SIX-YEAR TERM TO BE DISCUSSED

Congress May Pass a Resolution to Extend the Term of the President.

WILSON REMAINS SILENT ON SIX-YEAR MATTER

Both Houses Believed to Favor Legislation—Some Opposition Develops.

That Congress will pass a resolution in the coming session or early in the new Congress proposing a constitutional amendment extending the term of the President from four to six years and making ineligible for re-election any man who has held the office, is the belief of responsible leaders in both the House and the Senate. The question was brought forward prominently in the closing days of the last session, and resolutions prescribing a six-year term, with a provision that "no person who has held the office shall be again eligible" were reported in both Houses. An order of resolution requested that the body of the right of way in the coming session. The Democratic leaders declare that if the Senate acts on the measure the House will concur without delay.

The proposal to limit the President to one term only was made in the Senate at the height of the primary contest for the nomination waged early in the year by Mr. Taft and Cal. Roosevelt. It had the support of such men as Senator Root and many prominent Democrats and Progressives, and was endorsed by the Democratic party organization in the House.

Since the adjournment of the last Congress the Democratic party, through the platform adopted at the Baltimore convention, has gone on record in favor of the one-term idea. There has been a good deal of speculation as to how President-elect Wilson would feel by this particular declaration of his party. The Democratic leaders have been confident that whatever Gov. Wilson's feelings on this score that he will never have a chance to serve a second term. They express the opinion that the proposed constitutional amendment will be ratified by the States long before the Wilson administration comes to an end.

Upon the occasion of his nomination for the Presidency in 1908 Mr. Bryan announced that if elected he would not be a candidate for the nomination four years later. He reiterated this declaration in 1908 and 1909. He was responsible for the one-term principle enunciated in the Baltimore platform.

Some Opposition Expected.

While sentiment in Congress appears to be largely in favor of the proposed one-term amendment, the pending resolutions will not be passed without a fight. The progressives are divided on the question. Senator Cummins of Iowa is favorable to the plan. He reported from the Committee on the Judiciary the bill on Monday in the Senate. On the other hand, Senator Borah of Idaho, who is a Progressive, is opposed to the plan. He delivered a speech against it at the last session. "This proposition is not in line with the constitution," said Senator Borah to-day. "A six-year term is too long for an incompetent President and not long enough for a competent executive. No man is able to serve two terms. It is largely an experiment when he goes into office. After he has served a term of four years we have the record before us and know how to give him a second term if he has done well. It is entitled to another term. If he fails to measure up to the requirements, the people have their remedy at the end of his term. I have heard no argument advanced in behalf of the one-term idea that convinces me that it should be incorporated in the Constitution. Therefore, I shall continue my fight against the pending resolutions."

The opinion is generally expressed by politicians that unless a constitutional amendment as proposed is adopted, the one-term plank, which Democrats who are fighting four years ahead are anxious to know just what President-elect Wilson thinks of the one-term plan. They are devising ways and means to smoke him out, and are hopeful that the forthcoming discussion of the question in the Senate and House will provoke Gov. Wilson to utterance.

UNIQUE CRIMINAL ON TRIAL TO-DAY

Carl Warr, Who Held Police at Bay for an Hour with Dynamite, Puzzles Authorities.

HAD EXPLOSIVES STORED AWAY

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 24.—Carl Warr, alias Heidelberg, alias Davis, the most fantastic figure in the criminal history of California, to-morrow will be taken before Justice Warren Williams at University Police Court. This precaution of removing him from the central station for his hearing will be followed, it is believed, by extending all persons not directly interested in the proceedings.

Warr, who held the police department of Los Angeles at bay with a bomb at the headquarters last Tuesday for more than an hour and caused all traffic to be stopped in one of the busiest centers of the city, later may become a Federal prisoner. Detectives to-day learned that he had been held in jail a month in San Luis Obispo, Cal., last year on a charge of having counterfeited coin in his possession. While in jail there he attempted to end his life by starvation. The case against him there was dismissed because it could not be found how he came into possession of the coins.

Search for Evidence.

The police believe that the remarkable ingenuity and cunning he showed in making the bomb was utilized earlier in making counterfeit notes and the thorough search is being made of the Red-ditch home for buried evidence against him.

That Warr had enough dynamite in the cache to have devastated a whole city was shown yesterday when two caches were uncovered in San Bernardino County. This dynamite, of the 10 per cent grade, used by the McNamaras, was stolen from a quarry and hidden by the man.

Warr is one of the most puzzling characters the police ever attempted to analyze. His weird methods of operation and the actions that caused the purchase by the Italian navy and commander of the Ferrier, since July his job has not been an enviable one, and when he learned through the Haitian Minister that the Italian government had appropriated the $7,000 for repairs to the vessel the sun resumed its regular job of shining for him.

