

INDIANS MAKE GIFT TO WILSON

Chief Plentycoups Presents War Bonnet to the Chief Executive.

OTHERS REMEMBERED

Order Signed to Spend $400,000 for Cattle for the Crow Indians.

Before leaving for their reservation last night, the Crow Indian delegates called to pay their respects to Secretary of the Interior Lane. Chief Plentycoups presented to the Secretary, for the President, the war bonnet which he had worn in the inaugural parade. Medicine Crow, who was the first Crow Indian to break ground for the Crow reservation twenty-five years ago, presented the Secretary with a beautiful tobacco pouch ornamented with bead work. White Man (Him) presented to Mrs. Abbott, wife of Acting Commissioner Abbott, a pair of gauntlets which he had worn in the inaugural parade, and on the occasion of the breaking of the ground for the national monument to the North American Indian at New York Harbor.

Secretary Lane presented the three chiefs with three bronze medals bearing the picture of the President in relief. Secretary Lane and the Indians had an extended talk, the Secretary starting the "pow-wow" by telling Chief Plentycoups that his daughter, little Miss Nancy Lane, to whom the chief recently presented a handsome pair of gauntlets, is all the time talking about her meeting with the chief.

"I am telling you that I do not believe all I hear, but I am telling you I think what I know," said Chief Plentycoups. "I see people when I look at them. I can't read, but I read nature and see men's characters. I have seen four Secretaries in my time; I have made five trips to Washington. I like your talk, and I see in your eyes and your actions that you appeal to me in a way that I like to be."

Prize Commissioner.

"The commissioner has been on my reservation, whether it was coin or not he did not care; he went to see and get facts as they existed, and he got them; that is the kind of a man I like. I like the commissioner and I like you. The Indians under the control of the commissioner have been on their reservation, and he has been there and found out our character."

"That is what I like because I believe that but of you would make a good team to pull this Indian problem. You represent President Wilson, and I want to give you my compliments with my fellow Indians for the great work that you have got before you."

"I have got my little territory to look after. I have got my hand of Indians to work for. I want to present you war bonnet; it is an emblem of my chiefship, and I wish you would present it to the President as a token of my friendship."

"Chief, on behalf of President Wilson, I accept this as evidence of your loyalty to him," responded Mr. Lane.

"What is the name of the man who was younger, in a fight," said Chief Plentycoups.

"This means that it will no longer be war bonnet, but a peace bonnet," said Mr. Lane.

"That is good," answered the chief.

"You give this to our President, who is your big chief and my big chief, as an evidence that you no longer are at war with him, but you give over to him the evidence of warfare," Mr. Lane said.

"Now he wishes to give you something to return as proof that he is your friend and that he will remain your friend."

Here the Secretary presented pictures of President Wilson to Chief Plentycoups, Chief White Man Runs Him, and Mountain Crow.

"When white men wish to show their friendship for each other they give their pictures to each other," continued Mr. Lane. "This is the picture which he gives to you. You say you know how to read men's faces, look at that man's face and you will see an honest man and one who keeps his pledge."

More Money for Indians.

Chief White Man Runs Him said: "I am an old man like your chief; I also can read human nature by looking at men's faces. What you say and what my chief says with reference to the President and all the Interior Department, and also of the Indian Office I want to say 'How good.'"

"The commissioner there has been in office three or four years. He has been on the reservation to see the conditions existing there, not only on our reservation, but on different reservations. He has been tried and found true. It is bad policy to change him, and my chief is not getting old now, my hair is turning gray and I have got the best part of my life scouting for Custer and fighting with him, and I put in a claim for a pension under the law. I want to want to appeal to you officials to push that matter for me as a personal favor."

Secretary Lane informed the Indians that the commissioner has found a way by which they can have some cattle on their reservation.

Mountain Crow presented the Secretary with a handsomely beaded tobacco pouch, and spoke as follows:

"I was the first Indian that broke ground on our reservation twenty-five years ago. I am going back soon. I have got a son. He might come to Washington, but if you recognize this face you would recognize my son. I appreciate your kindness and I want to thank you for the kind treatment that has been extended to us. I have been to Washington twice."

