

THE HERALD FOR THE WOMAN

Edited by JULIA CHANDLER HOLT

A DRESSY BLOUSE.

First is a foundation of white net with a ruffle of fine lawn and a row of crystal buttons. Over this a vest of white satin, embroidered with gold and emerald green. The overblouse is of black chiffon voile, with a satin stripe and black tulle used for trimming bands.

SPECIAL CLOSET FOR THE SEWING CONVENIENCES

Many women in a sewing room constantly jump up and down to get some piece of lace or material to finish a garment. If the hundred and one things a woman needs at her work were all in some convenient place, all this trouble would be avoided.

If there is a large closet in the sewing room or in the room where most of the family sewing is done get three or four shelves and divide these at convenient heights inside of the closet.

On each shelf arrange four or five boxes and then place the various kinds of lace, veils, silks, buttons, etc., in one box, marking very clearly just what each box contains.

A closet arranged in this way will be found a great convenience and time-saver to the home dressmaker.

WOMEN ARE SEVERE IN CONDEMNATION OF SEX

By FRANCES SHAFER.
Miss Mary Bartelme, of Chicago, was recently appointed associate judge of the Juvenile Court of Cook County, Ill. She will preside over a division set aside for girls and young women charged with delinquency and minor offenses. She has served as public guardian of that county, and has now been elevated to the bench.

And with the appointment, which is a recognition of efficient service, there comes to mind that old charge of woman's intolerance of woman, and one is disposed to ask—How did that intolerance ever come about? For the sake of one's faith in the inherent broad-mindedness of woman, one is glad to say it came by the sure way of training. And for the sake of a fast-developing womanhood, one is glad to say it is going by the same certain procedure, slowly, but none the less surely.

But have you ever stopped to reason it out? Must Be Above Suspicion. When Caesar had divorced his wife he was asked why he had taken that irrevocable step, and his reply has been quoted down the ages. It was not enough that she be absolutely free from all wrong-doing; she must be above suspicion. And that doctrine of purity of life, beautiful and wholesome as it is, has been learned at some cost. Because, along with the reward for that high state, there has been a corresponding penalty for every fall from grace, a penalty even for the suspicion of a drop.

And when the world—for it is not women alone—has put up a standard for women to maintain it has given them lesson upon lesson regarding the necessity of living up to it, and so well have they followed that instruction that from their own heights they look with disdain upon a transgressor. They are taught to measure not the wrong, but the wrongdoer, and if it is a woman who has fallen, they are certain to keep themselves above suspicion. And it is only the clear-thinking broad-minded women who have grown far enough from their lessons to realize that the heavy standard which has been exacted from the woman transgressor.

Quick to Condemn. Women have been and still are quick to condemn and slow to forgive other women, whatever their offense, but it is too much to expect them to have watched the penalties meted out these many centuries and then suddenly to develop a spirit of understanding and forgiveness. So far as the standards of living are concerned, women in the main are in a class by themselves, and are told that they must stay there, away up or away down as they like, but always measured by rules especially prepared for them. Some of them have almost come to believe that women are by nature better than men, and they are profited by instruction that they have counted it more than half right that they should pay a heavier price when they drop away from the lines marked for them. And, taking their own conduct as a guide, they have naturally grown sharp in condemnation—if some women want to and others must remain above reproach why should not all, else take the consequences?

Growing More Tolerant. Bearing in mind the long years of training in a school apart, watching the penalties and noting the attitude of the world, do you wonder that women have been charged with being severe upon their own kind, more severe than fair or gentle? They are learning the manifold hardships and inequality of some of the world's attitudes toward women, and growing more tolerant, more disposed to judge, to pardon or condemn, from the human rather than the purely woman standpoint. And as they grow broader and broader in their view of life, its responsibilities and its duties, we shall have an abiding faith that many hardships will be lightened, many grimes mended.

Does it mean, will it mean, the lowering of the standards of womanhood? Not at all, as some of us view it, rather a raising of all standards. Miss Bartelme was appointed to pass upon the delinquencies of other women because she wanted to make a new set of standards, but because she had the judicial mind and the human heart to appreciate what it means to a woman who is all tangled up in a conflict with the law and with society, the law hard, society harder. It would be a sorry day for woman if her standard of other women were a single degree. But who can look about and note the world as it is without being quite certain that it would be a happy day for all mankind, physically and morally, if the school hitherto reserved for women

AN EFFECTIVE FROCK.