"Admiral" Watt's first spell of ill luck came several months before his warship limped into this port and asked to be put on the sick list. When the vessel was in the harbor at Charleston, S. C., in March of this year, shortly after the purchase by the Italian government, the "admiral," as paymaster, found himself unable to pay the crew of seventeen men who had been signed by the agents in the transaction.

Murphy was threatened immediately and such loud cries went up that the commander of a United States revenue cutter then in the harbor was obliged to prevent trouble.

Boilers Get Asthma.

When that affair was settled a more serious one developed—one that could not be reasoned with or ended by the payment of a month's wages in advance. The ship's boilers developed all sorts of affections and misbehaved unaccountably. Coughing and complaining, they continued to kick the Ferrier as far as Philadelphia, where "Admiral" Watt intended to have repairs made.

Experts came aboard and told the commander-in-chief that it would cost $20,000 to put the fighting ship in real fighting trim. With almost the last "breath" left in the Ferrier "Admiral" Watt steered a course for the United States Navy Yard, believing he could get the job done cheaper there. He was right, and a price of $18,000 was set. Then came the unkind cuts from the home government. The $18,000 was not to be obtained.

The crew quit in a body and "Admiral" Watt found himself captain, crew, and cook, with the only gold in sight the gold of his admiral's uniform. Tradersmen couldn't be paid with that, so the crew's desertion was overlooked and the commander set down in the cabin to wait for his government to act.

In August the Ferrier was practically seized for the debts which had rolled up and it was the belief in Philadelphia that she would be sold for junk. However, that fate is saved for by the timely word from Haiti that the government's possession of a large-sized bankroll will enable it to take the "navy" out of "hock."

The Ferrier, as the yacht America, cost $1,000,000 fourteen years ago.

HAITI'S "NAVY" OUT OF "HOCK"

Cruiser Ferrier to Be Repaired and Released from Navy Yard.

"ADMIRAL" WATT JUBILANT

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 24.—Once more will the Republic of Haiti take its place among the sea powers of the world. Her "navy," otherwise known as the cruiser Ferrier, and before that as the yacht America, has been resting in the United States Navy Yard at League Island for several months in an inebriated condition of disrepair, but $18,000 worth of cheer will be injected into the otherwise doleful history of the Ferrier since she assumed that name and she will soon be as proud a vessel as any afloat.

There are few happier men in Philadelphia to-day than William Watt, "admiral" of the Haitian navy and commander of the Ferrier. Since July his job has not been an enviable one, and when he learned through the Haitian Minister that the Italian government had appropriated the $7,000 for repairs to the vessel the sun resumed its regular job of shining for him.

"Admiral" Watt's first spell of ill luck came several months before his warship limped into this port and asked to be put on the sick list. When the vessel was in the harbor at Charleston, S. COLLEGIATE CLUB OPENS QUARTERS

More Than Two Hundred Members and Guests Are Present at the Housewarming.

The new quarters of the Collegiate Club at 120 Eleventh Street Northwest were formally opened last night with a housewarming party at which about forty of the members of the club and 200 of their guests were entertained. The officers elected at the last meeting in October were installed and addresses were made by several prominent Hebrews of Washington.

The guest of the evening was Simon Wolf, who addressed the meeting, and was made an honorary member of the club. The ceremony of installation was performed by Dr. A. Simon, of the Eighth Street Temple.

The club is an organization of young Hebrew men, graduates of the colleges or now studying in the colleges of Washington, and its aims are philanthropic as well as social.

Mr. Wolf, who is recognized as the leader of the Hebrew society of Washington, and has occupied a place of almost official importance, spoke at some length on the work of the club, and congratulated it on the beauty of the new building.

Mr. Wolf made an address in which he officially opened the new building and welcomed the guests on behalf of the club. Milton Strassburger also spoke on the work the club had accomplished since its organization.

The officers installed were: B. R. Schneider, of Seattle, Wash., president; N. N. Koenigsberg, of Atlanta, Ga., vice president; W. Rosenbloom, Boston, treasurer; William L. Cohen, Minneapolis, Minn., secretary; and J. J. Friedman, Omaha, sergeant-at-arms.

DISCUSSES NAVAL OFFENSE SYSTEM

Secretary of Navy Devotes Considerable Space to a Plan Which Is Proving Successful.

The Secretary of the Navy's annual report devotes some space to the detention system of punishment for naval offenses, which was put into operation on September 1, and has produced gratifying results. By means of this system naval prisoners are divided into two broad classes—first, those convicted of offenses involving moral turpitude or violation of general laws of the country; and second, those convicted of purely military offenses. Offenders of the first class, whose retention in the navy would be prejudicial to the best interests of the service, are sent to State prisons, or subjected to the rules and discipline of such institutions in the same manner as persons convicted of similar offenses by a civil court. Those guilty of military offenses whose previous records give hope of reform are sent to what are known as "Naval Disciplinary Barracks." These last offenders are called "detentioners" instead of "prisoners" because they continue to wear naval uniform instead of prison garb and instead of performing "hard labor" they are put through a carefully selected course in service drills and instructions with a view to increasing efficiency when restored to duty. These detentioners, while they are deprived of their liberty and pay during detention, escape the ignominy which attaches to persons who have served a term in prison.

