DOUGLAS BEFORE WRIGHT PROBERS

Attorney Explains Financial Relations with Accused Jurist.

AS TO WOMAN'S VISIT

Jurist Met Mrs. Raucher at Ambrose's Office, Which Has Two Doors, Testifies Clerk.

A detailed story by Charles A. Douglas, a local attorney, of his financial relations with Justice Daniel The Wright of the District Supreme Court was completed before adjournment yesterday afternoon of the McCoy subcommittee of the House District Committee, which is investigating Justice Wright's conduct.

The fact that during a period in which Charles A. Douglas, as counsel for the Washington Railway and Electric Company, tried sixty-five cases before Justice Wright, he was almost always one of indorsers on notes made by Justice Wright in order to carry through financial operations in connection with the United States Savings Bank, in which both Douglas and Wright were interested.

Theodore L. Block, clerk for Mr. Ambrose, was on the stand most of the day. He was responsible for the story of Justice Wright's visit to the office of Ambrose on the latter's invitation, and when Mrs. Raucher was present. Block could think of only one specific incident in his chambers having been explained by Justice Wright and Mrs. Raucher.

Block also testified that he, on one occasion had purchased, under instructions from Ambrose, a mileage book for Justice Wright, which he had explained as being for the purpose of enabling Wright to purchase enough stock to qualify as a trustee of the United States Savings Bank.

Charles A. Douglas was on the stand when the committee adjourned. According to Mr. Douglas, the first note of Justice Wright's in which he (Douglas) acted as indorser was carried at the residence of Wright to purchase enough stock to qualify as a trustee of the United States Savings Bank.

Douglas on Stand. Charles A. Douglas was on the stand when the committee adjourned. According to Mr. Douglas, the first note of Justice Wright's in which he (Douglas) acted as indorser was carried at the residence of Wright to purchase enough stock to qualify as a trustee of the United States Savings Bank.

Co-trustees Sign Note. In order to pay his share of this amount, Justice Wright borrowed $400, his co-trustees, N. A. Winter, first vice president; James L. Karkick, second vice president; Charles O. Rice, a member of the board of directors, and Mr. Douglas, president of the bank, going on the note. Later this note was taken up by Justice Wright.

JOHN R. EARLY, who yesterday told the story of his travel from leper colony to Washington.

EARL PROUD OF TRIP HERE
Lepor, Now Resigned, Tells How He Met Noted People.

WANTS NATION TO ACT

Content to Live in Quarantine Here as an Example to the Country.

John Early, the leper, placed under restraint Tuesday by the District authorities, when he revealed his identity at a fashionable hotel after a two-day residence there, told The Washington Herald that he would move freely about in the best hotels and restaurants of the country. He rode in company with former Attorney General Grey, of Florida, and his family on a Canadian Pacific train from Vancouver to Montreal and in an elevator Monday rubbing elbows with Vice President Marshall.

Contented, he moved about the narrow grounds of the Lazar House on the Potomac, examining the roses he planted there six years ago and talked of his plans as a national exemplar, which he claims was the sole motive of his return to the National Capital.

Admits He Is Lepor. "I know I am a leper now," he said wistfully. "I am resigned to my own fate. My wife and children have left me. I am alone in the world. My doom does not terrify me. But I want my case to serve as a great national example and bring about the proper treatment of unfortunates like myself."

"I believe there are thirty or forty lepers walking the streets of New York today. This should not be. To demand that I should stay in a leper colony is to me a disgrace. I am for a present trip six months ago. I knew that it is only when a great truth is sent home to the hearts of the people that action is paid to it. I know that if I mingled among the well-to-do, and the rich and exposed them to contagion that they would arise out of self-protection and further my plan of a national home. That is why I chose the Pullman cars, which I slept at the best hotels, ate in the best restaurants."

President Harrison, of Southern Railroad, Receives Encouraging Reports from System's Agents.

