

Minister of Uruguay and Madame de Pena Motoring to Washington

The Minister of Uruguay and Mrs. de Pena, who are motoring to Washington from Monterey, Pa., where they spent the summer, will arrive at the legation this afternoon.

An interesting wedding of today will be that of Miss Virginia Hammond Millan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Millan, and Mr. Horace Hardaway Epps, which will take place this evening at the home of the bride's parents in Park road. The ceremony will be performed at 8 o'clock by the Rev. E. K. Hardin, in the presence of a small company of relatives.

Miss Glenda Millan will be the maid of honor and her sister, Miss Virginia, will be the bridesmaid. Mr. J. E. LeFevre, charge d'affaires of the Panama Legation, was best man, and the ushers were Messrs. William A. Comstock, of Detroit, and John Elliott, of Des Moines.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of heavy ivory tulle with the bodice of cream tulle and the skirt of white tulle with orange blossoms, and the court train was held at the waist line by a bow-knot of pearls and finished by a cluster of chrysanthemum flowers. Her hair was arranged with a wreath of orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mr. Penfield and his bride will be extensively entertained on their wedding tour, which will include visits to New Orleans, Cuba, Panama, Costa Rica and Jamaica.

The President of Panama, Senor Valdez, is planning a dinner in their honor upon their arrival in Panama City. Mr. and Mrs. Penfield will land in New York November 5, whence they will go to Indiana, in order that Mr. Penfield may cast his vote in the coming election. They will reach Washington about November 15, and have taken an apartment in the St. Nicholas.

Miss Barney and Miss Crippin have recently taken an apartment at the Lenox, where they have moved from the Ontario.

Mrs. Richardson Clover and her daughter, Miss Beatrice Clover, who will be married to Mr. Thomas J. Watson on November 11, went to New York yesterday for a week's shopping trip. Miss Clover will go to New Jersey to make a short visit to the family of her fiancé.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Holden, of Washington, have arrived at the Virginia Hot Springs.

Miss Julia Mattis, niece of Representative William B. McKinley, sailed last week for Honolulu, where she will spend two months with her sister, Mrs. James Camp, at Fort Shafter.

Dr. and Mrs. John S. Billings, of New York, who have been spending the summer at their place, Douglas Manor, L. I., are stopping at the Willard for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. James Morris Woodward have issued invitations for the marriage of their niece, Miss Elizabeth Clark, to Mr. Albert Lynn McDowell.

The ceremony will take place at noon Saturday, October 28, at Wesley M. E. Church, Rev. Howard F. Downs, pastor of the church, officiating.

There will be no attendants and Mr. McDowell and his bride will leave immediately after the ceremony for their wedding trip.

They will be at home at the Coblenz after November 15.

Mrs. M. E. Ingalls and Miss Gladys Ingalls, entertained a number of guests informally at tea yesterday at Boxwood Farm, their place at the Virginia Hot Springs.

Mrs. James McDonald has returned to Washington and now is at the Shoreham.

The engagement of Miss Mary Shepley Nagel, of St. Louis, daughter of the former Secretary of Commerce and Labor and Mrs. Charles Nagel, to Mr. Homer Loring Sweetser, son of Mrs. Frank E. Sweetser, of Brookline, Mass., was announced yesterday, in the city of Washington.

Miss Nagel's father was a member of President Taft's Cabinet. Her mother was Miss Anne Shepley, of Brookline. Mr. and Mrs. Nagel and their family passed the summer in Marion, Mass. Mr. Sweetser is a member of the senior class at Harvard.

Mrs. Anthony, wife of Representative Daniel R. Anthony, who is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Karrick, will leave today for her home in Leavenworth, Kansas.

Mrs. Burton Harrison, who closed Sea Urchins, her place at Bar Harbor, and went to New York several days ago, will arrive at Washington this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Reardon and Mrs. E. M. Reardon, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, are spending some time at the Willard.

Mr. Alfred L. Aiken, of Boston, Mass., has arrived in this city, and is registered at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mrs. Minnie M. Barker announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Helen Margaret Barker, to Mr. Frederick Wilhelm Albert, Tuesday, October 10, at Burlington, Vermont.

Mrs. James McDonald, of Washington, was hostess at tea yesterday at the Casino, at White Sulphur Springs, her guests including Mrs. Charles B. Howry, Mrs. Dewitt Taimage, Mrs. Henry R. Duist, the Daughters of the Empire, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Rebecca Collier, Anne Henry and Josephine McClure.

Mrs. Royal C. Romick, of Estmont, Va., is stopping at the Shoreham during her visit to Washington.