Some of the best features of new lingerie gowns are combined in this design. The bodice is in a graceful and the front closing, with crystal buttons, is very decorative. The gown is made over a foundation of sheer voile, cut square at the neck and with elbow sleeves, finished with a bias fold of chiffon, put on with a beading, the neck of the overblouse being finished to match. The grille is of pink blue satin, with a wreath of pink roses used as a buckle, which adds a delicate touch of color.

NEW JEWELRY AND WHEN TO WEAR IT

French women differ very much in their use of jewelry. Some simply cover themselves with every glittering trinket they can afford at all times, and in no matter what costume. It is quite a common thing to see a petite bourgeois in bicycling costume lurching at a country inn with every finger covered with rings and the front of her blouse plastered with pendants, brooches and chains. Under her felt hat, with its severe wing, will show glittering combs, and hanging from her bag will be a dozen useless brooches. She feels happy that way, so let her wear them, but one can hardly call it good taste.

On the other hand, many of the very best dressed women in Paris scarcely wear any jewelry at all, and those of such simplicity that they are not noticeable. In the first place, a woman of taste wears only those jewels which have a raison d'être. Her hatpins will be in an artistic design in silver, gold or platinum.

One was seen the other day which imitated a wild parsley flower in fine dull silver, and in the heart of it gleamed a tiny topaz. Just as one finds in the real flower gleaming bits of color. Only Needed Brooch Worn. If she wears a brooch it is to pin some lace into place, if a pendant, it is to give not relief to a corsage; if a watch, it is to tell the time; and the latest thing is to have this useful treasure set in platinum, with a ring of tiny diamonds or pearls round the face, and then have it fixed to a narrow gray suede wristband, or a black velvet silk band, fastened with platinum buckles.

Her rings will be chosen to suit the other jewels she wears, and sometimes she will have it fixed to a narrow gray suede wristband, or a black velvet silk band, fastened with platinum buckles. If it is a first night at the opera she will put on her finest; if it be a simple party, she will wear a jeweled cigarette, perhaps a necklace, and bracelets, if she happens to find they suit her gown.

With a tailor-made she would avoid any jewelry beyond the watch and hatpins, and with her afternoon gowns she goes as far as a string of pearls or a pendant, a jeweled handbag, and perhaps bracelet; but always she is most careful to choose those stones and designs which harmonize with her costume, so that there shall be no shock to the eye of the casual observer, for the first thing she aims at in her dress is harmony.

MUST CUT EXPENSES TO PAY FOR WIDER SKIRTS
With the promise of wider skirts from Paris the cost of each homemade winter suit will naturally be increased a little, as the new skirts will most likely take a half yard more of goods than is now required to make the fashionable skirt. This does not sound like very much, but if there are many suits to be made in one family this wider width in skirts will make some difference with those who have to be careful about just such little things.

And so, we must have winter suits, and so the extra money to be spent must be cut off in other ways, but don't start with the table, as that should always be the last thing to economize on, unless, of course, we are noted for over extravagance in that line.

Prune Whip. Cook one-half pound prunes until soft, remove stones, run through the colander, then take whites of five eggs, beat thoroughly. Add one cupful sugar to prunes, then mix all together. Bake one-half hour in moderate oven. Serve cold in dish with whipped cream on top.

Tomato Catsup. Scald and peel ripe tomatoes; cook until soft and press through a sieve; to one gallon of the juice add one pint of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of salt, two tablespoonfuls of mustard, one teaspoonful of black pepper, one of ground cloves and one red pepper pod without seeds; simmer an hour or more, put in jug and cork tight.

WHAT TO SERVE TO-MORROW.

BREAKFAST.
Berries. Sugar and Cream. Kromskies of Fish. Coffee.
LUNCHEON. Boiled Rice. Curried Mutton. Lemonade.
DINNER. Tomato Soup. Breaded Veal Chop. Brown Sauce. Mashed Potatoes. Stuffed Egg Plant. Lettuce and Bean Salad. Currant Ice. Coffee.
Kromskies of Fish—Chop 1 pound of cook fish. Peel and chop 1 onion and fry it in a tablespoonful of hot butter; add tablespoonful of flour and fry them with the onion for a few minutes, then add chopped fish and stir it a little. Season with salt, pepper and a grate of nutmeg, moisten with a gill of water or stock and 1 yolk of egg, then add 2 tablespoonfuls of chopped ham. Spread it on a plate to cool. Make up into small cork shapes and wrap each in a thin slice of fat bacon. Have ready some frying butter. Dip the kromskies into the batter so as to completely cover them and fry in smoking hot fat to a golden color. Drain and serve garnished with fried parsley.

