THE THINGS YOU CAN DO.

"Make a list of the things you can do. Then shorten the list to the things you can do well. Shorten it still more by retaining only the things you enjoy doing. Pick out whichever of these things nobody else is doing in your town. Now you have hit on something you can do, love to do, and have a field for."

This, according to Mme. Atlanta Nicolaides Homer, a Washington girl who is making a business success in New York, is the way to make a success.

The greatest mistake a woman can make in starting a business, Mme. Homer explained, "is to undertake something a lot of other people are doing."

We hear a great deal about American-made fashions now-a-days. We spend a great deal of time priding ourselves that we are no longer dependent on Paris for our modes, and we even spend a deal of sympathy pitying the Parisians because they have lost their prestige in matters of dress.

But this is a war that prepares for peace. All wars are for that matter. One of the things that people are talking about most in Europe is about what they will do "when the war is over."

So don't imagine, Miss America, that just because Parisian importations have practically stopped for a few short seasons—that just because you are content now to wear American-designed frocks, and just because you have signed your name to a pledge to wear only "made-in-America" clothes—that the day of Parisian styles is over.

As a matter of fact when the war is over Paris will have styles to offer us that will be more charming and more original than anything she has offered us for many years.

Aunt Chatty's Mothers' Club Conducted by Mrs. Charity Brush

WHAT A GIRL SHOULD READ.

THIS is a real Mothers' Club, for the benefit of mothers everywhere who are struggling with questions of discipline, training, education, clothing, for the children. Write to Aunt Chatty of problems which are vexing you, and she will advise and help you to a solution of them.

Co-operation is the secret of success in any business; so why not in the business of motherhood, that highest and holiest calling which always has been and always will be woman's crown of glory, no matter what other avenues of usefulness may be opened to her?

Some time ago I promised A. R., a little Brooklyn girl, to devote one of our club talks to reading for girls. While I am writing this especially for A. R., I am sure many of our members will be interested in it, for the careful mother is even more concerned about what her daughter shall read than is the father himself.

Now, I am not going to give A. R. a list of the late novels. I am so old-fashioned that I do not think young girls should read very many novels. Nor am I going to try to hint at half the things she must read to acquire herself with the literature she should know; that I could not do in a whole volume, if I had time to write it.

It is easier to read if you are growing up in an atmosphere of books—if you have a good-sized public library at your disposal. You will pick up and read many a book in idle hours that you would never look into if you must deliberately go to a public library to choose something to read.

First of all, I think it is a good plan to have some one good, solid work for the winter's reading. You need not read more than half an hour a day, or twenty minutes, but if you do that much regularly you will be surprised to find how many good books you can read in time.

Children go through certain phases in their development and the "bad word" or "swear" phase is an early one. For your comfort, I will say I have never known it to last long if the parents are people of refinement. The child soon sees that he does not hear such things at home, and he will not pay too much attention to it if he were you.

FAMOUS WOMAN HER BIRTHDAY AND YOURS

October 4—Margaret of Scotland.

Margaret of Scotland, who was born October 4, 1425, was the daughter of James I., of Scotland. When she was still a very young girl an arrangement was made between the Kings of Scotland and of France for an alliance between the daughter, later Louis XI, and the Princess Margaret. According to the arrangement the King of Scotland agreed to send Margaret to France with 6,000 men if the King of France would send a fleet and would cede the county of Saintonges.

The French King was much in need of outside help at the time he agreed to this but with the help of Joan of Arc he regained his power at home and did not need the reinforcement of men that the King of Scotland had promised. So he never fulfilled his part of the contract.

Margaret of Scotland is best known for the interest she took in poetry. She surrounded herself with a court of young women of poetic tastes and used to spend the entire night in composing rondeaux. To Alain Chartier, one of the most gifted poets of the time, she gave especial encouragement and gave him the advantage of her royal patronage.
