Heart and Home Talks

That the average man is a rather unimaginative person the average woman is not apt to discover until she marries him. The discovery then is one of disappointments of matrimony and one of the things which help to take the rose color out of wedded life, leaving it a dull monotonous gray. This lack of imagination she may accept in father and brothers as a matter of course. She feels without reasoning about it that one's family is naturally rather commonplace. But, of course, the lover that is coming, and the husband that is to be, will be different. But, alas! when the halo of romance disappears and she sees him as he really is, she finds him uncommonly like father and brothers. He turns out to be the same practical, matter-of-fact person that they are, content with three good meals a day, a well-ordered home, and the daily migration from home to business and business to home.

Women as a rule have an overplus of imagination and fancy and idealism, and the usual man has little. He doesn't read poetry or probe into the reason of being, or ponder what is the ideal state of man, or he awakes nights wondering whether moral suasion or a good spanking is best for the children. Women enjoy a little flyer into all these things. It is food their imagination must have, and they hope to find in their life-companion a kindred taste. But they rarely do. Men may lie awake nights wondering, but it is whether stocks will go up or down. And they may probe into things, but it is usually some business deal. They seldom make mental excursions outside these practical realms. If digestion and business are good, they are content.

Women seldom realize this. Having the imaginative faculty in force, they believe it is likewise to be found in others. In haphazard friendly intercourse they are not apt to notice that it is lacking. Their very imagination makes them blind to the reality. But after marriage comes disillusionment and disappointment, and henceforth this part of their nature must travel life's journey alone.

Here and there one finds the man with imagination, and what a delightful companion for a walk! He is the man who, when off for a walk with you, slips into his pocket some little volume of thought-producing essays or exquisite poems; whose beauty-loving eye takes in just the right place where an entrancing view is to be enjoyed, to drop under a tree and dip into the book he has brought; who can talk entertainingly for hours on the technical, idealistic subjects the imaginative woman delights in.

But these men are rare. The usual man will look at the most beautiful mountain scenery and think only of the value of the timber, or the possibility of using the water power of the brooks. He will gaze up and down the loveliest sea beach, all curving lines and snow-topped dunes, gray sand and green breakers, and think only of how lonesome it is and how far from business. He may for a time pretend to enjoy these things, because he sees that you do. But this appreciation is not a real part of his nature, and after a year or two of married life his real self asserts itself, and the woman who fondly imagined she had a life-partner who enjoyed the same things as herself finds she has a companion who is content with good food, good business, good cigars, a good sporting page in his favorite newspaper, a good play or light opera now and then.

The unimaginative man misses much. The practical things of life are necessary, but to limit one's outlook to them entirely is to cut out half the pleasure of living. Both for husband's sake and for her own sake the woman who finds she is married to the man unimaginative should try to awaken and develop this side of his nature. They will both find keener enjoyment in living when he can drop the humdrum facts of life and soar with her into the realms of fancy.

MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

I WAS in a home the other evening where the whole family go about on tiptoes with their fingers on their lips, making any necessary remarks in awesome whispers, from six to seven.

Why all this hush and mystery? Why, because the baby goes to sleep at that hour, of course. I was in another home yesterday where the two big brothers were playing tennis under the bedroom window and little sister was practicing her scale in the parlor and big sister was entertaining a group of swains on the front veranda, while little mother was putting the baby to bed.

As she closed the baby's door and came smiling down the stairs to me, a sally from big sister was greeted by an uproarious burst of laughter and triumphant announcement "Three-love," and little sister reached the loud pedal part of her exercise.

"You don't mean to say that baby will go to sleep in all this racket?" I demanded in amazement.

"Why, certainly," answered the little mother serenely, "he will be asleep in three minutes—the precious."

"How can he?" "Why, just because he always has. He couldn't, of course, if he were trained to expect absolute quiet, but he hasn't been, so he can go to sleep under pretty nearly any conditions, and I hope he always will be able to."

Which of these two mothers do you think was the kindest and wisest? Of course, I scarcely need to tell you what I think.

The man or woman who is the least a slave to conditions and circumstances of this sort is apt to be the most comfortable and the most efficacious in this world.

"I simply cannot sleep well in any bed but my own," I heard some one say the other day.

