

WHY $8.98:

When They Are Worth $12.50 to $18.00

CALIFORNIANS DINE AT THE WHITE HOUSE

President Entertains Those After Canal Exposition.

President Taft gave a dinner at the White House last night to the members of the California delegation in Congress and prominent Californians who are touring the East in behalf of the proposed Panama-Pacific exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915.
The guests included Senators Flint and Perkins, Representatives Needham, McClain, Knowland, Hayes, Kahn, McKinlay, Smith, and Engelbright, Gov. Gillette, Mayor McCarthy, of San Francisco, and Victor H. Metcalf, former Secretary of the Navy. Others were F. W. Henshaw, M. H. de Young, William L. Gerstle, James Rolph, Jr., William E. Gerber, M. F. Tarnop, Col. William M. Garland, William E. Dargle, Luther J. Evans, F. J. Zeehandelaar, T. Cary Friedlander, L. A. Lane, Charles S. Aiken, E. C. Cooper, G. E. Cooper, and Capt. Archibald W. Butt.
President Taft greatly pleased his California guests by declaring that the proposed celebration commemorating the completion of the Panama Canal should take place in San Francisco. The visitors were authorized to make known the President's views, and when they left the White House at midnight they gave out the following statement from the President:
"I believe that it is fitting that the completion of the great work at Panama should be commemorated by a suitable celebration, and that the nations of the world should be invited to join with the United States in holding that celebration. Personally, I see no reason why a double celebration should not be held; that is to say, a celebration at San Francisco on the Pacific coast, and a celebration at some designated point on the Atlantic coast.
"But if in its wisdom, Congress should decide that but one city should be selected and but one celebration should be held, then, unreservedly, I say that San Francisco is the logical place and should be chosen."

BIRDS INVADE HOTEL

Thousands of Swallows Cause Stir at New Willard.

STOP OFF ON FLYING TRIP

House Detective and Score of Employed Detailed to Remove Unregistered Guests Find Room on Sixth Floor Congested with Feathered Visitors—Noise Like Seminary.

Two thousand swallows, on their way north, after hibernating in the warmer climes of the South, stopped at the New Willard Hotel shortly after 6 o'clock last evening and threw the employes into a small panic.
The birds did not enter and register in the usual way, but went in through an open window on the sixth floor at the northeast corner of the building. News of their arrival was given the office by persons in an adjoining room, who were disturbed from rainy day reverses by an unearthly noise.
The house detective and a score of employes were detailed to remove any unregistered guests. They strode valiantly into the room, expecting to encounter half a dozen birds who live in the vicinity and occasionally drop into the hotel.
Like Girl Rosters.
When the door was opened the sturdy employes met a commotion they had never seen before. It sounded like the cheering section of a girls' seminary. The talk was accompanied by a continued whirring and flutter of wings that resembled forty electric fans working on rush orders.
There were swallows on the ceiling, swallows on the floor, swallows on the moldings and swallows on the pillow shams and wallows on the spread.
Brooms, shovels, and other weapons were hurriedly obtained, and an onslaught on the invaders began. After a strenuous struggle, the room and corridors were finally cleared, though not until hundreds of the birds had been killed.
Old Hoost Gone.
The sudden visit is accounted for in this way by persons who have offices in the vicinity: Every year the swallows have heretofore had as a roosting place the chimneys of the building which was recently torn down to make room for the new District National Bank Building. When the birds arrived yesterday they were bewildered by the absence of their home.
The leader espied an open window in the Willard and headed for it, followed by the rest of the flock.
Fined for Selling Sunday Liquor.
Police Push, of the Police Court, yesterday imposed a fine of $30 on Benjamin Lenovitz, proprietor of the Farmers and Merchants' Hotel, of Georgetown, for selling liquor on Sunday. Lenovitz will appeal the case.
