at the board room of the District Building by means of moving-picture films. The American Civic Association is about to take up a national campaign for the extermination of the fly, which is regarded as a most serious menace to health because of the disease germs it conveys.

The moving pictures descriptive of the fly were obtained by Edward Hatch, Jr., of New York, who for two years has been a leader in the campaign against the fly. The pictures will be shown in the District Building at 11 o'clock, and thereafter every hour until 6 o'clock.

A brief statement of the purpose of the exhibit will be made by Richard B. Watrous, secretary of the association, and leading physicians and scientists have promised to make short talks on the subject.

In addition to the fly pictures, a series entitled "The Acrobatic Flies" will be shown, and also of the recent aviation contests, with special films from the Department of Agriculture illuminating the handling of milk in large cities.

PORTRAITS ON VIEW

William Funk's Collection at Corcoran Gallery.

TWENTY-EIGHT IN HIS GROUP

Touches Expended and Finished Work Reveals Innate Genius of Artist Whom New York Critic Designated as "Painter of Personality" Mrs. Wittse's Picture Masterpiece.

One of the most interesting exhibits of painting, and the art of portraiture in particular, that has been at the Corcoran Gallery of Art for some time will be opened to the public to-day. It is a collection of portraits—twenty-eight in all—by Wilhelm Funk, and it is now on view in the hemicycle.

One's impression on entering the room is of being surrounded by a number of beautiful women, all in their gayest robes; by numerous little children, some rich and some poor, and by men whose faces and attitudes tell an interesting story.

The artist has grasped his subject in a masterly manner, and the touches which he has expended and the finished work they all bear reveals the innate genius of the man whom a celebrated art critic of New York designated as "the painter of personality."

One Harmonious Tone. Some of his work is wonderful in its intensity of tone and, at the same time, its wonderful blending of the background, the dress, and the softer tones of the flesh into one harmonious whole, so that one thinks not of each separately, but of the impression they make together.

In speaking of his work, the artist said: "I have always had a leaning, a penchant, for this sort of work. It always seemed to me there was opportunity in it for something more than a mere picture, that it could be made a portrait, but a picture at the same time."

"Take the work of the old school of English and Flemish painters, artists like Gainsborough, and others that followed him. They painted portraits, but they were pictures at the same time. That is my aim, to make every one of my studies first a portrait and then a picture, and I think I have succeeded fairly well."

"My masterpiece? Well, that is hard to say. Every artist sees things in each of his pictures that do not appear in the others. But if I were to select the one that has been most universally admired, both in this country and abroad, I would undoubtedly select that one of Mrs. Ernest Wittse and her little son."

One of the first things that strikes one in almost all the pictures by Mr. Funk is the manner in which he subordinates the background to the real figure in the foreground. In some cases this is accomplished by making the background a sort of half-impressionistic idea of what should be there, and in others by merely inserting a neutral-toned or dark drapery at the back. Everything is subordinated to the central figure.