"I want you to feel free to write to me as to how you are getting along," Secretary Lane stated.

The Secretary, in the presence of the Indians, signed an authority for $400,000 for the purchase of cattle for the Crow Indians. This was one of the chief objects of the visit of the Crow Indians in Washington. The pen with which the Secretary signed this authority was presented to Frank Shively, the interpreter.

In addition to the $400,000 for the purchase of cattle, $20,000 have been set aside by the Indian Office to be loaned to members of the Crow tribe who are willing to undertake improvements with the view to farming and stock raising. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars has also been set aside for the use of the blackfeet Indians for farming purposes and purchase of stock. During the last ten days more than $2,000,000 have been sent out to Indians at various agencies for the purpose of purchasing seed and farming equipment, in order to stimulate agricultural interest among Indians of different tribes.

HOWARD A. BANKS CHOSEN

North Carolina Newspaper Man Made Secretary to Naval Head.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels yesterday afternoon announced that he had chosen Howard A. Banks, editor of the Hickory Democrat, a newspaper at Hickory, N. C., to be his private secretary.

Mr. Banks was formerly Washington correspondent for the Charlotte Observer.

GARRISON AND HAY DISCUSS THE ARMY

War Department Head and House Military Affairs Chairman Briefly Talk Over Legislation.

DIFFERENCES ARE MINOR

War Department policies were discussed yesterday by Secretary of War Garrison and Representative James Hay of Virginia, who will succeed himself as chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs.

At the conclusion of the conference Mr. Garrison announced that he and Representative Hay were in entire accord on all policies regarding the army and differed only as to details. Inasmuch as it is the details which have usually caused the difficulty between the War Department and Congress, regard to army legislation, the general belief here is that the situation will not materially change.

Secretary Garrison says that no army legislation is expected before the regular session of Congress, beginning next December, but that he expected to see harmony and co-operation between the War Department and Congress.

It is known to be Secretary Garrison's purpose to endeavor to do away with the friction heretofore characterizing the relations between the War Department and Congress. Differences were especially pronounced during the last two years. Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood and his ideas of reorganizing the War Department were frequently and sharply attacked by Representative Hay during that time. Since Secretary Garrison only a few days ago issued a statement announcing his adoption of the chief features of the Wood policies on military matters, it is believed that Representative Hay must have undergone a change of heart if he is the Secretary now differ only as to details.

WEBB LAW CASES GO TO McREYNOLDS

Treasury Official Says Dry Act Cases Come Under Department of Justice.

It is up to the Department of Justice and the United States district attorneys, and not the internal revenue officers, to enforce the regulations of the liquor traffic as provided by the Webb bill, according to a decision made yesterday by Internal Revenue Commissioner Cabell. Already State officials in Kansas and North Carolina, dry States, have made seizures of liquor shipped into those States in violation of the law, and the cases have been taken into the courts as test cases.

Members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and other anti-liquor societies have registered vituperous complaints with the Internal Revenue Bureau at what they claim to be a lack of enforcement of the law in the dry States. In answer to these complaints, Commissioner Cabell has drafted a form letter in which he says: "This bureau is not charged with the enforcement of the Webb law. Questions relating to the effect or the enforcement of its provisions should be addressed to the United States attorney in your district."

Mr. Cabell also stated that he would abide by this construction until the test cases shall have been passed upon by the courts. It is thought likely that a satisfactory decision may not be had until the cases are carried into the United States courts.

TREASURY OFFICIALS MISS WEEK'S WAGES

Former Gov. Burke and John Skelton Williams Fail to Report Here.

William G. McAdoo is off to New York for his third week-end vacation from the strenuous duties of his office. He left yesterday afternoon and will return Monday morning. Since issuing his statement last Monday, warning office-seekers that they will accomplish nothing by calling upon him in person, the Secretary was busy with the duties of his office. Mr. McAdoo declined to say what Parr's chances are, although it was admitted that he has strong New York backing. His in-pursements are more from business than from political interests. It is understood that Collector Loeb was the original inducer of Parr for his office.

