Says Martyred President Was Criticized as Menace.

PAYS RESPECTS TO GAYNOR

In an Attempt to Justify His Attack on Supreme Court, Colonel Tells of Judge Gaynor's Criticism of New York "Bake Shop" Decision—Assails Tammany.

New York, Oct. 29.—In order to justify his attack upon the Supreme Court, Mr. Roosevelt fell back on Mayor Gaynor and Abraham Lincoln today. Lincoln has been referred to before in this campaign, but to-day was the first time that the colonel brought in the mayor.

Mr. Roosevelt started the day by telling a good-sized crowd at Kingston that the mayor, as judge of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of this State, three years ago, criticized the bake shop decision even more strongly than the colonel himself has. He declared that he had never criticized the judges save as Mayor Gaynor did in this particular case.

The colonel had a good deal to say about Lincoln, too. He read in a history of Tammany Hall that in 1861, when Lincoln was running for a second term, Tammany denounced him in much the same way that they are denouncing Roosevelt now. He read that Lincoln had been accused of being just the same sort of a menace to business and the same sort of a usurper of powers not granted by the Constitution.

Whole Town Turns Out.

Kingston appeared to take kindly to the colonel's remarks. He spoke to the up-State folks from a platform erected across the street from the Federal Building. It was before noon, but the whole town turned out and cheered while Mr. Roosevelt discussed these and other matters. Mr. Dix received many swats, and Mr. Murphy and the newspapers were not overlooked in the slightest degree. The colonel told his audience that Mr. Dix has pledged himself squarely against progress as squarely against progress as the opponents of Abraham Lincoln pledged themselves against the well-being of the workmen when they stood for slavery and disunion.

"I am not alone in my opinion," said Mr. Roosevelt. "I ask your attention to the following statement about the bake-shop case by a Democrat, who was then judge, who is now mayor of the city of New York, Mr. Gaynor.

"People have spoken of me as criticizing judges," Mr. Roosevelt asserted. "I have never criticized the judges save as Mayor Gaynor himself criticized them, and not as strongly. I have only exercised the right of every free citizen temperately to express his opinion of the servants of the public.

Quotes Judge Gaynor.

"Judge Gaynor," the colonel went on, "said about this same bake-shop case as to which I have spoken: 'A more recent case is that of the statutes regulating the work of bakers and limiting their hours

IOWA INSURGENTS SCORE ROOSEVELT

"We Are Done With Him," Say the Progressives.

LOST HIS HALO AT SARATOGA

Let Republican Platform Go Through Without Radical Tariff Plank—Denunciation Is Unspurring—Chances for Nomination in 1912 Killed in View of Westerners.

New York, Oct. 29.—Writing from Iowa, where he is investigating the political situation, a correspondent of the Evening Post sends the following:

Iowa, for the time being, at least, is no longer under the mystic spell. The Republican progressives out here to-day are just as friendly and cordial in their love and admiration for Mr. Roosevelt as J. P. Morgan and J. D. Rockefeller and the members of the Union League Club were for Mr. Bryan in 1896. Indeed, it is not difficult to find Republicans who call Mr. Roosevelt the Bryan of their party. Mr. Roosevelt is scheduled to speak in this State on November 4, just four days before election. Many radical progressive Republicans do not believe that he will come. They say that he will make an excuse, rather than risk facing audiences of the chilliness of temper and small size that will greet him.

This is one of the progressive-insurgent States of the Middle West in the heart of the so-called Roosevelt territory which will be a Roosevelt State. The ex-President may come out here and charm them again, but in the present state of the public mind, when one casually makes this suggestion it almost provokes a riot. The more radical and progressive the Republicans are, the more bitter is he against Roosevelt.

Reaction Favors Taft.

Since the attitude of open hostility toward Mr. Roosevelt developed there has been a reaction in favor of Mr. Taft. The President has gained some of the ground that Mr. Roosevelt has lost. These people are amused at the concern Mr. Roosevelt has displayed over the reports that have gone East to him of his waning popularity in the other States in this part of the country. Hardly a man in the State that does not know how urgent were the appeals that Mr. Roosevelt sent to Senator Cummins to come East and talk with him about the situation out here. There was some very frank plain talk at that meeting. Mr. Roosevelt knows just how disheartened and discouraged were the leaders and the rank and file of the progressive movement in the Middle West by his course at Saratoga.

Republicans Are Bitter.

"We are done with him," he said. "He has led the insurgent movement with all of us following up a blind alley, tied us to a stake and left us. Naturally, we are sore and bitter. The distrust of Mr. Roosevelt began among some of us just as soon as he got back from Africa. While he was in Europe he was well enough to tell the English how to govern Egypt and tell the French that they ought to raise larger families and talk to the Germans about their military and their control, so that we thought he ought to be equally quick on the trigger in telling us here at home where he stood.

"There was but one question about Roosevelt when he landed in New York. Was he going to line up with the insurgents, or with the old-line regulars in the Republican party? That is what everybody wanted to know. That is the question that was put squarely up to him. But he didn't answer it. Instead, he butted-in for four or five weeks with a lot of politicians and tried to sense the situation and see which side was the strongest. Then he started on his Western trip, and in his first speeches he didn't make his position any clearer.