After a detentioner has satisfactorily served two-thirds of the period to which sentenced, he is placed on probation at the disciplinary barracks, and, as far as possible, given duties similar to those performed by other enlisted men in the navy. During this probationary period, the detentioner is carefully observed by the officers in charge, and if his conduct warrants such action he is unconditionally restored to general duty in the navy.

Aside from the help given the individual, the detention system, which operates in transfer to one of the camps and gives strict instructions to each recruit.

The naval disciplinary barracks at present in operation are located at Port Royal, S. C., and at the navy yard, Puget Sound, Bremerton, Wash.

Resents Ovation Given Mrs. Story; Quits Conference

Indignant at an ovation given Mrs. William Cumming Story, her opponent for president general of the D. A. R., Mrs. John Miller Horson, of Buffalo, the independent candidate for that office, left the state conference of Massachusetts Saturday and thereby declined to give the greeting from Buffalo chapter she had promised.

Washington Daughters, who received news of the happening in Massachusetts, state that Mrs. Horson did not send regrets to social functions for which she accepted invitations, and that her only excuse was that she was going to the horse show in New York. It is said here by Story's supporters that the Massachusetts Daughters resent Mrs. Horson's sudden departure and that Massachusetts probably will go unanimous for Mrs. Story next April on account of this occurrence.

WILL WAGE FIGHT ON COMMISSIONER

Democrats to Oppose Confirmation of Gen. Johnston if he Is Reappointed.

HIS POLITICS IS QUESTIONED

Confirmation of Commissioner Johnston's reappointment, if it is sent to the Senate in January by President Taft, as is expected, will be bitterly fought by the District Democrats, the battle being waged along the same lines as marked the struggle against Gen. Johnston three years ago.

But the Democrats hope for more success this time. Three years ago, members of the Young Men Democratic Club opposed confirmation of Gen. Johnston's appointment, on the ground that he was not a Democrat, and that his appointment would be a violation of the president's promise to appoint a Republican.

When the makeup of the Senate as it will be constituted during the remainder of President Taft's administration, the Democrats of the District claim they can prevent the confirmation. Gen. Johnston's reappointment they will make no fight, it is stated.

The fight against Gen. Johnston will be accompanied by a demand that both the civil Commissioners of the District be appointed by the Democrats. It is asserted that inasmuch as a Republican President chose two Republican Commissioners for his party, it is alleged that there are two or possibly even more Democrats in the District willing to accept the positions, which pay good salaries.

Indeed, there are plenty of Democrats to take whatever office the municipal government can afford. Campaigns for the places are so well under way now that they are hardly talked about except among the parties of the first part, so to say. Besides the Commissionerships there are offices of District Attorney and United States Marshal and several other court-house places which are tempting.

The several factions of Democrats in the District are watching out for their favorite candidates' interests, too. National Committeeman John P. Costello occupies a central position, and about him are circling members of those three

HUMANE OFFICERS ARE OPTIMISTIC

They Believe New Traffic Regulations Will Help the Lot of Abused Horses.

Officials of the Humane Society said last night they believed it probable that new traffic regulations which are expected to be adopted will contain a requirement that all "commuter" wagons be equipped with breakers, so that handspikes such as those to which some of the animals used in hauling material out of the Arlington Hotel site are obliged to be submitted will be obviated.

"These complaints incident to the removal of excavated material from the Arlington Hotel site are nothing new," Secretary John P. Heap, of the Humane Society stated. "We have the same trouble from excavation work of practically every large building erected in the District."

"We anticipated trouble at the Arlington site and had men inspecting conditions there from the time work was started. We were constantly in touch with the situation and knew of the conditions under which teams were being worked long before there were any complaints from citizens."

"Now, as in the past, we can do little because there is no regulation requiring the use of breakers. The Commissioners are willing to do what they can, and have investigated provisions of their authority to see if they can afford any relief. We need an ordinance requiring breakers on commercial wagons."

Governor Attends Church Services in Bermuda—To Visit Island Parliament.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald.
Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 24.—President-elect Wilson and his daughter Jessie, drove to-day to the United Free Church, the oldest Presbyterian church in Bermuda, and heard a sermon by the Rev. A. Cameron. In his prayer the divine asked the blessing of Heaven upon the King, the Governor General, and President Taft, and especially beseeched the closing months of President Taft's term to be peaceful. He also asked that Woodrow Wilson, "the savior of the Union," and his family, be blessed with the spirit and peace of God, and that they be preserved from all evil.

"He is honored as the leader of a nation, may his administration be one of peace and of prosperity."

Tomorrow Gov. Wilson will visit Parliament, and on Tuesday will be joined by Gov. Gen. Hollick.