The marriage of Miss Frances Detrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Detrick, and Mr. Harold G. Sowers, of Cleveland, Ohio, will be solemnized on the evening of October 18, at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of her parents in Harvard street. A reception for relatives and friends will follow the ceremony, which will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Harry Campbell, of the Church of the Holy Trinity, at 11 o'clock.

Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Boyd, of Washington, have returned from Williamsport, Mass., where their son, Mr. Walter W. Boyd, has entered college, and are stopping at the Wolcott Hotel in New York City for a few days before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Abbott, of Bozeman, Mont., are visiting Mr. Abbott's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Abbott, at 714 A street northeast, where they will be glad to see their friends this evening.

Miss C. Aurelia Bretow has gone to Richmond for an indefinite stay.

On Monday evening, a surprise reception was tendered Mr. Arthur Green at his residence, at 1522 U street, by his pupils on the occasion of his return to Washington from an extended vacation. Mr. Green is an instructor in vocal music.

Mrs. Henry T. Oxnard and Miss Oxnard, of Upperville, Va., are among those stopping at the Shoreham.

PERSONALITIES HAVE MET.—EDNA MAYO.

Edna Mayo, who is leading lady with Essanay, has introduced an innovation in photoplay work. She is doing what William Farnum told me he is ambitious to do—learning her parts just as one would do for the speaking stage.

Although I have met Miss Mayo often, we have had no thrilling experiences together, so I must tell you a little story that was told me by a newspaper man who went to interview her in Chicago the other day. He had heard that Miss Mayo was the greatest woman on the screen, and had made up his mind that there should be several paragraphs in his interview which would please the women—he would describe at length her costume.

But when he was ushered on the floor of the Essanay studio, there was Miss Mayo, dressed as Eve, sitting on a trunk and powdering her nose with a powder puff. For he had snatched an interval between the scenes in "The Return of Eve," while she was preparing for the dramatic situation in which she tempts Adam with the apple.

She stooped to disentangle a snake which insisted on coiling at her feet—an honest-to-goodness snake, six feet long.

"I edged away," the newspaper man told me, "but Miss Mayo, absolutely unafraid, stroked its head. 'I used to hate snakes, until this one was forced upon me,' she said, taking a final dab at her nose with the powder puff. 'But now I do not mind them at all and this one has become quite a pet of the studio.'"

"She turned from her looking glass to me with that charming smile of hers. 'Can you wait a few minutes?' she asked, 'for the part is rather difficult and I want to do my best.' 'So I waited, sitting on a hard, long wooden bench, unbacked and unvarnished, thinking how uncomfortable it was until the clicking of the mercuro camera began. Then I forgot all about myself and thought only of how interesting it is to watch pictures in the making. It was dreadfully trying, that scene; over and over again she related to me the serpent was not such a good actor as they had expected and refused to take orders.

"I enjoy this part more than any other I have ever played," Miss Mayo expressed herself, "for there is a novelty about it which stamps it as original. 'She was a' dimples and smiles as she shook back her wealth of golden hair which reached to her knees.

"To be the first woman who ever lived—you can imagine how I enjoyed this role, for never before have I felt the wonderful power of that story of Genesis. Now I have lived it. I know what Eden is and I also know how terrible it must have been to be thrown out.

HOROSCOPE.

The stars incline, but do not compel. Wednesday, October 11, 1916. Astrologers find this a day more favorable than otherwise for Venus, Jupiter and Uranus rule strongly for good in the early hours, although the Sun is adverse later. Women should be exceedingly cautious under this rule, for Venus changes from benefic to malefic aspect and disappointments are foreshadowed.

Health Talks by Lillian Whitney, M. D.

On Featural Defects.

Dr. Whitney, whose health and beauty articles in leading magazines have attracted marked attention for years, has established an enviable reputation as a specialist. Letters of inquiry should be accompanied by a stamped envelope and should be addressed care of this paper to insure her prompt reply.

After men and women have reached "years of discretion," they are, as a rule, no longer tormented with the consciousness that the goddess of beauty was in hiding when they were ushered into this world. It is well that the sting of neglect on her part does not pursue us throughout life, but while it lasts it is sometimes severe enough to cause considerable unhappiness, and it is to those who actually possess the consciousness of a too fleshy face, hollow cheeks, a protruding chin and the like that this article is especially directed.

It is obviously impossible to enter into the value of surgery as a corrective to featural deformities in an article of this scope. Much has been done in this field in France, and latterly British surgeons have seriously considered the advisability of admitting cosmetic surgery into the legitimate domain of medicine, because incalculable harm has been done by promiscuous use of the knife and the procedure of restoring lost beauty or of remodeling homely faces into those prepossessing the charms of Venus, have induced the credulous to submit to the severest form of treatment at fabulous prices.

