Invitations to the Founder's Day exercises on Friday, May 12, at 3 o'clock have been issued by the trustees and faculty of the Tompkins School, Port Deposit, Md. Dr. Arthur Anton Hamersole, director of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, will deliver the Founder's Day address. The annual reunion of the Alumni Association of Tompkins also occurs at this time and besides the alumni and parents of the students, members of other visitors will attend the Founder's Day exercises and spend the weekend at Tompkins.

An interesting wedding took place Saturday evening, when Miss Dorothy Gould, daughter of Associate Justice Ashley M. Gould, of the Supreme Court of the United States, became the bride of Assistant Paymaster Malcolm Gordon Sharrow, U. S. N.

The ceremony, which was witnessed only by the families of the young couple, was performed at the home of the bride's parents in sixteenth street, the Rev. H. S. Plummer officiating.

Quantities of pink roses and snapdragons against a background of palms, amulias and ferns formed the decorations at a stringed orchestra played throughout the ceremony and for the reception which followed.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was wearing white satin embroidered in pearls, and draped with exquisite rose point, which formed a train to the skirt and extended to the edge of the long veil.

The groom was wearing a suit of blue and white with a white waistcoat and a white tie. Her little veil was arranged under a coronet of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of orange blossoms and white lilies.

She was attended by her two sisters, the Misses Margaret and Helen Gould, who were gowned in pink tulle, pointed tulle and simple dresses with V necks and ruffled trimmings. They carried shower bouquets of pink roses.

Mr. Donald Bolton acted as best man, and the ushers were Assistant Paymaster E. H. S. N., and Mr. Ashley M. Gould.

Justice and Mrs. Gould, received with the bride party. Mrs. Gould was handsomely gowned in orchid satin with long train of cloth of silver.

The young couple left for a wedding trip later in the evening, the bride being accompanied by a green and white checked suit with black sailor hat trimmed with black peacock feathers.

Assistant Paymaster Sharrow has orders to join his wife at the promenade, at Norfolk May 15, and his bride will probably accompany him to Norfolk.

Miss Ethel Gertrude Offutt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Warren Offutt, was married Saturday evening to Assistant Paymaster Benjamin Soule Gantz, U. S. N., at the residence of her parents in Wisconsin avenue.

The house was gay with spring blossoms and quantities of pink roses which were placed against palms and ferns.

A stringed orchestra played during the ceremony and for the reception which followed. The Rev. Dr. Daniel Martin, of the Dumlarton Methodist Church, performed the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white duchess satin embroidered with seed pearls, with long court train and square-necked bodice fitted with duchess lace. The tulle veil was held in place by a French cap of antique lace, and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Bertrand Lowell Dennis, whose gown was

BLUE TAFFETA AND SOUTACHE BRAID.

Introducing the slightly raised waistline at the side, which is broken in front by a rather novel but short panel, is this afternoon dress of blue taffeta. The waist, however, seems to have usurped all the trimming of the gown, for it is elaborately decorated with soutache braid in a corresponding shade of blue on both the sides and panel. The little side belts are another effective feature of the waist. The full skirt is extremely simple in design.

YOUR WEDDING DAY

And the Famous Men and Women Who Have Shared It.

May 8—William Herschel.

By MARY MARSHALL.

When the greatest of all early English astronomers, William Herschel, was married, he was thirty-three years of age today to Mrs. John Pitt the event was one of great importance to the success of his scientific work. For in marrying this rather uninteresting widow Herschel-two he acquired a goodly fortune that removed for all time financial worry of all sorts and left him free to devote himself to his scientific research.

Herschel himself was forty-five and had never before been tempted into matrimony. But this lady was amiable, gentle and good, interested in his work and rich. Fanny Burney, the clever letter writer of that period, wrote regarding the match to a friend not long afterwards, when she had taken tea with the newly-weds: "Dr. Herschel was there," she wrote. "His new married wife was with him and his sister. His wife seems good natured and she was rich, too. And astronomers are as able as other men to discern that gold can glitter as well as stars." And about the same time we read from another contemporary writer: "Mrs. Herschel is sensibly good humored, unpretending and well bred, a sensible you know, and everybody knows, is one of the most pleasing and well bred natural characters of the present age, as well as the greatest astronomer."

Those are the facts that have come down to us concerning the marriage of this great scientist. That he married for money, or at least that he would not be married had the lady been possessed of a goodly fortune, seems obvious. And yet the marriage proved a happy one, and there seem to have been no vain regrets.

It is a rather interesting fact that Herschel began his career as a musician. He was born in Hanover in 1738, the son of the bandmaster in the Hanoverian guard. At fourteen the young William entered the famous band and performed on the hautboy and the violin. As a member of the band Herschel was in reality a member of the army and when, on account of ill health, his father shipped him to Dover in order to avoid the duties of the band, the fact was in truth nothing more nor less than desertion. The fact that Herschel's father influenced him strongly in going to England in this way was really no excuse. For years the blot of this act hung over Herschel's head, and it was only a year before his marriage that he finally obtained the pardon of the king, George III.

