CHAMBER OBTAINS CONVENTION FUND

Special Finance Committee Submits Report.

That the Chamber of Commerce will within a few days have at its disposal $25,000 to be used in bringing conventions to Washington and entertaining their delegates was the statement made by A. Lisner, chairman of the special convention finance committee, when the members met yesterday afternoon at the Chamber rooms to prepare their preliminary report.

"About $20,000 has already been pledged," said Mr. Lisner, "and that the fund is assured is proven by the fact that in the past few days I have personally been able to secure over $1,000 more. The business men are endorsing the project."

"It was the plan of this committee when organized to secure for the Chamber a fund which would enable them to best further the interests of Washington and Washington business men by bringing here great conventions, not only from the United States, but from abroad. We have been successful in getting the money, and with the report submitted by Granville Hunt, chairman of the convention committee, before me, I feel assured that Washington bids fair to become the greatest convention city in the world."

WANTS BETTER EMBASSIES.

Dwight Elmendorf, in Lecture, Laments Conditions Abroad.

Taking advantage of his exhibition of a beautiful picture of the British Embassy in Berlin to comment on the fact that he could offer his audience no adequate view of the American Embassy in the same city because it was situated on the third floor of an obscure hotel, Dwight Elmendorf, in his talk on "Berlin and Its Environs" at the National theater yesterday afternoon, made several caustic comments on the manner in which the United States fails to provide suitable dwellings and offices for its representatives abroad.

"I have traveled for over thirty years in foreign lands," said Mr. Elmendorf, "and I am always ashamed of the American consulates and embassies. Only in London where the ambassador is a millionaire and can afford to rent a house from his own private income, is the United States represented as it should be with regard to embassy offices."

In the course of his lecture on the German capital, Mr. Elmendorf took his audience with him from city hall, all over the city, taking in the more important streets and avenues, with particular attention to the Unter den Linden and the Friedrichstrasse, over the elevated and through the subway, across the Spree at numerous intervals, out to one of the watering places and back in time to see the annual review of the troops by the Emperor. The motion film of this review was one of the best of those given during the afternoon's talk and received much applause.

Interposed among the more usual pictures of the streets and houses were a number of beautifully colored views of bits of scenery throughout the city and of the neighboring country. As usual the pictures of paintings and sculpture given by Mr. Elmendorf elicited much applause.

Next week's lecture will be on "Vienna."

EXPLAIN TREASURY METHODS.

Bank Clerks Hear Talks by Government Officials.

How the Treasury experts decipher from charred remnants the face value of bank notes offered for redemption, and how millions of currency are destroyed every year by the macerating machine of the government bankers, was most interestingly told to the Washington Chapter of the American Banking Institute last night.

Thomas E. Rogers, superintendent of the national bank redemption agency, and Edmund E. Schreiner, chief of the redemption division of the Treasury Department, were the two speakers, and gave the bank clerks a comprehensive idea of the workings of the Treasury. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.
