"SUFFS" PLAN AUTO CAMPAIGN

Will Spread Propaganda Throughout Sixth Maryland District.

Mrs. Minnie E. Brooke, of Chevy Chase, yesterday planned a whirlwind automobile campaign for the "Federal woman suffrage amendment through the Sixth Maryland District, represented in Congress by David J. Lewis, now a candidate for the United States Senate. Accompanying Mrs. Brooke, who is chairman of the Congressional Union branch in that district, will be Mrs. J. Girvin Phillips, also of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Edna S. Latimer, of Baltimore, a national organizer who has just returned from a month's work in Illinois and an automobile tour for the Federal amendment cause through New York, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and West Virginia.

Rockville will be the starting point of the flying automobile campaign, and every county will be covered on the way to Oakland, at the western border of Maryland. It is expected that the start will be made next Tuesday. Hagerstown, Cumberland, Frederick, Hancock, Emmisburg, and every other important town in Representative Lewis' district will be visited, meetings held, and local committees of the Congressional Union formed. About ten days, said Mrs. Brooke yesterday, will be consumed in the organization work. Arrangements are being made to have a delegation of the Federal woman suffrage workers call on Mr. Lewis, either here or at his home in Cumberland. The time has not yet been fixed for this event. Before he announced himself a candidate for the Senate, a delegation which visited him learned that he was for the State by State method of securing votes for women. At the headquarters here of the Congressional Union, the inconsistency of Mr. Lewis' position yesterday was pointed out.

PRACTICAL HEALTH TALKS

Lillian Whitney, M.D.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS—PART II.

In yesterday's article some of the causes giving rise to infantile paralysis were mentioned. To continue, city life is a factor entering into the conditions that give rise to it and cold—not the cold season, but the sudden chilling of the overheated body. This a robust child may be at play, violently exerting itself, and becoming overheated, lies down in a draught or on the cold ground and becomes thoroughly chilled, and may immediately and without any appreciable cause to those who have the care of it be attacked with this dreadful disease. For instance, the case is reported of a little girl of three whose mother had just died and who wandered unobserved into the garden, where she lay down upon the cold earth and fell asleep. A frost came, and the little body was thoroughly chilled. When found and aroused, she had a high fever and was unable to walk. Another is that of a boy aged two and a half years, who was exposed to a heavy rainstorm.

Acute digestive troubles often precede an attack. One little girl of three, very healthy, in fact robust, appeared drowsy, but her appetite remained good and she was given several bananas and some veal. The next day she was even drowsier, but was given more veal and at noon-time, shortly after this, vomiting occurred, followed by violent convulsions, high fever, rapid pulse and unconsciousness. I regret to say that in many of these cases the attending physician fails to make a proper diagnosis; it is often claimed that the child's inability to walk is due to weakness before the true nature of the disease (that is, paralysis) shows itself. In epidemics, of course, it is much more rapid; but if the disease were suspected in slow cases, and vigorous treatment pursued at once, the severity would be considerably lessened. For example, a rapid, high fever, or a low fever lasting a week or more, or convulsions, all indicate an extensive and deep-seated trouble. The fever is due to inflammation of the cord. By way of further illustration, the case of a baby boy who was ten months old in August may be given. At that time he fell from a carriage, but did not seem to hurt himself; no symptoms appeared until two weeks later, when in the evening he was suddenly taken with high fever, lasting five or six days; he screamed constantly and had one convulsion following another so rapidly that his little body was bent like an arch. He was treated for indigestion. This child was unable to hold up his head for five weeks; teething was completely checked for months. Five months after the attack, he is unable to sit up without being supported.

Answers to Queries.
Margaret: Here are directions for making and using oriental henna paste: Powdered henna leaves, 1-4 pound; acetic acid, 4 drams; white honey, 4 drams; powdered rhubarb, 4 drams. Add enough hot water to form a paste. The length of time it is allowed to remain on the hair determines the tinge. The paste is then washed off with ammoniated water and the hair dried in the sun. This is the only stain that can be used on auburn shades, but it must always be applied skillfully and the same preparation used; otherwise the effect varies and the results defeat one's object—which is to restore faded hair or to color characterless hair.
Gray Hair: Pilocarpin is reputed to possess the property of darkening the hair as well as promoting its growth. The following is an excellent tonic: Jabourandi, 1-2 ounce; cinchona, 1 ounce; glycerin, 2 ounces; diluted alcohol, to make 16 ounces. Perfume to suit. Pilocarpin is the active principle of jabourandi.
