

The Palais Royal's Annual Sale

Learn Why This August Sale Is Greatest.

The building is to grow higher this August—the roof is to come off and the contents of the fourth floor have to be stored or sold at once. Thus furniture, rugs, and draperies are included in this August Sale at prices creating the opportunity of a lifetime. Link the housefurnishings, table linen, and bedwear told of on this page—and the reader will admit that "the opportunity of a lifetime" is a perfectly logical statement.

dian war dance, gotten up for the benefit of the Washington party.

Langdon Schaeffer, formerly of Georgetown, but now of Cincinnati, Ohio, is visiting his aunt, Mrs. R. L. Cox. He is a grandson of the late David Shoemaker.

The scene of Georgetown's greatest activity the past week has been the children's play grounds on Thirty-fourth street. No damage done to arms has the slightest effect on the enthusiasm of the children. One arm broken and one arm sprained was one day's record, but the same boys were back again the next day, ready to play.

Dr. and Mrs. W. K. Petty, of 411 Thirty-fourth street, and Mr. and Mrs. Willson Petty, of Arlington, Va., left Wednesday morning for a two-weeks' visit to Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, and Quebec.

Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Kibler had as their house guest the past week Miss Margaret Cheney, of Maryland. Miss Margery Woodell, of Warrenton, and Mrs. Markwood, of Winchester, Va., are with them now. The Misses Kibler left Thursday for Rehoboth Beach.

Miss Mulcock and Mrs. Radcliffe are expected home this week from Asbury Park, N. J.

Mrs. Joseph Barron has returned from Baltimore.

Mrs. W. E. Dix entertained at a beautifully appointed luncheon Friday. The table decorations were green and white. The center piece was a mound of ferns. Covers were laid for ten, and among the guests were Mrs. W. A. Keene, of Pittsburg, and Mrs. William A. Dix and Miss Helen Dix, of this city.

Mrs. W. C. Gwynn has returned from Virginia Beach.

Mrs. Lewis Jackson is home again after a delightful outing at Langley, Va.

Mrs. William Orndorff, of 2801 O street, has returned from a visit to Maryland. Miss Ruth Wilson, of Bethesda, is visiting her aunt at North Beach.

Mrs. Slaymaker and daughter, Miss Elizabeth Slaymaker, of Bethesda, are spending some time at Braddock Heights. Miss Nettie Clezgett returned yesterday from an extended trip through Pennsylvania, New York, and Massachusetts.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Middleton left yesterday for Ocean City, to join the parents of Mr. Middleton, Mr. and Mrs. Laub.

Mrs. William Kloman will leave the first of the week for a month's stay at Atlantic City.

Each day as we travel toward the shadow the driver of the caravan uses his whip every time we stumble. How we cry out at first! How we dream of escape! And then how submissive and docile we become. We cannot escape, for there is that within man which acts as a goad. It will not let him rest. "It is the inexorable within working with the inexorable without." "Now, then, can man escape judgment?"

The sum of man's learning is the knowledge of his weakness. Then he knows himself upon his Creator, whom he knows not, but for whom he must feel in this stumbling passage toward he knows not what. There must be some intelligence that knows all things; as all things have a plan and a coherency, and all unfold into infinity; hence the idea of God and heaven. In the endeavor to reason from the seen to the unseen, all different systems of religion were evolved—more or less faulty, as the finite fails to comprehend the infinite. Man doubts and waits for God to speak, but the great God is silent. There was a time, tradition tells him, when God spoke to man. Man's need is just as sore now as then, but the great God is silent. There is nothing left but submission, not to man and his inventions that plague him—these are not the inescapable—but to the unknown, silent God of the gods. Again, it is to decide—and forever to decide!

Dream, drift, drink, if you will, if you must, but the forces of life are shaping themselves all the while, and one day, armed cap-a-pie, the sentinel challenges you: "O man! O woman! God stands again on the crossways. Choose your road!"

Whichever you may take, you know there will be many times when you will wish that you had chosen the other; for there is nothing fixed in this world, least of all the human heart—it veers, it turns, it strains. Happy for you if you are so stayed that, like the needle of the compass, it ever vibrates to one God through all its vibrations!

Again alone! No one can help me now. In every crisis the soul stands alone.

Jimmie has been ordered away to foreign service. He wants me to go with him. He says he cannot leave me here; that he will not. I have refused to see him for a few days. I must decide, I say, and all the time down deep in my heart I know I have decided. My soul says you cannot go; my heart says you must go.

Oh, Jimmie, Jimmie, you make me long for your presence, but there is one thing that has not happened that cannot happen—I have not broken with the past. It is knitted into my being by every prayer, by every ideal of strength and truth and beauty; by every word uttered for my guidance by lips now silent. I cannot go. You will scorn what you call my indecision—my weakness. I find that I have a tendency to weakness and error under temptation, and that makes me un-

Huckleberry Pudding—Sift one pint of flour with one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a little salt. Add half a cupful of sugar and beat in one tablespoonful of butter. Stir in enough milk to make a batter that will drop from a spoon; then incorporate quickly one pint of washed, dried, and well-floured huckleberries. Pour the batter into a well-buttered pudding mold, cover with buttered paper, and steam for one hour. Serve the pudding hot, with hard or liquid sweet sauce.

Iced Tea—To make iced tea put four heaping teaspoonfuls of Ceylon tea into a china or earthenware pot and pour upon it three pints of boiling water. Let this stand for ten minutes; stir with a silver spoon, strain the liquid into a glass or china pitcher, and set in a cool place till wanted. Half fill tumblers with cracked ice, put two lumps of sugar and a thin slice of lemon on this, and fill the glasses with the cold tea.

The small hat is really the smart thing of the hour.
