WILSONS STROLL IN RAIN WAITING NOMINATION

President and First Lady Pass Time By Walking to Monument.

Slipping from the White House a little after 6 o'clock in a downpour of rain, President Wilson, accompanied only by Mrs. Wilson, passed away an hour while the St. Louis convention was grinding away at his nomination, with a walk through the Monument grounds to the Potomac River and back.

Returning to the White House, the President retired immediately to his study and read carefully through the continuous report of the convention, which came over the "loop" into the executive offices and was forwarded to the White House by Secretary Tumulty. The President read with marked interest the Bryan speech, which had been delivered while he tramped.

At midnight the President was still in his study, keeping informed by telephone and telegraph of every move at St. Louis.

In the executive offices Secretary Tumulty entertained a small party of watchers, including Senator and Mrs. Thomas of Colorado, Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. Olin James, Representative and Mrs. Cullip, of Indiana; Representative Eagle, of Texas, and Raymond T. Baker, of Nevada.

RUNS MOTORCYCLE INTO FENCE TO SAVE KIDDIES

Risking the safety of himself and two companions to save the lives of several children, Roman Selinsky, a Russian and an inspector at the Washington Steel and Ordnance Company's plant, yesterday turned his speeding motorcycle from the bed of Nichols avenue southeast and plunged from the roadside through a fence. The machine was badly damaged, but the three occupants escaped with slight injuries.

Riding with Selinsky were Simon Budin and Vladimir Chebocheff, both of 1014 Eleventh street northwest, who live next to Selinsky. Chebocheff and Budin were in the side car of the motorcycle and all three were on their way to work. Near Twenty-second street southeast three children ran into the path of the motorcycle, which was blocked from turning to the left by other traffic. Selinsky turned to the right, dashed across the roadside and crashed through a fence.
