By STAFF CORRESPONDENT. Camp Ordway, Bolivar Heights, W. Va., Aug. 25.—Strategists at this camp exercised their nimblest wits to-day to outwit the line of mounted patrols and the half dozen commissioned officers who surrounded the tented city in order to intercept supplies and liquor. By order of Brig. Gen. Harries this camp was as dry as dust to-day, except in the guard tent, where the corporals of the guard had piled a choice collection of liquor of all sorts from ready-made cocktails to quart bottles of whiskey. Nine hundred bottles of beer were confiscated by the mounted patrols, which were strung around the camp late last night and early this morning. An mounted provost guard under Lieut. R. B. McLennan scouted through Harpers Ferry to get a line on the wagon loads of concealed liquor that must start for camp between taps and reveille.

Headache an Offense. Following the recent "dry" order from Gen. Harries, it is almost a court martial offense to have a headache in the morning, and several officers who are used to a nip of whiskey after a hard hike are forced to let down their tent walls, and place a guard in front of their tent while they measure out the requisite three fingers. Gen. Harries issued instruction to Maj. Le Roy W. Heron, inspector general, this morning, after he had learned of the attempts of the beer-blockade runners last night. The beer was brought from Harpers Ferry in bags, and left on the road. A man who was watching and waiting for the beer, had it ready to go when it appeared and take the bag over his shoulder and try to get to camp. However, the patrols of the signal company and of the artillery, under the command of Vogt, remembering the experience of last year, when they were called upon to put Frederick, Md., under provost guard, pounced on every bag brought into camp, and at one time had seized seventeen bags of the long-expected beer.

Search All Packages. Following this night attempt, many a soldier tried to bring a bottle of something into camp under his shirt to-day, and failed. Maj. Heron, acting as adjutant general, detailed Capt. Frank Lockhead and Capt. E. W. Fullam, of the First Infantry, to search the packages of the men in camp. Lieut. Beale and Capt. L. B. Eranen to assist Maj. Wallace A. McCathran, field officer of the day in commanding the situation at the gate. A large addition to the force of the provost guard to camp stopped every one of the four or five thousand visitors and searched all who had brought packages. The officers in the morning had all brought bundles and baskets containing "goodies" from home. Chocolate, pies, pickles, jam and other things with which to gladden the heart of the men in camp were laid out on the profane view of the relentless guard at the gate. In many instances nicely packed bottles of the contraband liquor were found among the suitcases, and the guards acting as sentries, had to confiscate the stuff and place it in the guard tent. The owners could take it away from camp if they could ever get it again.

Men kicked at this searching process, but the orders of the general were obeyed in every instance in spirit and letter, and the banks of the Shenandoah saw the dreary Sunday that a National Guard encampment had been in the city. The big event of the day was the full brigaded dress parade and the presentation of the twenty-five-year service medals. The parade was identically the same ceremony as that which took place on the 25th of August, 1887, with the exception that Gen. Harries was the reviewing officer. This put Col. Charles H. Oursand in command of his own regiment, the First Infantry, Maj. Leroy Heron was adjutant for the parade, and in place of Maj. C. Fred Cook, who was responsible for the success of the great spectacle. The two bands combined into one big organization and held the parade in the city with the usual spirit of the music they had selected.

Present Service Medals. Service medals were presented to the men who have been with the guard a quarter century; this incident being interpolated into the ceremony just after the camp orders for the coming twenty-four hours are read. The veterans who received these medals for the first time in the brigade's history were Col. Charles H. Oursand, commanding officer of the First Infantry; Lieut. Colonel Stephen Webster, retired; Capt. C. Eugene Edwards, First Infantry; Lieut. Charles H. Hyers, First Infantry, and Sergt. John H. W. Company A, First Separate Battalion.

This little group marched to the front of the brigade, just as it was drawn up in line, and marched forward to the general, who, with the exception of the brass of each in the order given above, this being the order of their seniority. Inspection of all camps was made by Gen. Harries, by regimental commanders and by the regular officers attached to the brigade. All equipment, uniforms, beddings, weapons, and property of all sorts was examined with minute attention in detail, and a very excellent report was made by the inspectors. Maj. Heron inspected the First Separate Battalion; Capt. Allen inspected the First Infantry; Lieut. Col. Stephens inspected the Second Infantry; Gen. Harries, accompanied by Maj. William E. Hodges, rode through all camps.