Former Gov. Burke, of North Dakota, has lost one full week's salary of his $2,000 a month. He left his office Thursday after being lured in Chicago Thursday by wired Secretary McAdoo that he would show up for his job yesterday, but he failed to put in an appearance. His induction into office will now await Mr. McAdoo's return. John Skelton Williams, of Richmond, Va., also has missed a week's pay by not taking the train to Washington. He was thrown open to him last Monday. The latest word is that he will report for duty next Monday. The appointment of Robert W. Woolley as an Assistant Secretary will go over to the reconvening of Congress, when his name will be sent in for confirmation. It was announced yesterday.

THOMPSON SERVICES MONDAY

Late Assistant Attorney General to Be Honored.

Arrangements for a memorial service in honor of the late Assistant Attorney General John Q. Thompson have been completed by the Bar Association of the Court of Claims, and will be held in the courtroom on Monday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Resolutions, recently adopted by the association, will be presented, and addresses made by members of the bar, who were close friends of Judge Thompson. A cordial invitation to be present is extended to all of Judge Thompson's friends.

QUIZ DAUGHTERS OF MRS. EATON

Authorities Seek to Learn Identity of Person Who Bought Arsenic.

LETTER FURNISHES CLEW

Hingham, Mass., March 21.—Mrs. Ralph Keays and Miss Dorothy Alsworth, the step-daughters of Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, were put through a long examination this afternoon by State Detective John H. Miller, Deputy Sheriff John T. Condon, in an effort to learn the identity of the person who purchased the arsenic, with which it is alleged the admiral was murdered. Officer Scott admitted that another woman might be arrested shortly in addition to Mrs. Jennie May Harrison Eaton, who was yesterday charged with her husband's death. The detectives are very anxious to learn from Miss Alsworth all she knows in connection with the presence of poison in the Eaton home at Assinippi.

While the police were making every effort to identify their suspect against her, Mrs. Eaton planned her defense with her two attorneys in her cell at the Plymouth jail. Earlier in the day she had sent a note to her daughters, bidding them to be cheerful and to take care of her mother, Mrs. Harrison, who is dangerously ill at the Eaton home.

Letter Furnishes Clew.

It was learned today that a letter written by the dead naval officer a few days before he died to a cousin in Boston was the principal clue to the case against Mrs. Eaton. The district attorney learned of the contents of the letter only a few hours before Mrs. Eaton was hurriedly taken from her home. While the contents of the letter are not yet fully guarded, it is known that through it, the police believe they have found a motive for the alleged murder.

With the removal today of the search for the drug store where the poison was sold and the intimation that a second woman would be arrested soon, it was made plain that the hypothesis of the police is working on will be the charge that Mrs. Eaton sent a woman close to her confidence to purchase the poison, and that the purchase of the death poison was fully aware of the use to which it was to be put.

Chief Justice Aiken, of the Supreme Court, today ordered that a special grand jury be impaneled to hear the evidence against Mrs. Eaton. This action was taken at the request of District Attorney Barker, who is anxious to have an indictment returned, if possible, before the start of the trial for the continued hearing of Mrs. Eaton's case in the Hingham court.

Max Seek Lunacy Commission.

It was strongly intimated today that a lunacy commission would be asked for before Mrs. Eaton could be brought to trial. Max Keays, who is the subject of the report, owing to the statements made by Admiral Eaton some time before his death that his wife was crazy over the subject of arsenic, is being held in a friendly way by the continued hearing of Mrs. Eaton's case in the Hingham court.

Mrs. Eaton remained calm during her first day in jail. She arose at 8 o'clock and asked for a light breakfast, and then requested the jailer to allow her to take exercise and to keep busy sewing or at least to read. She was a determined throughout the investigation and at the time of her arrest has been a source of wonder to all connected with the case. Her husband, a well-known woman held her self-control so well under similar circumstances.