Little Suggestions Worth Remembering
Usually a rubber plant grows straight up in one stalk. To make it throw out numerous branches take a sharp knife and cut the stalk about six inches from the top, then take a little mud and place it over the end of the stalk and tie a little string around it. This is in order to prevent the mud from sliding off. This will prevent the plant from "bleeding to death." As a result the plant will put forth new shoots all the way up the stalk. Take the part that was cut off from the top and plant it in another pot. This will take root and you will have another rubber plant if it is given plenty of water. If the leaves are washed with clean water occasionally they will shine and the plant will be healthier.

When creaming potatoes cut them cold boiled; then sprinkle generously with flour and mix all together. Add the amount of cold milk desired and put all on the fire to cook. As it heats stir gently. It will thicken without lumps and be smooth and creamy. This does away with the disagreeable task of making thickening, and the whole is completed in half the time and with half the work. The same method may be used when frying beef or creaming turkey, chicken, or codfish. The same principle applies when making cocoa. It is not necessary to melt the cocoa before adding it to the milk, if you put the ingredients together before heating.

A box of fresh, dry sand is an excellent thing to have in a corner of the storeroom or pantry. If apples are carefully packed in the sand they will keep fresh and unharmed for months.

Good for Mahogany. A tablespoonful of vinegar in clear water is excellent for removing the cloudy blue-gray mark which often appears on mahogany furniture if they are not constantly wiped down. Dip a cheese cloth rag into the vinegar and water, thoroughly saturate this, and then wring it out as dry as possible. Rub the furniture very lightly with this cloth, and then polish just as lightly with a dry piece of cheese cloth.

Way to Take Grease Out. Many times grease is dropped through accident on table or floor. Few people know that instead of trying to mop up the grease with a cloth a splendid way to take this grease out is to pour ice water over the spot so as to harden it and prevent the grease from getting into the wood. After the grease has become hard it can all be scraped off without any trace of it remaining on the table or floor as the case may be.

A New Blouse. Very attractive is the new "Rol de Rome waist." This is a charming blouse made of fine handkerchief linen with the collar half open, a lace vest in the center, frills of Chantilly lace on either side, with ruffles of the same lace running up to the elbows on the sleeves.

Jeweled Animals. Animal jewelry does not decline in favor, and the new fancy is for dogs and cats made of chiseled topaz and amethyst. A marvelous amount of intelligence can be conveyed by a clever chiseling of the stones, and different kinds of dogs and also of cats are displayed. All are very small, and though some are seated inside a triangle of gold, the majority are provided only with rings, by which they can be attached and worn as charms upon a long chain.

String Beans with Veal. Select a nice piece of veal for stew, wash well, and put in stew pan. Get sufficient beans for the paning, wash, string, and cut in pieces, together with two good carrots, a small onion, and two bay leaves, a few whole peppers and salt to taste. Put all in one pan and stew for an hour. When done sprinkle with melted parmesan.

BEAVER PRIEST BURIED.
Cardinal Gibbons at Funeral of the Rev. Father Klauer.
Annapolis, Md., Aug. 1.—A distinguished array of priests of the Catholic Church, including Cardinal Gibbons, participated in the funeral ceremonies of Father Francis E. Klauer, rector of St. Mary's Church, this city, and a distinguished missionary of the Redeemerist Order, who died Monday last of pneumonia, induced by the exposure incident to his efforts to save the lives of two young women who had been bathing near here and had gotten over their heads.
Cardinal Gibbons attended the ceremonies in the church, the mortuary chapel, and at the grave, and pronounced the final absolution. A large body of the worshippers, including many non-Catholics, attended the services. Solemn requiem high mass was celebrated by Father Matthew Bohn, rector of St. Clement's Church, Washington, N. T., a co-worker with Father Klauer for many years, who also preached the sermon. The deacons were Father Matthew, of St. Cyril's Church, Washington, and Father Stern, of St. Alphonsus Church, New York. The internment was at St. Mary's Church, in Annapolis.

HEIRESS WHO ELOPED WITH CHAUFFEUR EXPECTS STRANGER IN HUMBLE HOME
Newport, R. I., Aug. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Jack Geraghty, who attracted much attention a year ago by eloping, are expecting the arrival of a little stranger in October, and the society of the famous resort is wondering if the youngster will change the attitude of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French toward their daughter, who ran away with the handsome chauffeur.
Mrs. Geraghty, who is heiress to a large fortune and whose chauffeur husband makes more money than half the men in the social swim, eloped before she had made her debut, and there was no forgiveness from papa and mamma. Consequently Mr. and Mrs. Jack went to live in a little cottage, the house that
