YOUR WEDDING DAY

And the Famous Men and Women Who Have Shared It.

September 10—Richard Baxter and Margaret Charlton.

By MARY MARSHALL.

September 10 stands out on the calendar as a wedding day of particularly good auspices, for it was the day chosen by Richard Baxter and Margaret Charlton for their wedding. And the marriage of those typical English Puritans stands out as one of the happiest marriages out of the mass of any record. Richard Baxter was certainly not a character to figure very strikingly in a romance, however. He was forty-seven at the time of his marriage and, because of his religious scruples, he had hitherto put far from him any thoughts of marriage. He was a man much more deliberative and studious than passionate, although he possessed the gift of compelling eloquence. His methods of sermon writing are still regarded as worth careful study by English preachers, and what is much more interesting to most people, the memoirs he wrote of his beloved wife after her death is regarded as one of the most beautiful and tender written tributes ever paid by an Englishman to his wife.

Margaret Charlton was very much younger than her husband and was demurely married to him by the Royalists, against whom Richard Baxter preached so eloquently. But though a Puritan maiden, Margaret was not as sedate in her youth as her elderly suitor might have wished. "In her youth," he writes, "she was full of spirits and romances and company suitable there to did take her up." And he goes on to explain that when she and her mother first came to Kidderminster, where Baxter first met the fair Margaret, she "had a great aversion to the poverty and strictness of the people there, glittering herself in costly apparel, and delighting in her romances."

Before many weeks had passed, however, Margaret had a change of heart and, giving up her frivolous ways, devoted herself to the more sober task of reading books and working for the poor. That she found much to admire in her Puritanic teacher and not a little to her taste in the new life she was leading seems evident, for it was the fair young Margaret herself who first thought of the suitability of their marriage.

"The unsuitableness of our age," writes Baxter, "and my former known purposes against marriage, and the counsel of ministers' marriages, who have no sort of necessity, made our marriage the source of much public talk and wonder." However the marriage did take place two hundred and fifty-four years ago today, and thereupon began one of the happiest marriages of Puritan England.

"When we were married," Baxter quaintly says, "her sadness and melancholy vanished, counsel did something to it, and contentment something, and being taken up with our household affairs did somewhat. And we lived in inviolated love and mutual complacency sensible of the benefit of mutual help. These near nineteen years I know not that ever we had any breach in point of love or point of interest. Among other troubles that her marriage exposed her to, one was over oft necessitated removals, which to those who must take houses and bind themselves to landlords and fit and furnish them is more than for single persons that have no such clogs and cares. . . . and the women have most of that sort of trouble. But she easily bore it all."

For All Complexion Ills

If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, overred, blotchy or freckled, nothing will so surely overcome the condition as ordinary mercurized wax. It literally takes off a bad complexion, absorbs the dead and near-dead particles of surface skin, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is then in evidence, clear, spotless, delicately soft and beautiful. One ounce of this wax, procurable at any drugstore, will rejuvenate even the most complexion. It is used like cold cream.—Adv.

HOROSCOPE.

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

Sunday, September 10, 1916.

Astrologers read this as an unusually fortunate day, since Jupiter, Mars and Mercury rule strongly for good. The sway is an auspicious one for traveling and for visiting friends. It is a lucky day for making important plans. Enterprises projected under this configuration are supposed to mature easily.

Professors come under a kindly influence, which makes for broader opportunities and better centers of activity. Honors for an educator are prognosticated. An office of supreme responsibility is indicated. Those who read the stars see high place for two jurists hitherto little known.

Ministers should benefit from the friendly power of Mercury, the star which aids writers and thinkers. Thought is to become more dominant, the seers declare, in the sense that its projectile power will be understood and used. A new teacher will demonstrate laws hitherto not recognized.

Army affairs have a good government today, making for promotions and success on the part of men in high position. Warning is given, however, that the stars foretell graft and scandals in military matters. Sculptors have a promising outlook.