MRS. EATON SWORE OUT

WARRANT FOR AINSWORTH WHOM SHE HAD DIVORCED

In connection with the arrest of Mrs. Eaton, widow of Rear Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton, it was recalled yesterday that her former husband, C. B. Ainsworth, a Chicago book agent and father of her two daughters, appeared in Washington about six years ago, after she had obtained a divorce from him and married the admiral.

Records at the Third precinct station show that Mrs. Eaton swore out a peace warrant against Ainsworth, whom it was alleged, had bothered her second husband and heretofore in a friendly way. At that time Admiral Eaton and his second wife were living at 1918 I Street, Northwest.

Mrs. Eaton's mother, Mrs. Virginia Harrison, widow of George Harrison, lived in Alexandria, Va. Although a native of the Old Dominion, Mrs. Eaton was appointed from Michigan to a position in the United States Post Office Department in 1872, resigning in 1910.

The first wife of Admiral Eaton, who before her marriage was Miss Annie Varman, died in this city of cerebral apoplexy, caused by arterial sclerosis, on February 6, 1908. She was fifty-eight years old and a native of Dracut, Mass. The second Mrs. Eaton, now under arrest, married the admiral in 1907, after she died, the attending physician being Dr. F. Fremont Smith. Interment was in Glenwood cemetery the day following death. On May 11, 1908, the cadaver exhibited an arterial sclerosis, a condition which is a direct result of the disease and taken to the birthplace of the first Mrs. Eaton for reinterment.

FLORAL TRIBUTES SENT

Friends of Miss Leslie Remember Beautiful Chorus Girl.

London, March 21.—Many beautiful floral pieces, including a beautiful wreath from Arthur Deason, have been sent to Southampton to accompany the body of Miss Frances Leslie, which leaves on the St. Paul tomorrow for New York.

The flowers were sent by various members of the London Opera House Company and bear the simple words, "from those who knew her best." Other floral offerings were sent by the opera house management.

NEW TRIAL FOR CADETS

West Point Men, Dismissed for Intoxication, Have Another Chance.

Secretary of War Garrison will reorganize the court-martial which expelled four West Point cadets from the service last August for intoxication. It was made known at the War Department yesterday that this order will be issued within the next twenty-four hours. Those officers on the court-martial who are in the Philippines will not be recalled when the court is reconvened.

With the reorganization of the court-martial, the names of the four cadets, T. D. Simpkins, and James G. Christian, the four cadets expelled, will be given a second trial, and the original sentence will be lighter.

The cadets are charged with having purchased intoxicants at Fort Montgomery, N. Y., on August 4, 1912. President Taft commuted the sentences of three other cadets for a similar offense, but the same sentence will be applied to the court-martial to stand in their cases. Since then there has been a widespread agitation for a retrial of these four cadets.

ATHLETE COMMITTEE SCHEDULE

The quantity of mineral oil imported into this great oil-producing country has grown from 2,500,000 gallons in 1902 to 238,000,000 gallons in 1912.

TRENTON OFFICIALS SEE FORMER CHIEF

Gov. Fielder and Other Jerseyites Talk President About Things Back Home.

DISCORDANT QUINTET TO ANSWER ROLL CALL THE DAY CONGRESS CONVENES

President Wilson was made to feel yesterday that his influence in New Jersey has not waned with his relinquishment of the head of the State's government and that the still is looked to as the "big boss" by ambitious Jersey Democrats. All this came with the visit of Gov. Fielder, State Senator J. Fred Davis, Democratic leader of the Senate, State Chairman Crossen and other Jerseyites to the President at the White House.

They assured the President that they were supporting heartily his demand for a jury reform bill to be enacted directly and without any sort of referendum to the people of the State. Also they assured him of their confidence that next week they will be able to muster the votes necessary for the passage of the measure in the desired form through both houses of the State Legislature.

Mr. Wilson intervened first in New Jersey by objecting to the sort of referendum which had been attached to the bill in the New Jersey Senate in a form of which he had approved beforehand. Out of deference to the support mustered by the former Governor's demand, the House amended the measure so as to require a referendum, which it was believed would have no objection. It required the participation of only 10 per cent of the voters. Mr. Wilson then went a step further and "suggested" that the referendum in any form whatever be eliminated.

