DEFENDS BATTERIES IN EXPLODED SHIP. Expert Says Type Surpasses All Others for Submersibles.

Following the recent explosion on board U. S. submarine E-2, Thomas A. Edison, whose corporation manufactured the storage batteries in use in the craft, sent Lamar Lyndon, consulting engineer, of New York, to investigate and report on conditions.

According to Engineer Lyndon the advantages of the Edison battery outweigh eight to one its defects. He states that its principal advantage for undersea use, however, is the safety of the personnel of the ship from gassing by chlorine.

The engineer says: "The E-2 explosion was caused by a prolonged reversal of the Edison cells," and concludes, "but in spite of this fact there is no danger to be apprehended from the production of explosive gases in Edison cells under operating conditions whether normal or unusual. The unusual circumstances which produced this explosion, and the impossibility of another similar occurrence, in practice, is clearly indicated."

SHIP CONTROL CASE REOPENED BY I. C. C.

Law Against Railroad Ownership of Water Lines May Be Repealed.

The Interstate Commerce Commission late yesterday ordered reopened the entire case in which the commission previously had ordered the Pennsylvania Railroad and other lines to divest themselves of the steamship lines they operated in Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries.

The action of the commission in reopening the case has national significance inasmuch as reversal of the Chesapeake Bay decision would invite the supposition that similar action would be taken as to the steamship lines on the Great Lakes which were separated from their railroad owners.

The commission has before Congress a suggestion that the Panama Canal act be amended so as to operate less harshly in suspending water service when that service is controlled by railroads.