"When he got out to Omaha he found the people who came to hear him much colder than he had any reason to expect. They had never been toward him before. While he was still speaking at Omaha the crowd began shouting for Dooliver, and Dooliver was the real hero of that occasion. The people out there had begun to doubt whether Mr. Roosevelt was a true-blue progressive. There down in Kansas he made his Oswatimie speech and for the first time seemed to line himself up with the progressive movement without reservation. We said: 'The movement was not ready to go so far as Mr. Roosevelt was apparently ready to go at Oswatimie, but we made allowances for his impetuosity. Anyway, we knew it would be a long time before the most radical suggestions would ever be taken up seriously by Congress or the people. On the whole, on his trip out here he pretty well annoyed the insurgent country and blanketed the regulars. Men like Cummins and Dooliver and La Follette and Clapp and Stubbs and Brietow and Beveridge became unpopular. Mr. Roosevelt's great prestige and popularity.

The Saratoga Disappointment.

"Then he went back East and took control of the Republican State convention at Saratoga. There were just three planks in the New York platform in which his followers out here were interested. We wanted to know what his declaration would be in his home State about Mr. Taft, about the tariff, and about conservation. Well, you know what happened. The President himself might have written the plank about the administration, which the tariff plank, and Balinger or Guggenheim the conservation plank. There never was a sorer lot of people in the world than we were out here when we read that platform and realized that we had been ditched.

"Right there the colonel got off. Right there he killed any chance that he might have had to be the Republican nominee for the Presidency in 1912. We quit him, and we quit him cold. He not only made his own nomination in 1912 impossible, but he killed off the chances of Cummins or La Follette or any other of the real leaders of the progressives. If we did our movement to reorganize and purify the Republican party more harm than any other one man could have done. For the sake of trying to be the political boss of the Republican party in New York State he virtually threw away the leadership of the movement in the Republican party which is national in its scope.

Lost His Opportunity.

"Where would another nomination for Mr. Roosevelt for the Presidency come from? It would have had to come from New York, Kansas, Wisconsin, or Iowa. With those States for him he would have had the nucleus for control in the next Republican national convention. But he has lost his opportunity. There is not a single newspaper of any consequence out here in the Middle West country, except the Kansas City Star, that is unreservedly friendly to Mr. Roosevelt. That is a Roosevelt newspaper. But the others

NO CLIQUE AT WORK.

Betting in Wall Street an Index to Sentiment There.

New York, Oct. 29.—This year's scarcity of big bets in Wall Street shows that no clique has been trying to influence sentiment by "rigging" the election gambling. But there have been years in which that method of campaigning played an important part in the bosses' methods.

A recent attempt was made by one of Odell's lieutenants to influence the odds in favor of Higgins. A few days before the election the Republican money gave out, and the odds soared on the Democratic candidate, D. Cadby Herrick. At the finish 2 to 1 prevailed, and there were wagers as high as 5 to 1. The Republicans are now recalling those figures as an argument that odds don't show anything, for Herrick was defeated, in spite of Democratic optimism.

Taft's Advisers Working Out Reorganization Plan.

QUIET CANVASS BEING MADE

Leading Members of Administration Expect Election Results Will Be Disappointing—Root's Speech Stirs Up Situation Regarding Roosevelt's Outlook After Present Campaign.

Leading members of the administration, including some of the Cabinet officers, are working out a plan looking toward the reorganization of the Republican party.

One thing contemplated in the plan is the selection of a new chairman of the Republican National Committee soon after the coming election in November, and probably also the opening of an office for the party organization in Washington.

Administration advisers here expect that the election results in general will be disappointing to Republicans and will clearly show the necessity for a readjustment of the party machinery.

They believe further that no better time can be selected for working out the details of a reorganization plan than immediately following the election at which the Republicans have been disciplined and chastened.

As soon as the election is over and sufficient time has elapsed to permit the results to be appreciated, a conference of the party leaders probably will be held and a new chairman of the National Committee chosen.

Party Without Pilot.

There has been much complaint from leaders throughout the country that the Republican organization is practically without a head. When Frank H. Hitchcock relinquished active political work to become postmaster general he designated Executive Hill of Maine, as acting chairman. If Chairman Hill has had headquarters anywhere, they seem to be like Gen. Pope's, "in the saddle." Little has been heard of him or his activities since he assumed the responsibility of leadership.

There is no particular complaint against him for what has passed, because it apparently has been the policy of the Republicans not to maintain a strong national organization in the last two years. But Mr. Taft's advisers now realize that something must be done to strengthen the President and his cause, or the party will have to face the serious danger of losing the country in the Presidential election in 1912.

Mr. Taft's advisers believe, furthermore, that the time has come when Washington should be made the headquarters of a strong party organization. Up to this time party leaders who have come to Washington to talk politics have dropped in, first, at the White House.