RED CROSS PREPARED FOR ANY TROUBLE

Miss Mabel Boardman So Tells Woman's National Press Association.

Miss Mabel Boardman addressed a meeting of the Woman's National Press Association at the Raleigh last night. Mrs. William Oscar Rouse presiding. Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood introduced the speaker.

Speaking of the work of the Red Cross Society, Miss Boardman said: "The Red Cross would have been ready at any time should trouble have come with Mexico. Our base hospital have been at Galveston." Miss Boardman spoke of the need of visiting nurses in rural communities, where they are more needed than in the city. The necessity for teaching women to take care of their own family was particularly emphasized by the speaker, who expressed the wish that the Red Cross Society would have a suitable building in Washington symbolizing the philanthropic spirit of the American people.

Miss Boardman spoke of the reorganization and incorporation of the Red Cross Society, and defended her committee against unjust attacks in the newspapers. The humorous side of the work was brought out by Miss Boardman, who said she received almost every day all sorts of suggestions, propositions, threats, promises, and proposals, and things of this sort. The speaker asked the audience to cooperate with the Red Cross Society and work and help in the work of the Red Cross Society.

Mrs. Owen Kildars spoke on Boy Scout work and urged a deep gratification that this work is doing so much to assist the boys in the slum.

FIVE FACTIONS COMPOSE HOUSE

Discordant Quintet to Answer Roll Call the Day Congress Convenes

DEMOCRATS ARE SPLIT

Middle West Members Want Good Committee Assignments and Oppose Farmers' Free List.

Five conferences will be held early in April by the five different political organizations that will have representation in the membership of the new House of Representatives.

The Bull Moose herd will "round up" on April 2. The Progressive Republicans will meet on or about that date. The insurgent Democrats will hold a caucus on April 4. The day following the regular Republicans will be called to order. A few days later the Democrats will hold a party caucus to consider the tariff revision programme. Things are becoming so mixed in a political way in the House that old-time politicians are becoming somewhat bewildered. There will be no organizations of Republicans in the new House, regulars, near-Republicans, commonly known as Progressives, and almost-pure Progressives, who call themselves Insurgents. The insurgent Democrats come from the middle Western country. They are out of tune with the Southern Democrats, who dominate the House, and want better committee assignments than they think they are going to land. Fear is expressed by the leaders that some of the insurgent Democrats may join at times with either the Bull Moose or the Progressives.

Taken all in all, Democrats as well as Republicans look for a lively time in the new Congress. There are possibilities for combination in all these different political elements that may stir up trouble before the tariff programme is put through the House. The Middle Western Democrats not only want substantial recognition in the way of committee places, but they threaten to join hands with the Republicans, Progressives, and Bull Moose, all of whom are protectionists. If the tariff bill proposes to put farm products on the free list, the radical Democrats will make an attempt to put practically all farm products on the free list. If the radicalism in caucus it will result in a most determined fight in the House. The protection Democrats from the West, in conjunction with the Republicans near-Republicans and Bull Moose, would undoubtedly under circumstances join hands with Southern members who want protection for citrus fruits, lumber, and other products in which the South is vitally concerned.

Bull Moose Plans.

In addition to nominating Representative Victor Mardock of Kansas for Speaker, the Bull Moose will on April 2 put forward a comprehensive legislative programme. They will not formally propose changes in the Democratic tariff bill.

The plank in their platform dealing with this subject declares that before the tariff is amended that the question shall first be made the subject of careful inquiry by a nonpartisan board. The Bull Moose will present bills on corporations, conservation and other subjects that were discussed in the platform adopted at Chicago.

At their meeting on April 4, the insurgent Democrats will discuss ways and means to obtain good committee places, and appoint a subcommittee to see to it that the products of the Middle West are given adequate protection.

