Miss Elizabeth Rebecca Blackstone, daughter of Mrs. Nannie S. Blackstone, and Mr. J. Felix Fenwick were married yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock at St. Patrick's rectory.

Rev. Father McNamara performed the ceremony in the presence of a small company of relatives and intimate friends.

THE DAILY ADVENTURES OF PUSS IN BOOTS, JR.

BEDTIME STORIES. BY DAVID CORY.

Puss is set free by four jolly fellows.

"Let us go to the woods," says Richard to Robin.

"Let us go to the woods," says Robin to Bobbin.

"Let us go to the woods," says John all alone.

"Let us to the woods," says every one.

On hearing this, Puss Junior called out loudly, "Help, my good men! Help! Cut these fairy ropes and make me free."

Richard and Robin and Bobbin and John ran forward. On seeing Puss Junior's predicament, they whipped out their big jackknives and quickly cut the fairy ropes. The fairies in the meantime had disappeared.

"Thank you," cried Puss.

"Zounds!" exclaimed Puss Junior, stretching out his legs. "Zounds! but those ropes were tight."

"You speak the truth, Sir Cat," laughed Richard.

"You were bound as tightly as our old friend, Zuluver," said Robin.

"You were like a fly in a spider's web," cried Bobbin.

"You were as fast as a burr in a sheep's wool," said John.

In short, you were a prisoner," cried every one.

"Well, I'm now a free man—I mean a free Cat," cried Puss Junior. "Thanks to you, my good men, I have my freedom once more."

The four boys smiled at Puss. "We are very glad to have been of service to you, Sir Cat."

"I should like to repay you for your trouble," cried Puss, "but using his paw into his pocket. Here, Richard, is a gold piece, and Robin, here's another. Here is one for Bobbin, and for John, his brother."

"Thank you, thank you, good Sir Cat," cried Richard taking off his hat. Then all the others followed suit, and bowed again to Puss in Boots.

The good gray horse was also much relieved to find his legs free again. He snorted and stamped upon the ground with his front feet. "And now, my good friends," said Puss, "as it is almost midnight, I would that you direct me to an inn where I may rest my good horse and find a bed for myself."

"That we will," cried the four, all together. "Follow the road. The moon is still bright. Take the first turn—the one to the right. The Willow Tree Inn you will find in due course, where you may find shelter for you and your horse."

"Thank you," cried Puss, "if your directions are as good as your rhyme, I shall have no trouble in finding the place."

HOROSCOPE.

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

Wednesday, September 6, 1916.

Astrologers read this as a fairly lucky day. Mars and Jupiter rule strongly for success in schools and colleges will be greatly increased, it is prophesied, but there may be trouble on the question of co-education in certain institutions.

It is an auspicious time for beginning new ventures in business.

Lawyers have a promising way. Honors for jurists are indicated for the coming autumn and winter. The President will bestow high appointments on three, it is predicted.

Illness in the family of a public man may affect the Presidential campaign, the seers declare.

Mars today gives aid to surgery, pharmacy, assaying and medicine.

It is a lucky day to deal with engineers, builders, structural iron workers, carpenters and lumbermen.

Agitation concerning food and cooking will come to the front before winter, it is probable. The stars indicate that reforms will be widespread.

Persons whose birthdays it is will have good luck during the year, provided they avoid law and quarreling. These subjects of Virgo have great possibilities in the arts and professions, if they attend to business.

Children born on this day probably will have good luck through life. They should be industrious, refined and economical. Many philosophers have been born under this sign.

After Vacation Peel Your Discolored Skin

Women returning from the seaside with browned, reddened or freckled complexions will be wise in immediate treatment. The mercurized wash treatment, Water-beaten skin has been beat come off, for no amount of "beautifying" will ever make such skin pretty to look at. Used as a face wash, white way to shed the discolored cuticle is with the treatment suggested. Put the cold cream, and rinse it off next morning with warm water. Minute particles of scurf skin will peel off day by day, gradually showing the healthy, youthful skin beneath. One ounce of mercurized wash, obtainable at any drug store, is enough to make any discolored or spotted complexion clear, white and satiny soft. Its action is so gentle no harm is caused and the face shows no traces of its use.

Burning heat, irritating winds and dirt are such wrinkle-makers that the action of the following ingredients is particularly noticeable. It is highly advisable. Powdered salicylic, one ounce, dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. Used as a face wash, it is a splendid wrinkle remover and preventive.—Adv.

HOUSEWIFE'S DAILY ECONOMY CALENDAR

KEEP UP WITH THE MARKETS.

By FRANCES MARSHALL.

The clever and wise housekeeper is she who keeps up with the markets. Perhaps she finds it more economical to do the daily marketing by telephone, but she keeps posted by an occasional visit to the markets and by reading the reports of the markets in the papers. From the reports she learns what is seasonable and what is cheap and from visits to the markets she keeps an eye on the men who are keeping up with the general market conditions.

This same housekeeper buys things when they are in season, realizing that they are then at their best as well as at their cheapest. Tomatoes at 5 cents each in the spring are not so good as to-matoes at 5 cents a quart in August—and a dollar spent for tomatoes in August naturally goes many times as far as one spent for tomatoes in May.

In the same way meat should be bought. Few kinds of meat are seasonable, of course, but at times one sort is lower than another, and the woman who buys according to the fluctuating meat prices saves much money.

The best way to keep really abreast of the markets, of course, is not to depend absolutely on one source of supply. Nowadays, when so many persons

YOUR WEDDING DAY

And the Famous Men and Women Who Have Shared It.

September 6—King Stephen and Matilda of Boulogne.

By MARY MARSHALL.

"If ever a woman deserves to be carried by the hands of angels to Heaven, it was this holy queen." These words that King Stephen caused to be written on the tomb of his consort Matilda at the time of her death indicates clearly enough that Matilda was well beloved by her husband. Probably no queen of England ever as more truly a queen in the best sense of that word than was Matilda, and surely she was the most devoted and helpful of wives.

Apparently King Stephen bore his kingly honors unwillingly after his lifelong companion had left his side, it was but two years after her death, when he was but fifty-one years old, that he breathed his last. True to her memory he expressed his wish on dying that he might be buried at her side and their tombs may still be seen, seven centuries old, in the old Abbey of Faversham, in England. But the most interesting token to the memory of these royal lovers is to be found at the ruins of Furness Abbey.

This is the sculptured busts of Matilda, who wears a simple circlet around her head, from which flows a long full veil. Unlike the queens of a later date, Matilda is dressed simply and extremely modestly. Stephen appears to have all the qualities that we like to imagine all kings as having—strength, majesty, kindness and courage. For seven hun-
