PRACTICAL HEALTH TALKS
Lillian Whitney, M.D.

Dr. Whitney's popular articles on health and beauty subjects in several leading magazines have been attracting marked attention for a number of years. No other writer on similar topics is better equipped for the work. Dr. Whitney has established an enviable reputation as a specialist and is endowed with the ability to make herself easily understood by her readers. She will answer all letters relating to her department as promptly as possible. All letters should be accompanied by a stamped envelope and should be addressed care of this paper.

WRINKLES.

It is best to treat wrinkles before they make their appearance—that is, to guard against them by controlling the facial muscles—for wrinkles are largely the result of muscle habits. To laugh habitually induces crow's-feet and lines from the nose to the chin. Impatience, peevishness, anger and similar emotions mar the face with frowns and ugly furrows. Skin that is very thin wrinkles more quickly than the other kind and requires more care.

Answers to Queries.

A Reader: I cannot recommend the preparation you mention. Ironpitan is a food and you can do no better than take it for several months. Your weight will increase. Some simple breathing exercises will be published in a few days.

C. M. G.: There is nothing comparable to the tonic given "A Reader" for flesh building. You are, of course, much under weight. As your blood improves your skin will become clearer. Exercise and breathe the open air. Peroxide of hydrogen is a good bleach, also lemon juice.

Troubled: Have you read my articles on the hair that have appeared during the last month? If so, you must have found the very remedy for your trouble. However, I will append another formula just for your case: Salicylic acid, 20 grains; tincture of benzoin, 1 dram; olive oil, 2 ounces. Rub gently but thoroughly into the scalp at bedtime.

Traveling Dolly: Read and apply to your own case the article on wrinkles in today's issue. A chin belt would help you.

Constant Reader: Your letter must have been delayed in transit. I am sorry not to be able to give you the advice you seek. Chronic deafness can scarcely be caused by a condition which a suggestion through this column would remedy, especially as you have used various aids, pianos, without effect. Why not consult a reputable ear specialist and abide by his advice?

Anxious: Daily scrubbing with loofa mitts and a bland soap will gradually remove the "goose flesh" on your arms. Electrolysis is the only sure method for the destruction of superfluous hair. Try to bleach them with equal parts of genuine peroxide of hydrogen and water, applied every day as often as possible. Let the solution dry into the skin. Apply it with absorbent cotton.

NEW-YORK-DAY-BY-DAY.
O. O. MCINTYRE.

Special Correspondent to The Washington Herald.

New York, March 5.—The first appendicitis party has been given in New York. The host was Jack Abbott, an automobile man. The party was given in a prominent club evening, and at midnight the next day the host entered a hospital to go under the knife.

At each plate was a card, which read: "Jack Abbott, Broadway's cut up, will get a little of his own medicine tomorrow. Those desiring to be pallbearers kindly hand in their names tonight. A lunch will be served at the grave."

Quite gawsome, indeed, yet the friends of Abbott say that they joshed him so about his fear of the operation that he did not have any fear at all, and the attending surgeons say that his recovery from the shock of the operation was quite marvelous.

The party lasted until the early morning hours. The favors were coffins and papier mache skulls and crossbones. During the evening the host received jubilant telegrams from undertakers, florists, professional mourners and the like.

Jess Willard has been the sensation of New York the past week. Everywhere he goes admiring eyes follow him. The big, strapping fellow has a rural awkwardness about him that smacks of the Kansas prairies and makes him very welcome to Broadway.

He is stopping at the Colonial Hotel, far uptown, but manages to get around Times Square every day to give the soiled away the O. O. He was much amused at the way the newspapers scoffed at his attack of the grip and attributed it to an attack of zero weather around his feet.

"When I first became ill," said Jess, "I got in touch with Dr. F. M. Plank, of Kansas City, who is a sort of medical father to us Kansans. He prescribed for me and soon the chills that had been tangling up and down my spine decamped. I then began to read the newspapers and saw that most of them sized me up as a quitter. It became so interesting to read these reports that I simply gave out an impression that I was going to quit. It is the only way in the world to get a proper view of a quitter—and take it from me this view is not very pleasant."

Toto, the Hippodrome clown, is to be married. Every time Toto falls on the ice at the Hipp a girl named Hanna Frick helps him to his feet. So well has he been boosting him lately that his heart has been won. After they are married, the bets on the Rialto are that when he falls she'll let him lie there.

George Kadell is New York's "picture man." What the city editor is to his newspaper, Kadell is to all the newspapers in New York in the way of securing news pictures of the big events all over Greater New York. If a subway accident occurs, he is there with a photographer there a few minutes after the accident and he must have the pictures into the newspaper office in time for their extra editions—providing the news warrants pictures.

Not long ago he was training a green young photographer. There was a riot at a political meeting. The new man was hustled to the scene in an auto. He took pictures after picture chock full of action and then hurried back to the office of the photograph house where Kadell is in charge.

Shortly afterward Kadell emerged from the developing room, tearing his hair and acting like one of Dr. Cook's recently discovered Borneo wild men.

"If there anything wrong?" asked the new man.

"No, nothing at all," replied Kadell, sweetly sarcastic. "You just forgot one little thing—and that was to put plates in the camera."

EVEN as a youngster I never rebelled when the broom was put into my hand and I was told it was my turn to sweep the front porch and steps.

