TARIFF MAY GO TO WILSON FIRST

Bill to Be Submitted for President's O. K. Before Caucus Sees It.

The text of President Wilson's call for the extraordinary session of Congress, to meet April 7, places members of both Houses. He leaves it to Congress to determine what measures shall be considered to meet the requirements of the "public interest" that necessitated this extraordinary session.

CALL PLEASES MEMBERS

Order for Extra Session Leaves Wide Latitude for Business to Be Taken Up.

It became known yesterday that the House Ways and Means Committee, which is preparing the tariff schedule, is willing to submit the completed bill to President Wilson before it is even laid before the Democratic caucus, and all he has to do is to indicate his wish that such a course be followed.

WILL FOLLOW SUGGESTIONS.

This has been decided on by the committee to give the President an opportunity of considering the provisions of the bill before the completed bill is laid before the House. If the President objects to features of the bill, the committee members themselves will thrash them out with him, and, if necessary, will change the bill to meet his views.

DUTY HIGH ON LUXURIES.

The committee intends to have the bill completed in plenty of time so that it can be called upon to submit all the schedules to the House as soon as Congress convenes. The question whether this should be done or whether the bill will be offered in accordance with the schedule will be up to the House to decide.

CASE PIVOTS ON TREATY.

The case pivots on the law observance of the Italian-American treaty by the Italian authorities. Charlton's lawyers alleged that though this treaty provided for the prompt surrender of criminals upon the demand of either government, Italy had consistently refused to live up to the agreement.

CHARLTON CASE NOW IN COURT OF LAST RESORT

Attorneys Carry Appeal to Supreme Tribunal to Save Slayer.

HOLD TREATY IGNORED

Decision Expected Shortly After Easter Recess—Has Dragged for Several Years.

In preparation for the final effort to save Porter Charlton from being extradited to Italy for trial for the murder of his wife at Lake Como, in the United States Supreme Court the brief upon which he bases his last hope.

DEFENSE OUTLINES CASE.

It is asserted that in the treaty word "person" does not include citizens of the country in which the alleged criminal has taken refuge. It is also asserted that under the facts and circumstances of the Charlton case and the diplomatic correspondence between the two governments, in which it is admitted that there has been a breach of covenant on the part of Italy, that a citizen of the United States accused of committing a crime in Italy and found guilty by a court of justice in this country can be extradited.

CHARGE ACROSS SEAS.

It is asserted that the treaty is no longer effective, that the case should be dismissed. The attorneys base their appeal upon the contention that an error was committed in holding that the extradition treaty was in accordance with the principles of international law. They claim that the President cannot infringe upon the rights of a citizen, because the country of international law is to the effect that persons of his race are not to be extradited to a country where they will be subjected to a trial before the Supreme Court shortly after it reconvenes after the Easter recess.

SEARCH FOR YOUNG CHARLTON.

The body of Mrs. Mary Scott Castle Charlton, who was killed in Italy, was washed ashore of Lake Como, Italy, in June, 1910. It was in a horribly mutilated condition, showing plain marks of violence.

NEWS OF CHARLTON'S WHEREABOUTS.

News of Charlton's whereabouts was called to the New York police, and on his arrival in Hoboken, N. J., on June 17, 1910, he was promptly put under arrest. Within an hour he was confined to the police that he was guilty of the murder.

THE WRIT WAS ARGUED THROUGH THE COURTS OF NEW JERSEY, APPEAL BEING TAKEN FROM EACH DECISION OFFERED TO THE DEFENDANT.

The matter then went to the Federal courts and finally to the Supreme Court.

Body Identified.

So mutilated was the body that identification was impossible, until Mrs. Dora Spence, teacher of the millinery class, identified the hat the woman had carried. It had been picked up by Miss Wilson, and was the one to which Mrs. Collins had been assigned in the classroom. Prof. Frank C. Daniel, principal of the school, also went to the hospital to assist in the identification.

Williams Arrested.

How Williams failed to see Mrs. Collins in the glare of the bright lights at the intersection of the thoroughfares in time to avoid striking her is a question which Coroner Nevitt will seek to have answered at the inquest to-day. Williams was arrested shortly after he removed Mrs. Collins' body to the hospital.