In some instances, they have been successful; in others, the results have been, to say the least, distressing beyond words. It is because human nature is credulous and women especially lend themselves to this sort of maltreatment that physicians concerned with the art of including cosmetic work in their armamentarium. However, the field of medicine and surgery is so wide, and widening each day, that as yet their work is confined to restoring as far as possible such features as have been injured by accident or that are congenitally deformed, and the mere beautification of slight featural imperfections is left to the beauty culturist.

The treatments pursued are in a large measure so severe that they cannot be recommended and are undergoing a severe trial. Much, however, can be done to remodel and reshape the fleshy party of the face by patient, persistent effort carried out in the privacy of one's home. Bony imperfections, of course, require surgical interference. In some instances the cheeks appear excavated, owing to the peculiar formation of the molar bones, and although the soft tissues covering them may not be particularly thin, still the face has a hollow look that is not pleasing to the eye and often causes its owner genuine annoyance. Men can easily cover up this defect by growing a beard.

The cheeks can be plumped in various ways. First, of course, the health must be looked after, and no local means are ever effectual when the general condition is below par. The local circulation should be stimulated with massage treatment, and all those preliminaries so frequently entered into in these papers should be followed and softening the skin and putting it into a receptive state for the absorption of fattening creams be fully carried out. Then the cream is applied and worked into the hollow places with slow, circular movements. The cream is then left on the face for ten to fifteen minutes, after which the tissues are grasped between the thumb and forefingers and forcibly drawn out away from the bone and allowed to recede. This movement is to be pursued ten to twenty times; its action is the same as the use of a cup, but safer in the hands of the inexperienced. After this local compresses are laid over the parts manipulated for five or ten minutes to further tone up the tissues.

Answers to Queries.

Poverty—Yes, there is always a way out, and unless life is threatened there are frequently other means at hand than a radical operation. Use this serviceable straining solution by painting it on the tonsils and adenoids several times a day with a brush morning and night: Alum, 2 drams; tannic acid, 2 drams; glycerin, 4 drams; rose water, 2 ounces. I can highly recommend this treatment and am sure you will find it of extreme value.

Mark—It will give me much pleasure to contribute something on alcoholism by and by; but I cannot give you a prescription that will control your craving. This you must procure from your physician. He will be glad to prescribe what you desire to overcome. Since you have used the cold cream—Adv.

YOUR WEDDING DAY

And the Famous Men and Women Who Have Shared It.

By MARY MARSHALL.

October 11—Louis Agassiz and Cecile Braun. Had Louis Agassiz been named Louis Mayor instead of Louis Agassiz the name would have told more concerning the source of the great scientist's genius, for it was not from the Agassiz family, sturdy like the men of those men though they were, that he gained most of his remarkable scientific ability, but from the family of his mother, the Mayors, who were men of rare scientific attainment. Agassiz's mother, though devoted entirely to her home and family, was a woman of unusual abilities and understood long before others realized it that Louis possessed the spark of genius.

Perhaps Agassiz's mother had more influence on him than any other person. But a very close second was his second wife, Elizabeth Graves Cary, an unusually gifted American woman, who was the chief influence in persuading Agassiz to take up his residence in the United States. Agassiz had been very happily married at 26 to a sister of one of his classmates at Heidelberg. To quote an acquaintance of Agassiz's, this wife was "a noble-minded young woman of rare moral and intellectual endowments, serenely tempered by much gentleness and simplicity of manner won for her at once respect and attention."

On coming to America for the first time Agassiz left his wife and two children in Switzerland and within a short time the wife died and Agassiz was left desolate. Various interests kept him in America and an unwillingness to recall the happy companionship of the past also kept him lingering on the shores. Then he accepted a professorship at Harvard, but still he dreamed of eventually returning to his native land. In this country his house was kept open by a Swiss clergyman, who had long been a close friend of his.

Before many years had passed—when Agassiz was 41 and in the prime of his intellectual development—his wife and wedded Elizabeth Graves Cary. This happy event occurred sixty years ago. Three years later Agassiz's health broke. This fact, added to the fact that Agassiz needed as much leisure as possible in carrying on his scientific researches, led to the establishment of a school for young ladies by his wife. The school was located in Boston and it met with remarkable success. For eight years Mrs. Agassiz gave her time to this school, in this way relieving her husband from all thought of money getting. It was here that she was in the life work of the great scientist.