Mr. Taft has acknowledged frankly that he knows next to nothing about the political game, and has referred these visitors sometimes to Postmaster General Hitchcock and sometimes to other administration advisers.

Get Conflicting Advice.

Mr. Hitchcock has been devoting his entire time to the work of putting the Post-office Department on a self-supporting basis, and his time open for political interviews has been very limited. Recently it has been his desire to steer clear of politics altogether. The result has been that many local leaders who have come to Washington to talk politics have been shifted from one administration representative to another and have finally left town dissatisfied and oftentimes carrying away conflicting advice.

Just now a quiet canvass is being made by the President's friends and a man of political experience and with a capacity for organizing who can be put in charge of the party organization. An effort will be made to get a leader free from the factional troubles. Mr. Taft's advisers admit that this will be difficult, and as yet no name has been publicly suggested for filling the bill.

The President's friends look for a closer working arrangement between him and the progressives this winter. The result of the primary elections, if ratified by the general elections on November 8, will be to bring back to Congress a strong insurgent representation. President Taft's friends have always contended that he was progressive in his views, and his advisers believe that when his legislative programme is thoroughly understood it will be sufficiently progressive to meet the views of nearly all of the Senators and Representatives who will come to the next Congress bearing credentials from insurgent communities.

The President may not be able to satisfy men like La Follette and Brietow, but undoubtedly an effort will be made to harmonize the President's recommendations and of presenting a united party in 1912.

Doubt Root's Statement.

Great interest was aroused in Washington by Senator Root's statement that the Republican party might demand a Moses to lead them in 1912 if the Taft leadership was not sustained. Considerable doubt was expressed as to whether this intimation of Roosevelt in 1912 would improve the situation for the Republicans in New York State.

The White House had no comment to make on the statement. It is known, however, that President Taft did not see Senator Root's speech before it was delivered. This is not the first time, however, that he has had the idea conveyed

TO HIM THAT THE DEFEAT OF MR. STIMMONS IN NEW YORK STATE WILL INCREASE THE CHANCES OF COL. ROOSEVELT ENTERING THE PRESIDENTIAL FIELD IN 1912.

They believe that the defeat of Stimson will give Roosevelt the opportunity to go before the country with the cry that Wall Street did it, as the first step in an effort to control the 1912 Presidential nomination.

It was very apparent that Mr. Taft's friends were disappointed in that the root speech contained no definite assurance from Roosevelt that he would not be a Presidential candidate in 1912. Such a statement, they believe, would have cleared the situation.

REPUBLICANS DIVIDED ON RESULT OF ROOT SPEECH

New York, Oct. 29.—The principal topic of political gossip to-day was Senator Root's speech last night at the Manhattan Casino. Both sides seemed to find stuff for optimism in the Senator's remarks. The Republicans at State headquarters made a cross-eyed argument. At least, they expressed reasons for believing that the Senator's speech would help Stimson appear to bark at each other.

Republicans who are for the ticket in spite of Col. Roosevelt said that Mr. Root's speech ought to recall 1896, when the failure of Mr. Cleveland's administration led to the selection of the radical Bryan as the Presidential candidate two years later. Therefore, they put it, Taft must be indured by the election of Stimson, or there will have to be a radical in 1912.

The other sort of Republicans, the Roosevelt-Pinchot-Gardfield-Roosevelt insurgent kind, said that Mr. Root had proved that the colonel was a patriot of patriots, a lover of his country, and no monarch in embryo. He might talk loud, but his bark was worse than his bite.

The Democrats, admitting first that the Senator is a mighty able man, whose words always carry some weight, said that his speech was a tactical error just the same; that it would make people think of the bogey that was raised in the summer of 1908—"If you won't take Taft you'll have to take me."

At the Democratic State headquarters the figures that had been received were foisted by that cry and that a majority of the voters had made up their minds weeks ago that they wouldn't take "me" under any circumstances. The Democrats figure that Root's speech will drive away some thousands of conservative Republicans who were just hovering uncertainly.

BAY STATE IS WAVERING.

Bay States May Be Enough to Bring Victory.

Boston, Oct. 29.—With only one week of campaigning left, the indications are that this State is going to follow the lead of Maine in electing a Democratic governor. Gains will undoubtedly be registered for that party in the Congressional delegation, and the legislative strength of the Republicans will be reduced.

The Democratic leaders are brimful of confidence, and predict a landslide for Foss. The machine leaders in Boston declare that the latter will have a plurality of 20,000 in this city alone, and are hopeful of carrying every city in the State.

Had the election been held within a few days of the riot convention of the Democrats, Gov. Draper would have won in a walk, but people forget quickly. Now the Republicans are confronted by the unusual spectacle of all the Democratic leaders pulling together with might and main for Foss.

To-day most of them were upon the same platform that they in a moon rally at Faneuil Hall. Candidate Foss declared that the Republican campaign had collapsed, and that the whole State is aflame "against the broken pledge of the Republican party, against party misrule, against boss misrule."

It would be interesting to know what has caused the shift toward Foss in the last two weeks. Many people blame Col. Roosevelt because of his attack on Foss in his recent speech at the Arena.