I rather enjoyed it, just because I had learned to make a little game of it. The game certainly had no great originality, but the outcome of it was to see how well I could accomplish my task. Believe me, I wished that broom with such a vengeance I generally plumped myself upon the bottom step, not only to rest, but regard with pleasure the fruits of my labor.

Then Lottie and I invented another game when we had to wash the dishes. The cups, saucers, and plates were passed by quickly, as they were the most interesting part of the work, but when it came to the knives and forks, which all children particularly dislike because they have to be so carefully wiped and scoured to keep from tarnishing, our game began. We played that the forks were young society belles who had to be dressed to go to a ball, and the knives were spruce, handsome young beaux who must look very spic and span or the shining young belles would refuse to accompany them.

First, I would wipe a fork and then I would polish a knife, while Lottie would diligently pair them away. And lo! before we knew it the washing of the dishes was done!

I have always enjoyed taking care of my own room and my dressing room at the studio, for I feel that we express much of ourselves through our environment. Even if our surroundings are not what we would choose, we can at least stamp our individuality upon them.

How I admire the housewives who give so much of their lives to the upkeep of their homes! It almost amounts to a religion with some women, for to them their home is their temple—the shrine of their happiness.

Some philosophers have said that an untidy home is the sign of an untidy mind. And verily do I believe it. Many a censure the housewife who gives so much of her day to the beautifying of her home. They criticize her, admonishing her: "In this progressive age you should make yourself more mentally attractive. There are better ways of expressing your individuality than by the dustpan and the broom."

I do not altogether agree with them. These Marthas of the world are the women who make good wives and better mothers. Ask the women who prefer their careers to homemaking and the kernel of their principles is that every woman has a right to choose her own vocation, the thing

Answers to Correspondents.

"Anxious"—We do not advise girls whom we know have talent to keep away from the stage, but we only admonish them, like the fable of old, to look for their landing place before they leap. Not all girls who attempt to become screen or stage favorites succeed.

B. P. Rosie B.—I would advise you to see a scalp specialist, as you should take care of your hair. Curly Auburn hair is something every woman would envy, and hair is "a woman's crown of glory."

Thank you very much, Emma S., for your little poem which you composed yourself. I wish I had room in this column to publish it.

"Interested"—I have never been a brunette, nor have I ever worn a blonde wig. It is all my own natural hair. I have worn a black wig twice—in "Little Pal" and in "Madam Butterfly."

Jefferson, Iowa, March 5.—Charles Dohsine, waiter in a local restaurant, bet $1 at even money last night that he would go ten blocks barefooted in the snow and with the temperature hovering around zero. HUNDREDS WON BY MISS WILSON

President's Daughter Converts Large Audience to Forum Plan.

PICTURES IN AT WORK

Explains at Public Library Meeting Johnson Bill Providing Paid Secretaries for Community Gatherings.

Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the President, won an audience of several hundred people to the support of the Johnson bill, providing for the establishment of public forums with paid secretaries and overruling the stand of the Board of Education at a session of the Grover Cleveland Forum in the Public Library yesterday.

Miss Wilson's reading of the bill was interspersed with discussion of its meaning and pictures of the school building of the future. She depicted the schoolhouse as the scene of staid public debate and as the stage for lighter activities of the youth.

Dances, fetes, motion picture exhibitions and social gatherings in the evening would follow the serious endeavors of the pupils in the day. The adults would assemble to thrash out important public questions.

"You know your parents try to provide socials and parties for your children. You grant them the use of the front parlor and perhaps place a chaperon over them.

Recreation for Young People.

"Now consider these affairs on a larger scale. Have the schoolhouse as the parlor. The paid secretary would be the chaperon. And we would have community parties and dances for the uplift and honest recreation of the young people."

Placing themselves in support of Miss Wilson's endeavors and the Johnson bill were Representative Crosser, of Ohio; Rev. John Van Schaick and Dr. Theodore C. Merrill, of the Bureau of Chemistry. Many extemporaneous speakers from the audience endorsed her efforts.

Rev. Dr. Van Schaick said the Sunday forum was the floor where partisan and sectarian lines would be thrown off. Representative Crosser said the people of the District should "insist" upon self-government as soon as they had established the forum under act of Congress. Referring to the Board of Education, he said:

"I cannot see how any body of men can say when or where the people should meet. It provokes me that such high and mighty and omniscient men should assume to dictate to the people. It is not proper that the people should have to go on their knees to some servile of theirs to get the use of their own building."

Not a Dissenting Voice Heard.

Dr. Merrill spoke of the relation of the forum to public health and of the organization as an efficient vehicle for distribution of propaganda and findings of scientists for the betterment of the public health.

Several persons from out of the city endorsed the movement when the audience was invited to express opinions after the program speakers had concluded. No dissenting expressions were given by the large number of speakers from the floor.

MILITIA ROLL REQUEST FOUND HARD TO MEET

Corporation Counsel Syme Delves Into Records Seeking Light on Law Requiring Enrollment.

Corporation Counsel Conrad H. Syme spent Sunday turning the pages of dusty record law books in an effort to find some court decision that will enable the Commissioners to explain to Brig. Gen. William E. Harvey, commander of the District National Guard, why they cannot comply with his request for a record of all male citizens of the District between the ages of 18 and 45 years eligible for military service.

Gen. Harvey wrote the Commissioners Saturday, reminding them of a law passed by Congress twenty-seven years ago, making military service in the District National Guard compulsory for all male citizens between the ages above mentioned. The law provided that the Commissioners should furnish such a list.
