OSTRICHES HALF NAKED AFTER INDIANS' VISIT

Need Special Detail to Watch Redskins at Zoo.

The ostriches at the Zoo have become peevish at the very sight of Indians. Every tribe from Montana to Arizona seems to know about the local animal garden, and when a delegation comes to town to see the Great White Father they hike for the Zoo just as soon as they're off the train. Nowdays, of course, neither Apaches nor Navajos wear feathers, even in their festivals. Just the same they seem to have a mania for collecting them. The Zoo gives the crafty old boys a great opportunity. Out there is a fine string of ostriches which wander along the wire fence all unsuspecting, and it is no trick for a quick hand to grab several plumes. The peacocks roam at will through the park and are also easily plucked, and even the eagles are foolish enough sometimes to let their tail feathers project through the wire screen. The Indians made such a clean-up a bit ago that several of the ostriches looked as if they had been in Belgium, and the peacocks were about the sorriest looking things in these parts. There probably was great rejoicing back in Arizona the next day, though. The Indians have gotten in so bad with Superintendent Hollister that they are about as welcome as pickpockets, and when a delegation hoves in eight several keepers are detailed to follow them.

TO BE ALL DRESSED UP FOR FETE BY MID-WEEK

Workmen Busy Night and Day Decorating Buildings.

With Inauguration day only one week off, not a moment is being lost in rushing arrangements to completion. Workmen are on their job day and night, and it is expected that Washington will be completely in inaugural dress by Wednesday. Yesterday the first signs of decorating were noticeable. All along Pennsylvania avenue hundreds of men were decorating buildings. The scheme of using only the Stars and Stripes in decorating is being closely followed. Wednesday the full inaugural committee will meet in the red room of the New Willard to apply the stamp of approval on all plans for the demonstration next Monday. Final reports of committee chairmen and subcommittee heads will be made and budgets and decorations denoting the committee to which each member is attached will be distributed. Special police regulations for prevention of crime and the maintenance of order during the inaugural period were put into effect yesterday and will remain in force until one week after March 5. Under these rules the use of ticklers and the throwing of confetti or similar things is forbidden. A penalty is provided for persons who falsely represent themselves to be members of the public comfort or public order committee. Fixed rates have been stipulated for all public chauffeurs and hack drivers for the inaugural period in order to avoid disputes. Scores of plain clothes men from detective bureaus of big cities are beginning to arrive here to keep a line on crooks from their cities. Inaugural visitors are already arriving. Yesterday all incoming trains were crowded and hotels are beginning to fill.

K. O. F. C. PLANS NEW HOME. Increase in Dues and Issue of Bonds Probable. Plans for the proposed $150,000 home of the Knights of Columbus here were discussed at a meeting held at 606 E street northwest yesterday. It was decided to start the new building just as soon as funds could be raised. It is probable that the initiation fee and yearly dues of the organization will be increased, and that an issue of bonds will be provided. The clubhouse will include a large auditorium, gymnasium, swimming pool, bowling alleys, pool and billiard rooms.

U. S. BARES MYSTERY OF ROQUEFORT CHEESE

Luxury Due for Big Price Drop in Consequence.

Better Roquefort cheese is being made in Washington today than in its native habitat. Experts in the dairy division of the Department of Agriculture are making it out of ordinary cow's milk at that. Whereas French cheesemakers use exclusively sheep's milk. The experiments have been going on eight years. Heretofore all Roquefort cheese has come from France and enormous quantities are imported each year. The price has steadily gone up until now one has to pay about 80 cents a pound, with the prospect of soon paying double that for French Roquefort. The difficult part in making Roquefort was to get it properly aged—to get the mold started, and the cheese properly colored. The French age their cheese in limestone caves which have a low temperature and high humidity. The cheese is kept in these caves about four months and is carefully watched. It has never been possible heretofore to make good Roquefort by aging it in any other way. The experts in the dairy division, working under Chief Bacteriologist L. A. Rogers, had no caves in the District, so they got some special refrigerators that make the old French caves obsolete. They found that the refrigerator served better than the caves in every way. After they learned how to age the cheese they were confronted with the scarcity and high prices of sheep's milk, which the French insisted was a necessity. The experts treated cow's milk in a special way and found they could make just as good a Roquefort as the French. Now that the cheese has been made in experimental laboratories here it will be made on a commercial scale at the department creamery and cheese factory at Groveton, Pa., and the process then turned over to all American cheese manufacturers who want it. In a little while probably Roquefort cheese will drop to 20 or 30 cents a pound.

'THAT POCKETBOOK RAG' NEW DRAIN ON FINANCE

Grills Plan Music to Make Diners Go Broke.

The man who likes music with his meals had better beware. He's going to get in bad if he isn't careful, according to Dr. Harry D. Kitson, of Chicago University. "You eat a T-bone steak while the orchestra plays a waltz. And the next day you hear that waltz and you want another T-bone," he told one of his classes. "You'd want it just as bad if it was liver and bacon the waltz had been played to, or hash. And had the orchestra played 'hash' music you would have enjoyed the hash as well as you did the T-bone." Enterprising hotel proprietors are said to have taken so kindly to the theory that only music provocative of T-bone steak orders will be played in their grills in the future.

PLANS AMAZON FORCE TO REPLACE PACIFISTS

Men Can Tend Babies, Says Mrs. Alice Lee Moque.

