RUBENSTEIN CLUB'S AFTERNOON CONCERT

Exceptional Drilling Shown by Chorus at Recital at New Raleigh Hotel.

Perfect training was apparent in every member of a delightful program given at the first afternoon recital of the season by the Rubenstein Club in the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel yesterday afternoon. Few who listen to an organization such as the Rubenstein Club suspect the hard labor for which the chorus and director necessary to attain the high artistic finish of this chorus.

No one could doubt that the chorus had been relentlessly drilled by a most able and thoroughly intelligent director. The program, consisting of the tone quality, purity of enunciation, and shading have been brought to a very high point of art. How apparently easy, yet how difficult to preserve the texture of voices, the perfect freedom of phrasing, to achieve the perfect swell of the crescendo, and the even, gradual fall of the diminuendo to a pianissimo that almost vanishes, such as Mrs. A. M. Blair, could tell.

Dynamic expression under Mrs. Blair's leadership of color or dramatic vitality. The high attainment of passing the most softly whispered pianissimo without loss of carrying power or vitality is one of the tremendously difficult achievements of this chorus. One sees long and arduous training behind all that, and a skillful use of light and heavy voice.

"Spring Weather" by Chadwick, opening the program, was an intelligent and artistic rendering, and in this and in the "Before the Daybreak" and "The Rose" the shading and interpretation were a delight. The series of climaxes mounting to an exciting key in the "Danish Song" was remarkable. The acrobatic and titanic passages also were great traits.

Mrs. Burdette played a most admirable accompaniment. A good accompaniment is so rare that it is so much to be desired in a chorus of really artistic work in that department.

Miss Sandoz, first violin of the Philadelphia Orchestra, played two groups of three numbers each. Mr. Sandoz was in at his best in the first group. In the second group, which consisted of his own compositions, Mr. Sandoz seemed to have received from some counterpoint or base, making up in time, phrasing, and interpretation for his first way of writing in the first performance. Of his own compositions, the "Danish Song" for solo, the "Eberhard" and "Autumn" are interesting as giving fair promise of still better work.

A general feeling of satisfaction was expressed by the audience, and the concert was a most successful one.
