An ideal wedding gown for a summer bride was that worn by the former Miss Julia Goldsborough on the occasion of her marriage a week or two ago to Mr. Matthew Tishman Johnston.

The bridesmaids' gowns were also white lace, but worn with deep girdles of pink satin, and round hats of pink crepe, just as perfect in their way as the bride's toilet.

A fascinating tailored suit in which young Mrs. Johnston is wearing on her honeymoon travels is a dark green gabardine with a circular skirt and snappy little hip length, just like any number of well tailored suits worn by graceful young women.

TURPINTINE MAY COMBAT GASES

King George Opposes Its Use, Which Lord Kitchener Strongly Advocates.

HAS WONDERFUL POWER

Japs Aid Russians with War Material Since Germans Were Forced to Leave Far East.

Special Obit to the Washington Herald. London, May 29.—Ever since the Germans first began to use asphyxiating gases great pressure has been brought to bear on the war office to combat the enemy with his own weapons, or rather with a far superior one of the same character. This is turpentine, beyond a doubt that it possessed all the qualities claimed for it by its inventor.

At the beginning of the war, considerable space was given in French and English papers to this explosive and expert in France proved beyond a doubt that it possessed all the qualities claimed for it by its inventor.

It is King George personally who here in England opposes the use of turpentine, while Lord Kitchener is said to think the use of it justifiable as the only means to counterbalance German methods of warfare.

Japanese Help Russians. The correspondent of a Paris daily paper writes from Yokohama:

"Thanks to the complete annihilation of the German war vessels on the high seas, Japan has been able to assist Russia in the most substantial way with practically everything she needed during the difficult months when that empire has been practically cut off from the outside world."

"A wonderful transformation has taken place in Japan. Products which were formerly imported are now being exported, such as incandescence mantles, which Russia before the war imported from Germany. A Russian official arrived here and asked if Japan could manufacture these, and a few weeks later the first shipment was ready for export, and the Japanese mantles, which are made from silk, are far more durable and give a better light than the German."

Washington Journalist Writes Of Maryland History Makers

Announcement Made of Publication of "Maryland in National Politics," by J. Fred Essary. Individual Careers of Statesmen and Legislative Builders Carefully Reviewed.

Announcement was made yesterday of the publication of a new book under the title "Maryland in National Politics" by J. Fred Essary, Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun.

This is a handsome volume of 110 pages and deals exhaustively with the statesmen and statesmanship contributed by Maryland to the nation during the past century. While this book is designed primarily to comprehend Maryland's share in national politics, it proceeds further than that by reviewing many of the stirring events in the life of the Federal government, events which furnish an historic setting for the group of Marylanders sketched by the author.

In the course of the fifteen chapters in this volume, Maryland's representation in twenty Cabinets, in the Diplomatic Corps, upon the United States Supreme Court, in the various Presidential contests and in the House and Senate, is entertainingly discussed. The individual careers of such men as John Hanson, first "President" of the United States in Congress Assembled; Charles Carroll of Carrollton, last survivor of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; Luther Martin, defender of Aaron Burr and Samuel Chase, Roger B. Taney, fifth chief justice of the Federal Supreme Court; Reverdy Johnson, senator and leader of the "Know Nothing" party; Montgomery Blair, Postmaster General under Lincoln; Arthur P. Gorman, Democratic chief and senator; and Admiral Schley, are reviewed with a wealth of interesting detail.

This book also dwells at length upon such important events in American history as the signing of the Declaration of Independence, the adoption of the articles of Confederation, the process of forming a Federal constitution; the impeachment of Samuel Chase; the dramatic trial of Aaron Burr; the diplomatic effort to prevent the war of 1812; the effect of the Dred Scott decision of the Supreme Court; the organization of the Republican party; the schism in the Lincoln Cabinet; the first election of Cleveland; the fight against the force bill and the trial of Admiral Schley before the naval court. The publication of this book is Mr. Essary's first venture as an author. Two years ago he compiled and published the "Addresses of Senator Rayner" and at the same time compiled and edited a companion volume, "The Essays of Isidor Rayner."

KAISER EXAMINES SUBJECTS' TABLES

Imperial Commission of Experts Holds Country Ate Too Much.

TO KILL PIGS AND COWS

Animals Eat More Than They Produce in Meat—Sewers Show Housewives' Wastefulness.

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Special Cable to The Washington Herald. Berlin, May 29.—With wonderful self-control and self-sacrifice the entire German people has willingly submitted to the food regulations laid down by the government and very little is heard about the great food question among people in general. This, however, does not mean that the question has ceased to exist, on the contrary it is being dealt with by government experts with characteristic German thoroughness.

Immediately it became evident that England had the means to maintain a serious, if not complete, blockade of this country a commission of sixteen persons, among whom were three physiologists, one practical housewife and several experts on political economy, agriculture, and statistics was appointed. This committee assuming that Germany were cut entirely off from the outside world, began to examine how much food, how many calories, to use a scientific expression, were needed to keep a population of 68,000,000 alive for one year. The committee's confidential report distinguishes between albumen, carbohydrates and fat and figures that one grain fat gives 9.3 calories, one grain carbohydrates gives 4.1 and one grain albumen also 4.1 calories. It says that a grown up man needs 3,000 calories of food a day, a woman 80 per cent of this, babies 20 to 30 per cent and a child of 14 80 per cent. On this basis the people of Germany need 57,700,000,000 calories to keep soul and body together for one year.

Going into details the experts then arrive at the result that the amount of albuminous food needed during one year is 1,666,000 tons. Before the war the German people consumed 36,000,000,000 calories and 2,307,000 tons of albumen a year, or in other words they ate much more than necessary. An examination of the foodstuff on hand showed that Germany possessed 67,800,000,000 calories and 1,542,000 tons of albumen when the war broke out.

The lack of labor in the country districts is being remedied by making the prisoners work in the fields, horses are being supplanted by oxen and mechanical power. The greatest menace, however, is the lack of fertilizers, especially Chile nitrates of which Germany used 55,000 tons in 1915, while not a single ton reaches the country now. The loss is being made good partially by natural manure, but the evaporation of the nitrogen from this causes an annual loss to Germany of $120,000,000 it is figured. Pigs are being killed because the food which a pig consumes will feed twice as many human beings as will its meat and fat. By killing 5,000,000 pigs and 1,000,000 cows it is hoped to save 1,275,000,000 calories and 217,300 tons of albumen. Besides, everything is being done to do away with the daily waste in house-keeping. The importance of this will be realized when it is stated that by peeling the potatoes before they are boiled Germany loses 2,000,000 tons a year. The same applies to fat, for the famous food expert, Prof. Rubner, has examined the water of the Berlin sewers and has figured out that through these alone 25 per cent of the amount of fat needed daily is going to waste.
