Wilson's Suffrage Statement Will Aid Cause, Say Women

President Expected to Support Reform as a State Issue. Secretary Garrison and Joseph Tumulty Will Support Movement in Election.

President Wilson will shortly make known his position on the subject of women suffrage. His friends say that he will give his support to the reform as a State question. Mr. Wilson will vote at Princeton, N. J., on October 19 on the proposed amendment to the State constitution providing for equal suffrage.

Mr. Wilson will issue a statement on the subject of suffrage. In discussing suffrage the President will make it clear that he has not modified his conviction that the national movement is wrong in principle and that women should seek the right to vote through the medium of the States.

"I cannot see that any harm whatever can come to the body politic by permitting the women to have the ballot. I am somewhat in doubt if the great reforms that its earnest advocates claim will flow from giving woman the ballot. Therefore, the case as it presents itself to my mind is this:

"It does not seem to contain any danger; and if it does bring benefits, so much the better. On the one hand, the only question to be considered is the extra expense involved in practically doubling the number of voters. This consideration I think is entirely negligible.

"If you refrain from giving the ballot to women, you will always have a very large part of your population convinced that the State is losing the opportunity to obtain the great results which would come from permitting them to participate in elections. By giving them the ballot, we give them the opportunity of producing these reforms; and if they do so, it certainly will be a matter for great congratulation upon all sides.

"If they do not do so, and if on the whole it turns out that the ballot in the hands of men produces just about the same results as when women also participate, no harm will have come from it, and a great subject which is now diverting the attention of the people from vital public questions will have been removed from the arena of discussion."