Perhaps one reason why Herschel did not marry sooner than he did was because in his sister Caroline, who is still counted among the greatest women astronomers, he had the constant companionship and inspiration of a woman of rare personality.

TOMORROW'S MENU.

"As innocent as a new-laid egg."—William S. Gilbert.

- BREAKFAST. Strawberries, Cereals and Cream, Omelet, Graham Bread, Coffee. LUNCHEON OR SUPPER. Chopped Beef on Toast, Stewed Tomatoes, Gingerbread, Tea. DINNER. Roasted Lamb Chop and Green Peas, Creamed Potatoes, Cranberry Sauce, Fig Pudding.

Omelet—Beat the whites and yolks of six eggs separately, and then together. Add a cupful of milk, three teaspoonfuls of cornstarch, one teaspoonful of baking powder, and a little salt. Cook in two omelets, in a little butter.

Sliced Tomatoes—Slice cold, skinned tomatoes and over them sprinkle very finely chopped celery. Dress with French dressing and serve.

Pig Pudding—Chop half a pound of fat and mix with them two tablespoonfuls of butter, two well beaten eggs, half a cupful of powdered sugar, a cupful of bread-crumbs and a teaspoonful of milk. Butter a mould, sprinkle with bread-crumbs, cover tight, and boil two hours. Serve with lemon or hard sauce.

Aunt Chatty's Mothers' Club Conducted by Mrs. Charity Brush TEACHING GENEROSITY.

THIS is a real Mothers' Club, for the benefit of mothers everywhere who are struggling with questions of discipline, training, education, clothing, for the children. Write to Aunt Chatty of problems which are vexing you, and she will advise and help you to a solution of them. Write to her, too, of your own discoveries, of methods you have found successful in smoothing the rough paths of life for the tender, childish feet, that through the Mothers' Club your experience may be of benefit to other mothers who are still tangled in the web of perplexity you have so happily unraveled.

Co-operation is the secret of success in any business; so why not in the business of motherhood, that highest and holiest calling which always has been and always will be woman's crown of glory, no matter what other avenues of usefulness may be opened to her? Address Mrs. Charity Brush, care of this paper.

My older daughter and I were much amused by an incident that occurred last winter during my annual Christmas visit to her. We were sitting together in the living-room of her pretty bungalow and my little granddaughter, my four-year-old namesake, was having her mid-morning lunch—two graham crackers and a glass of milk—on her toy table beside us. Suddenly the little one rose from the table and brought one of her crackers to her mother.

"Have some, mother?" she asked. "No, darling," her mother replied. "Thank you, but that is your lunch." With a smirk the child went to her brother, who was leaning on the couch turning the leaves of his "Share of King Arthur," and offered him a share of her cracker. Without looking up from the page, the boy reached out and broke off more than half of it and stuffed it into his mouth. Then the little girl ran sobbing to her mother and buried her face in her lap.

"He isn't a bit nice like you!" she cried. "Let me eat the cake." After the children had been sent out with their nurse, we had our laugh and then had a long talk about the best methods of cultivating the true spirit of generosity in children. "These two children differ very greatly in their native generosity," their mother said. "The boy is generous to a fault with his things. He shares his playthings, his sweets, all his possessions, indifferently with everybody around him. Sometimes I think he does not attach value enough to what he has. You are miserly with her things. She guards with jealous care everything she thinks is her special property. I always have to urge her to share with her brother or her playmates, I had never made a point of the lunch," she added with a smile. "and I don't know what impulse prompted her to offer of the cracker. I was taken unawares or I should most certainly have taken a bite of the cracker. I am glad she did it for me. But isn't a problem to know just how to train them?"

"We all have the same problems to study in one form or another," I said. "This same question of training children to be generous was one of my own early about my children," said because I prompted her to offer of the cracker. I was taken unawares or I should most certainly have taken a bite of the cracker. I am glad she did it for me. But isn't a problem to know just how to train them?"

A Fine Aid For Mother-to-be. We are all greatly indebted to those who tell their experiences. And among the many things which we read about and are of immediate importance to the expectant mother, is a splendid remedy called "Mother's Friend." This is applied over the muscles of the back, and it is deeply penetrating. In its influence, Mother's Friend bears tell of its soothing effect, how it alleviates all the aches and stretching of cords, ligaments and muscles. They tell of restful sleep, of calm, peaceful nights, of absence of those distressing twinges, of peace of expectancy, relief from morning sickness, no more of that apprehension with so many young women's minds become burdened. It is a splendid help, a bottle of "Mother's Friend" from your nearest druggist. Ask your husband to get it for you. Then write to Bradford Regulator Co., 705 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. for a very handsome and instructive book. It is filled with suggestive ideas of great help to all women interested in the subject of maternity. And best of all an instant letters from mothers that are real inspirations. Write today. We can go back half a century for letters from women who used "Mother's Friend." And it was this sort of recommendation that extended its use until today it is sold in almost every drug store in the United States. It is considered a standard remedy and one of the most efficient help known. Directions for using are very easily complied with and may be used at any time whenever needed.