It is feared by the determination of the Bull Moose to nominate a candidate for Speaker, the Progressive Republicans will meet to decide just what is to be done to save them the necessity of voting for the Bull Moose. Much is feared that if they vote for the Kansan that there will be no further excuse for them to use the name "Republican." Far strategic reasons they are favored to call themselves Republicans, although they have not had anything to do with the party organization in the House for a long time.

On April 5 the regular Republicans will meet to nominate Representative James R. Mann of Illinois as their candidate for Speaker, and doubtless at the same time they will all vacancies on the Republican Congressional Committee.

ROUGH RIDER GETS FORTUNE

Armand de Lamar Heir to Part of $15,000,000 Estate.

London, March 21.—Armand de Lamar, once a Cuban rough rider with Buffalo Bill's show, has suddenly become a multimillionaire. He received the news through an advertisement which appeared in a London theatrical paper. A letter was waiting for him at the stage office from his mother, informing him that he was heir to a sixth of his grandfather's estate, the whole amounting to $15,000,000. This estate had been in the hands of the Cuban government, which, through a long search, found that the old planter's next of kin were the de Lamars, living in New York.

Mrs. de Lamar has gone to Havana to claim the estate, which is to be divided among her children, of whom Armand is the eldest. He is leaving in a few days to join his mother in Cuba.

"Movies" Halt for Three Hours.

Boston, March 21.—At the request of Mayor Fitzgerald, all theaters and moving picture shows were closed for three hours today in observance of Good Friday. The city hall and other municipal offices closed at 2 o'clock.

Skeleton of Giant Lizard Sent National Museum

Complete Framework of an Armored Dinosaur, Weighing One Ton, the Most Valuable Specimen in the World, Found in Colorado, and Now Exhibited Here.

A new exhibit of exceptional interest in the new building for the National Museum is that of a skeleton of an armored dinosaur, or extinct gigantic reptile, scientifically termed Stegosaurus stenops Marsh. This fossil monster is of the Jurassic age, and was found near Canyon City, Colo., by Mr. M. P. Felch in 1885. Since that date it has been the subject of much study by paleontologists, and for this reason has remained for a long time unexhibited to the public. Now, however, the various parts have been assembled under the direction of C. W. Gilmore, and placed in the relative positions in which they were originally found.

The fossil skeleton is about twenty feet in length and weighs about a ton. It is quite complete, having nearly every bone in place, and in this respect is the most valuable specimen of its kind in the world. Not only the bones, but the armored plates and pads are plainly to be seen, as well as many of the wonderful plate-like spines which adorned the back. Nearly all of these plates are present in this specimen, while in other instances only a few have been recovered. Strangely enough, this great lizard-like monster of the remote past evidently met his end in some violent manner, for his bones were discovered lying in a position which shows that the animal was on its back when it became entangled with sand and earth in which fossilization has preserved its bones. As it is mounted in this position, views of the back and upper parts are to be seen only by the aid of mirrors cleverly arranged below it to show these points of the frame structure.

This newly mounted dinosaur is one of many specimens belonging to the O. C. Marsh collection, transferred to the museum some years ago by the United States Geological Survey.

Just How It Looked.

From a restoration of this same species of reptile, which stands on another platform, one can get an idea of its probable appearance in life. Their bodies were stout and tapering, beginning at a small, slightly diminutive head, swelling to a rather thick middle, and again growing smaller toward the long conical tail, which looked like a combination of those of a kangaroo and lizard. Their forelegs were short, and added to their kangaroo appearance.

The tails were armed on either side near the tips, with large spines which varied in length from several inches to nearly three feet. It can be easily understood that when swung by a tall ten feet in length, these spines could inflict terrible wounds on any animal which ventured within reach. It is difficult to believe that they lived on grass and other plants alone, although the form of their teeth indicates that such was the case.

They were probably of a low order of intelligence, as they have extremely small brains. Doubtless they only possessed sufficient sense to enable them to walk about, eat and sleep. It is for this reason, perhaps, that they were so well protected. Not being in the least clever or even wise enough to protect themselves, they were incased in a suit of armor calculated to make their enemies, if they had any, very cautious about attacking them.
