MISS GALLIGAN WINS SWIM.

Captures 500-Yard Race for the National Championship.

New York, March 31.—Miss Clara Galligan won the 500-yard swim for the National Championships, endorsed by the A. A. U. meet held by the National Women's Life Saving League tonight. Incidentally she shattered three unofficial national records. Her time of 8 minutes 1-3 seconds establishes an American record. This was the first national event for women sanctioned by the A. A. U. Lucy Freeman, of the National Women's Life Saving League, and her clubmate, Millie Barteld, followed the winner in the order named. Miss Galligan broke two intermediate unofficial records the 200 and 400-yard marks. An hour after winning the title event Miss Galligan won the 100-yard handicap swim from scratch after finishing first in two heats. Nellie Pavitt, of Germantown, Y. W. C. A., with 17 seconds handicap, was second. Miss Galligan's time was 1 minute 11 2-5 seconds.

It proposes to build eight large cargo steamers and two passenger vessels, which are to be larger than the fast ships of the Canadian Pacific line.

Hang Up Your Receiver

When you have finished a telephone conversation, hang up the receiver. This signals the operator that the conversation is concluded.

The receiver should never be left off the hook while the line is not in use, as this prevents any incoming calls, however important, from reaching you. On a party line it prevents anyone else on that line from using the telephone.

COL. DODD MAY BE MADE A GENERAL

Heroic Figure in Defeat of Villa Forces Lauded by Washington Officers.

WILL RETIRE NEXT JULY

Within Last Few Years Army Clique Worked Against Him—Heroism Refutes All Charges.

The spectacular defeat of Villa's forces at Guerrero in all likelihood will be the stepping stone to promotion for Col. George A. Dodd, the heroic figure in that exploit, according to the views of army officers in Washington yesterday. They believe he will be made a brigadier general. Col. Dodd is 63 years old. He will reach the age of retirement July 26, next. There are no brigadier generals who will retire until October, when Gen. M. M. Macomb reaches the age limit of 64, and November, when Gen. Clarence Edwards will attain the retirement age. The new army increase bill, however, will raise a number of colonels to the rank of brigadier general. Col. Dodd's friends in the War Department declare he should be the first so promoted. There were many yesterday who believed Congress should pass a special act, as was done in the case of Col. Goethals, to advance Col. Dodd to brigadier general.

Dodd's Praises Are Sung. Army officers sang Col. Dodd's praises yesterday. Brig. Gen. Ernest A. Garlington, inspector general of the army, and a classmate of Dodd's at West Point, spoke in praise of the "wiry hard nut who at 63 spent ten days in the saddle and then led a small cavalry charge with the recklessness of a cub lieutenant." Friends of Col. Dodd recalled that within the last four years efforts were made by an army clique to retire him. Col. Dodd was charged with being out of date. His enemies said his usefulness had ceased.

It happened that Col. Dodd stood first in line of promotion among cavalry colonels. There were officers below him who wanted to be "jumped" over him when the time for promotion came around.

Adj. Gen. McCain supported Col. Dodd warmly. He placed him in charge of the recruiting barracks at Columbus, N. Mex. He proved himself the most successful recruiting officer in the army.

One plan he hit upon was to have the applicants for enlistment photographed in the clothes they wore when they presented themselves. Then he would have them photographed in uniform. He would have the recruit mail these photographs home. He forced the recruits to write letters to the folks at home. He saw that the men were treated right. He was an enlisted man's man, rather than an officer's man. The officers resented this. Some of the younger officers did not know Dodd's record in the Indian campaigns and in the Philippines. When Col. Dodd led the cavalry forces on their 100-mile drive to join Pershing's forces the officers who had been criticizing Dodd found he still had a lot of fight left.

Col. Dodd was born in Pennsylvania in July, 1852. He was appointed to West Point in 1872, graduated in 1876, and advanced through the grades until he reached the rank of colonel in 1908. He served one year on the army general staff, but that was his only active chair detail. He has spent the rest of his forty years of service in the field.

G. W. PAPER USES NEW WEATHER FORECASTS

Debated System of Long Distance Prognostications Published Weekly in The Hatchet.

The Hatchet, weekly student publication of George Washington University, has evidenced its faith in the newly discovered Carothers system of long-distance weather forecasting by announcing that it would print regularly the meteorological prognostications of the Houston scientist.

The meteorological service is being furnished by Prof. Willis L. Moore, former chief of the Weather Bureau, and now head of the meteorological department at George Washington. Prof. Moore is the foremost champion of the new system, which has been condemned by Prof. Marvin, present chief of the Weather Bureau.

The forecast for the coming few days, made weeks ago, is as follows: It will continue to grow warmer the closing days of this week, with fair weather. Sunday, April 2, and Monday, April 3—The week will open fair with moderately cool temperatures. Tuesday, April 4, and Wednesday, April 5—Warmer temperatures will appear Tuesday, with rain Wednesday and Thursday in advance of a cool wave. Thursday, April 6; Friday, April 7, and Saturday, April 8—This movement is due with clearing Thursday. There will be general frosts daily to the end of the week, extending to the coasts one or two days.