If I felt that way it seems to me I'd upset the family to the extent of sleeping a night or two in every bed in the house until I had freed myself from that dependence upon conditions.

TRANSFER PATTERNS.

(Upon receipt of this pattern, ordered on coupon below, place the rough or glazed side of the pattern down on material to be stamped, then press hot flat-iron on the back or smooth side of the pattern. Be careful not to let pattern slip.)

Daisy design for shirt-waist in eyelet embroidery with a touch of French work, to be transferred to linen, linen lawn, batiste, cambric, cotton lawn, cross-stitched muslin, or any preferred shirt-waist material. The design may be all solid work in white or white and one color. The cuff design may be used at the bottom or top of the long closing sleeves, whichever preferred, and pretty coloring is to make the petals of the daisies of white with the centres in bright yellow and the stems in light green. Or, if the waist is transferred to light blue or white silk or crepe-de-Chine, a material that is being much used for shirt-waists this season, the daisies should be embroidered with bright yellow silk floss, with black centres and light green stems.

GAY WEEK AHEAD

FOR ESPERANTISTS

Entertainments Arranged for Visiting Delegates.

Quite an impetus will be given social affairs next week by the coming of the Esperanto congress, with several hundred delegates. Many entertainments have been arranged, the most notable event being a reception on Wednesday evening at the Bureau of American Republics. Invitations will be sent to members of society still in the city and to the diplomatic corps in general.

On Friday evening there will be an Esperanto ball, which will be an event of more than usual interest, by reason of the fact that many of the delegates will attend in their national evening dress. Dr. Edwin Reed, secretary of the local branch of the Esperanto congress, says that the ball which was held in Spain last year was a most picturesque as well as enjoyable affair because of the many different costumes worn.

A moonlight excursion has been arranged for Monday evening. Tuesday a trip will be taken to Mount Vernon and Great Falls. The foreign delegates will be introduced into the mysteries of baseball at American League Park Thursday afternoon.

Next Sunday services in Esperanto will be held in St. Patrick's Church and St. Paul's Episcopal Church. At St. Patrick's the services will be conducted by Father Viachini, of Italy, and Father Colas, of France. At St. Paul's Episcopal the services will be conducted by the Rev. Paul Hoffman, of Baltimore, and Rev. James L. Smiley, of Annapolis.

Next Sunday evening a concert will be given in the ball-room of the Arlington, the vocal part of which will be rendered in Esperanto.

ROOSEVELTS GET WET ON RIDE

First Horseback Outing for the Colonel Since His Return.

Accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt He Attracts Attention of Villagers and Summer Visitors.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Col. Roosevelt jumped on a horse this afternoon and galloped several miles. It is the first time the colonel has ridden horseback since he returned from the other side, so villagers and summer visitors in this town were moved to do considerable rubbering. His ride through Oyster Bay, along the road to Bayville, created quite a stir, but there was no demonstration.

Mrs. Roosevelt went with the colonel part of the way. They were caught in a shower and got wet. Before he left Sagamore Hill the colonel did a lot of real hard work to-day. He labored over his speeches he will deliver on the Western trip and covered more ground than he has in a long time. One or two speeches that had already been prepared the colonel touched up a bit because of certain events that have come to pass since he undertook the task. He expects to have them all completed by the early part of next week.

The colonel has not received any visitors at Sagamore Hill since last week. He will leave early to-morrow morning for New York and the Outlook office, where he contemplates meeting callers of various sorts. It is not unlikely that more gubernatorial booms will be wafted into the sanctum. The colonel loves to learn of possible candidates. He will lunch with the Abbotts and the Howlands, who are connected with the paper for which the contributing editor writes pieces.

MRS. WALCOTT DEAD.

Wife of Colonial Beach Hotel Man Passes Away.

Mrs. May Walcott, wife of Frank W. Walcott, proprietor of the Walcott House, at Colonial Beach, died suddenly yesterday morning at Colonial Beach. She had been ill recently, but seemed well on the road to recovery. A sudden change occurred Sunday night and she never rallied. She was thirty-five years old. Her husband and two daughters survive—Misses Grace and Vivian Walcott. Mrs. Walcott was the wife of Inspector Boardman, chief of detectives, is a sister.

The body was brought to Washington last night. The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.