It is held. New demands on their talents will arise, it is prophesied. The death of a famous actor is prognosticated. He will belong to the class past middle age, which the stars foretell will be rapidly eliminated with the beginning of the new cycle. Persons whose birth date it has the augury of a busy, prosperous year. Children born on this day should have beauty, strength and talent. These subjects of Virgo usually are good writers and they may have musical gifts.

Young America!

A newboy stood on a blustery night with a pile of newspapers at his feet watching for customers at a subway entrance in New York. In a bantering way, as a gentleman hurried by, he said to the little newboy: "You can't sell all those papers tonight." The lad looked up with a smile and said: "I can try!"

No breadline or bundle day for this sturdy American lad or for the fine wholesome man he is bound to be as he grows up.

"I can try!" Tell it to the grumbler, the preacher of unrest, the spokesman for unreason, the demagogue who would set the worker against the man who fills his pay envelope. Tell it to the college professor who has such high ideals that no step-ladder can ever reach them.

"I can try!"—good for the newboy who said it; a motto for the girl at school poring over her lessons, for the mechanic toiling in the shop, the merchant busy in the counting-room, the banker in his office, the professional man at his desk, the preacher in his study, the architect with his drawings and the astronomer at the telescope. The world has been built by those who can and who do try. They put to shame the idler, the shirker, the drone, the complainer and the no-go-wells-for-ever thrusting themselves forward to beg for special consideration.

The world would be better in every way if it had a revival of the good old-fashioned spirit of self-dependence that American fathers and mothers taught their children at their knees, mingling patriotism with their prayers. Some of our largest industrial corporations seek to encourage the American spirit. This is true patriotism. God speed the day when the spirit of Young America shall be everywhere.—John A. Sletcher in Leslie's.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.

Two of the largest entertainments of the season have been given this week, the first a delightful outdoor affair, a Cornish picnic to which Mr. George W. Stevens, of Richmond, invited a number of his friends in honor of the birthday of Lady Williams-Taylor, of Montreal. Over a hundred guests motored down to the river, where on the banks were built large fires where the corn was roasted, cheese cooked, and Cornish pasties heated, the being the chef d'oeuvre of the luncheon at the suggestion of Lady Williams-Taylor, also the pie and splits of old Cornwall, which are always served in the open air frolics of that part of England. Six colored men sang songs of the South to the accompaniment of guitars and banjos. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. James H. Preston, Mrs. W. L. Watson, Mrs. Walter James, and Dr. Fred G. Taylor, all of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. William Wheatley and Mr. Channing Wiley, of Washington; Miss Brenda Williams-Taylor, Mrs. Barker Gummere, of Princeton; Mr. and Mrs. Garrett B. Wall, Mr. and Mrs. De Soto Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harwood, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Cabell, Mrs. Fred Pleasants, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Williams, Mrs. Granville Valentine, of Richmond; Miss Mary Custis Lee, Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Claiborne, Mr. Frank Bullitt, Mrs. F. D. Pelton, Dr. John Freeland, Mrs. James Schoonmacker, all of New York; Mrs. Kohlhaas, of Cincinnati, and Miss Bessie Halderman, of Louisville.

The evening lawn party at the casino on Monday evening was one of the most beautiful entertainments of the season, the terrace being arranged in the most artistic manner with lanterns and varicolored lights, the tiny fountains spraying water over the colored lights fringed with ferns. Just beyond the casino was a fountain representing a geyser with rainbow lights. Tables were dotted over the terrace and on the verandas, where supper was served, after which there were fireworks, and dancing was resumed in the assembly hall. About three hundred guests were present.

Why Society Women Wash Their Own Hair

Few realize how many society women now wash their own hair, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. The thousands who have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a makeshift but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only, say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthrox mixture. You can enjoy this, the best that is known, for about three cents a shampoo by getting some canthrox from your druggist, and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. Your shampoo is now ready. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—Adv.
