PROFESS LOYALTY TO U. S.

Philadelphia German-Americans Bitter with Alphonse G. Koebke.

Philadelphia, Aug. 25.—German-Americans here are bitter with Alphonse G. Koebke, president of the German-American Society of New York, that he is a traitor to the United States.

"I don't doubt if Mr. Koebke is quoted correctly, for it seems beyond me that a man of his standing would make such a statement," declared Louis F. Schuck, president of the German-American Society of Philadelphia.

"I am an American born, I am American first, last and always."

"From my association with German-Americans I have learned to be loyal to the United States. A war between this nation and Germany would be a terrible blow to them."

As German-Americans we are loyal to the United States. I have no comment upon statements like this."

HAND REFEES OF BIG UTILITIES

Vice President of Washington Railway and Electric Company Testifies.

RECEIVED POWER FREE

Public Service Commission Probes Connection Between Two Corporations.

Declaring that the connection between the Washington Railway and Electric Company and the Potomac Electric Company has aided in the material reduction of the price for electricity in the District, W. C. Ham, vice president of the former corporation, yesterday afternoon told the Public Utilities Commission at a hearing in the District Building that the interests of the people would be served by the divorcement of the two concerns.

The commission favors the separation of the two corporations and is conducting an investigation to determine the exact relations between the companies in order that the desired end may be brought about speedily.

Mr. Ham admitted the railway company in 1913 received without cost from the electric power company all the power used by the railway company, and enough to sell to other railway companies and to make therefrom $7,516.10.

Tells of Contract.

Corporation Counsel Conrad H. Syme added from Mr. Ham the statement that while the contract was in effect between the two concerns proved that the railway company in return for power should pay to the power company 5 per cent on the gross production of electricity, not a cent actually had changed hands.

Mr. Ham declared the written contract had been verbally modified, so as to provide for indirect instead of direct payment.

Mr. Ham said there were a number of considerations which indirectly might be looked upon as ample payment for the power supplied. He pointed out that the railway company had guaranteed $7,000,000 in Potomac Electric Company bonds and explained that the enormous consumption of power by the railway company enabled the power company to engage in large scale production of electricity and thus materially decrease the cost and consequently the price offered to consumers.

A request from Maj. Charles W. Kutz, Engineer Commissioner, who is presiding at the hearings, for a statement as to the propriety of the contract between the companies brought this reply from Mr. Ham:

"When you consider tangible and intangible properties, it is almost impossible to determine the value of each company. We are operating very much as one company. We use the properties of each other and we use some of our properties jointly. We would lose our efficiency if we had to account separately for all our properties. We don't feel we have to hold ourselves at arm's length the same as if we were dealing with separate companies.

"The electric power company is furnishing electricity to the railway company of the large scale production made possible by the enormous amount of power demanded by the railway company. The power company is not a separate entity. It would be had it not entered into the contract of 1906. And consumers have not been injured by the arrangement. Both companies have been benefited by the arrangement."

"It was the lending of credit by the railway company to the power company that made the contract possible. Mr. Ham, prior to the contract the power company had to spend a cent a kilowatt to produce electricity; the cost of production had been $1.00. It is turning out a number of consumers has been increased from 5,000 or 6,000 to nearly 25,000. This couldn't have been done without the combination."

"If the power plant was half its size but would produce the same amount of electricity," asked Maj. Kutz.

"It would cost the power company from 25 to 35 per cent more to produce the same amount of electricity," answered Mr. Ham.

"A simple solution of the problem would be to consolidate the two companies and end the argument. We don't want this proposition. We would like to see the power company. We don't want wheel within wheel. I assume the commission could deal with a consolidated corporation just as well as with two separate companies."

If Jitneys are declared common carriers and will subject them to regulations and restrictions. The commission some time ago announced that this action would be taken as soon as the buses became sufficiently numerous and as soon as they became fairly well established.

In a manner the Jitneys already have been recognized as common carriers, for the commission has issued an order forbidding passengers on them to ride on the running boards.

Whether the Jitney bus is a common carrier probably will be decided by the Public Utilities Commission this week.

The hearing yesterday on the relations between the Washington Railway and Electric Company and the Potomac Electric Power Company prevented the commission from giving consideration to the Jitney problem.

It is more than likely that the commission will close the Jitney as common carriers and will subject them to regulations and restrictions.
