Today's Photo Drama

A Belg detective drama, featuring Stella Rasetto and Guy Oliver, will be released by that company October 13, and the synopsis is as follows:

Edward Collins is the head of the "Crime Syndicate" in New York. He is stylish and plausible, and is altogether an attractive and clever rascal. He happens in front of the postoffice when Rita Garvey turns her back on him.

Rita returns home and relates the incident. She has been impressed by the appearance of Collins and persuades her mother to call him on the telephone and thank him for his courtesy to her daughter. Collins cleverly follows this up and soon became a staunch friend of the family.

Harry Garvey, the wayward son and junior member of the firm, has met through an intrigue of Collins and beautiful Auburn-haired confederate of the thieves, named George Wells. His conduct with her is becoming notorious and embarrasses his family.

A big shipment of diamonds is announced at the dinner table, and Nell transmits this information to Collins through a private box in the postoffice. In the meantime, Collins proposes to Rita and is accepted as her fiancé.

The diamonds are duly delivered by a special messenger, who is escorted by two detectives. Unknown to them, they are shadowed by Dick Little, Secret Service operative. The diamonds are placed in the safe in the store, and "Buck" Wade, who is watching from the window across the street, signals the news.

Among the guests at the ball is Dick Little, Secret Service man, uninvited. He was born in 1890 and is now counsel for the New Haven Railroad. His brief in defense of that corporation during the recent government suits against it is looked upon as one of the finest legal documents executed in years.