Mrs. Alice Lee Moque—writer, suffragette, anti-pacifist, grandmother—will start to organize a regiment of fighting women in Washington this week. Mrs. Moque admits she is the most unrelenting anti-pacifist in Washington. In 1888 she organized a fighting regiment—virile women who were khaki, who could march all day long, and who could shoot straight—and she had no trouble getting 1,000 of them. Now she's a grandmother, but she says she feels just as elated as she did in '88, and she knows she can march just as far and shoot just as straight. She is going to advertise for recruits among her suffrage and author and anti-pacifist friends in Washington, organize a regular regiment of 1,000 women, and make veterans out of them this summer. "If there is any fighting to be done this summer," said Mrs. Moque yesterday, "we will go out and meet the enemy with our Springfield and let pacifist gentlemen sit home and tend the babies." Mrs. Moque has had much military training and is quite well enough equipped to be colonel of a regiment, but she will not allow herself to be made colonel.

RAILROAD MAN DENIES RUMOR OF EXTENSION

Old Dominion Not Planning Line to Columbus, Ohio.

Colin H. Livingstone, president of the Washington and Old Dominion Railway last night dispensed a persistent rumor that the company proposed to extend its line to Columbus, Ohio, by declaring the line has no such intention.

"We have been making surveys for several years with a view of extending our line into the Virginia valley," he said. "We are trying to do this at the lowest cost, and if we can raise the capital, we will run into Winchester."

"The surveys are being made from Blount, Va., the present Virginia terminus into the valley. We must go over or under a mountain and we will probably go over it first, and if the business warrants it, build the tunnel later."

"I believe these rumors emanate from real estate operators anxious to learn our plans and route for speculative purposes. You can say definitely that there is nothing to the report that we contemplate entering Columbus, Ohio, by any road arrangement with the Wabash road that would give them an Atlantic coast terminal."

THINKS REFERENDUM CERTAIN TO CARRY

William F. Gude Says House Will Grant Citizens' Petition.

"Washingtonians who know me best are well aware of the intensity of my desire for a referendum on the proposed prohibition bill," said William F. Gude, chairman of the National Citizens' Referendum Association, former president of the Chamber of Commerce, and active in the civic affairs of the National Capital.

"I have enjoyed the personal acquaintance of the members of this and many previous Congresses, and I feel sure that the members of the House of Representatives will look upon this question in the broad light of an American principle, and will, therefore, grant the petition presented by all our best organizations for a referendum."

Charles J. Columbus, manager of the referendum hearings before the House District Committee, also believes Washington will be allowed to vote on prohibition.

"I confidently expect that the real Americanism of the House of Representatives will assert itself and that a referendum will be granted," he said.

The hearing committee developed the fact that this is not a partisan matter. Men and one woman, representing all political faiths, demanded, in the name of their organizations, that the American principle of the people's voice in the making of national questions should be heard before those questions were finally decided by Congress.

"The appeals for referendum came from individuals who personally represented both sides of the 'liquor' question, but all were unanimous in appealing for referendum."

Nutshell News

Despite the suggestion of Maj. Pullman, superintendent of police, that women should not leave their purses on counters while they are shopping, Z. H. Manning, 911 H street northwest, reported to the police that she left her purse, containing about $24, in a Ninth street grocery store Saturday. When she returned back for the pocketbook it could not be located.

CHARITIES CONFERENCE MAY CHANGE ITS NAME

What promises to form a lively topic of discussion at the forthcoming forty-fourth annual meeting of the National Conference of Charities and Correction is the agitation for a change of name. There has long been a feeling, it is stated, among some of the more active members of the conference that the organization has outgrown its present designation. A referendum vote is being taken on the matter. Many substitutes have been suggested, as for example: "National Council of Social Agencies" and "National Conference on Social Betterment."

CALL OFF GERMAN BAZAAR.

Break Causes Abandonment of Entertainment for War Sufferers.

The breaking of relations between the United States and Germany has caused the bazaar of the relief of war sufferers of the central powers to be called off.

Martin Weigand, who was in charge of preparations for the bazaar, yesterday stated that the original plans have been abandoned.

Convention Hall has been draped with huge flags of the United States and the central powers and thousands of dollars have been spent for the building of booths and other decorations.

Buyers Corned Beef and Cabbage; Nearly Starts Riot

When a flock of cops gathered at the junction of Wisconsin and Prospect avenues trying to line up a curious collection of humans of all colors, shapes and sizes yesterday some folks thought it was a foot riot. It wasn't.

It was just "Lightning Mary"—that's the only name she would give—celebrating the home-coming of her soldier husband from the Mexican border.

Marching to Georgetown's only market Mary dug down in her capacious hand bag and brought the munificent sum of $1.51. Then with a haughty air, she purchased corned beef and cabbage. Hence the commotion.

EASBY SMITH'S CAR IN COLLISION

An automobile owned and operated by G. R. Canby, of Silver Spring, Md., collided with another car belonging to J. Easby Smith and operated by Frank W. Washington, 1631 Thirteenth street northwest, yesterday afternoon in Sixteenth street, near Columbia road. Both machines were slightly damaged. No one was injured.

At the close of the European war it is planned to complete the railroad connecting the cities of Changsha and Hankow, Hunan province, China. Trade conditions will be greatly improved by the completion of this road. There is at present no direct foreign trade.