President Harrison, of Southern Railway Company, speaking yesterday of the outlook for this year's cotton crop, said:

"The government cotton report issued on June 1 indicates a substantially better condition in the States traversed by Southern Railway lines than in the corresponding date last year. This bears out information received from our agents. Some uneasiness has been caused by reports of drought in the cotton States east of the Mississippi River, but generally speaking, weather conditions along our lines have been most favorable for growing a crop good star. The lack of excessive rains has facilitated the cultivation of the crop and reports from the territory along Southern Railway lines indicate that it is unusually free from grass and weeds."

"Reports from the territory into which the cotton boll weevil had spread last year indicate that it will probably be found in fields in all that territory this year, but the farmers know more about combating the pest in Hyattsville on Saturday terminated fight against it. With reasonably favorable weather conditions for the remainder of the season, there is a good chance of a crop to be expected in the States east of the Mississippi River."

TO TRY WHITE HOUSE DRIVER. Chauffeur Johnson, driver of the White House automobile, who was arrested by Constable Garrison at Hyattsville, Md., several days ago, will be arraigned for a hearing in Hyattsville on Saturday morning. The hearing will be conducted by Justice of the Peace S. O. Wiseman, and it is probable that State Automobile Commissioner Roe will take part in the hearing.

BRYAN WILL RECOVER W. BURWELL'S BODY

As Soon as Located, Capital Man Shot in Mexico, Will Be Brought Home.

Following an announcement at the State Department yesterday confirming reports of the execution by Mexican Federalists of Weston Burwell, son of H. H. Burwell, London Office clerk, of 602 Maryland avenue northeast, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, a personal friend of young Burwell, said he would arrange to have his body brought home as soon as it can be located.

Official information is that Weston and an American companion, whose name is still unknown, were shot to death in the Tamiahua Lake district, near Tampico, about two weeks ago. The report that Burwell was executed on a log, being investigated through the State Department. Evidence adduced at his trial now is being sought by Mexican authorities, it was announced.

Burwell was thirty-one years old and the eldest of five children. His mother is prostrated. He was construction engineer for the Dutch Shell company, engaged in work for a dam near Tampico. Leaving the District public schools at the age of twelve, he went away and had not been home since. He had spent the family on a Canadian Pacific train from Vancouver to Montreal and in an elevator Monday rubbing elbows with Vice President Marshall.

He was last heard of on April 25, being in the company of a friend of the Navy Department that he had seen Burwell at Panuco trying to buy mules to replace some stolen from him by Mexicans. In his letters home Burwell often spoke of his love for the Mexican people and their apparent devotion to him.

BRYAN TELLS "GRADS" OF $500,000,000 MEN

"There Are Many More," He Says, After Mentioning Jefferson and Lincoln.

"ETHICS OF ACCUMULATION"

Secretary of State Bryan started to give a list of $500,000,000 men at commencement exercises at Howard University yesterday. He got as far as Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln and then stopped.

Mr. Bryan went deeply into the question of accumulation. He coined a number of epigrams. He started off his dissertation with the statement that he had had a chance to study the ethics of accumulation.

"All human beings should study the question, how much can a man rightfully collect," he said. "Note the emphasis on the word 'rightfully.' We cannot rightfully collect more than we honestly earn. We cannot honestly earn more than we measure the value of our service to society."

"A man can earn $500,000,000. There have been many men who have earned that. There are more services in the world than Lincoln was more valuable to this country than $500,000,000. There are many more."

"A man should desire to earn more than he collects. If we had a list of $500,000,000 men since the world began, we should not find in a single case that it had been collected. Men who have earned $500,000,000 have not so busy earning it that they couldn't collect it. Men who have collected it have been so busy collecting it that they didn't have time to earn it."

"A man who doesn't earn more than he is paid for does not lead a useful life. If we keep the books ourselves we may overdo it. There are more services in the world than Lincoln was more valuable to this country than $500,000,000. There are many more."

Mr. Bryan did not make any modern comparisons. He did not refer to a man who had been a politician that he would be doing justice to the people by getting out.

"My legal ambitions led me to Nebraska," said Mr. Bryan, telling of the different stages of his life. "I went into politics by accident, and stayed in by design."

Mr. Bryan said that he was nominated for Congress because none belle i that he could be elected.

Rev. Dr. F. Wilson delivered the invocation. Following the speech of Secretary Bryan, President S. M. Newman conferred degrees to the graduates.
