HOROSCOPE.

Saturday, April 21, 1917.

Astrologers read for this day an unfavorable morning and a lucky afternoon. Saturn and Uranus are adverse in the early hours but Jupiter and Venus are friendly later. Neptune is in a very evil place late in the evening.

The lunation of this date is not encouraging for world affairs. In Congress the most strident is presented, for foreign affairs will become very critical. In the United States industrial unrest will be ominous in many quarters, it is predicted. Saturn is in a place denoting the death of a star or a comet.

England will suffer from certain revenue conditions that may affect Canada and the country may be much disturbed by internal troubles. Although there may be much discussion of peace, the seers do not discover any hope that it will be brought about before the next winter.

The lunation seriously afflicts the Kaitia's horoscope and a period of misfortune and financial difficulties appears to be most ominous.

More trouble in Ireland is probable as the stars appear to indicate an outbreak that is of grave purpose.

For this date a good guidance in all commercial enterprises undertaken in the afternoon.

Educators have a leading that is most encouraging. This should be a fortunate time for all who work with students or young folk.

Colleges and all seats of learning will gradually come into closer relation with government and the summer may develop a plan of national importance.

Serious misunderstandings between the Western and the Eastern States on questions of national moment are indicated.

Canada has the outlook of large crops and plenty of food. Great development in agriculture is prophesied for the Dominion.

Persons whose birthdate it is probably will have a good year financially, but they should safeguard the health. The young will court or marry.

Children born on this day are likely to be trustworthy, but impulsive and generous to an unwise degree. These subjects of Taurus have Venus as their principal ruling planet and are usually lovers of art and literature.

THE MISTAKEN IDEA.

I wonder why it is that so many seem to have the idea that if you are pretty, you can "step right out of everyday life into the stage world, or the studios, and be an immediate success. I suppose there have been cases where this has happened, and maybe I'm prejudiced, but I have a great respect for the technique which comes from training and experience. You know they say that the greatest art is to conceal art, that is, to be so finished an actor or actress that you appear to be absolutely natural.

So it must seem to people in the audience as though it were not hard work at all, and yet for nearly every scene there have been hours of careful rehearsing. I often marvel at the patience of my own director, going over and over the same thing, again and again, until it is right. Do people think that we start in to take a picture right from the beginning and go straight to the end, with a camera man running around after us snapping the scenes one after the other? In order to present a production successfully to the public, it means that everyone, from the extras or any who hold the number chart up to those at the top, must work together in harmony.

It means that from the director and star down to the property man, there must be enthusiasm, patience, and the everlasting giving of one's strength and faculties. I remember talking one day with Mr. Hugh Ford at the Famous Players' Studio. We were all talking of how much an actress must sacrifice in order to be a success. She must give freely all of her time, her energy, and her brains.

Miss Frederic was working at the moment on a scene, and, as she passed us, she turned and smiled. "There goes one of the pickiest, bravest, little women in this business that ever lived," said Mr. Ford, shaking his head as he looked after her. "There's nothing that woman won't attempt. There's nothing she's afraid of. Nobody knows what she's been through."

I confess I was surprised. While I fully realized all of the hardships and sacrifices one goes through, still I had never considered them perilous. The sinking of the boat in "The Pride of the Clan" was a really dangerous scene where I risked my life, but our interest in our work stimulates our desire for such hazardous moments. I could not think of any role Miss Frederic had appeared in that was fraught with dire risk.

"What do you mean," I asked. "Just look at her," said Mr. Ford, solemnly. "She keeps herself at a hundred and eighteen pounds at all costs."

I have letters from girls all the way from twelve to eighteen. Girls who are absolutely confident of succeeding, if somebody would make a special effort to clear that the distilleries' output must be cut off entirely or at least curtailed in order that distillers' grain may be used for food instead of drink.

The former Secretary of State takes the position that grain is more valuable to the nation as a food than in any other form, and he believes that restriction of the liquor output constitutes a necessary war measure.

James W.—Since you have a mother of your own and may want her to visit you some day, don't you think it might be tactful of you to extend that courtesy now to your wife's mother?

Vivian—Do not delay having your teeth attended to. If you contemplate going on the stage, it is one of the first essentials. No matter how pretty you may be, white, even teeth are considered now absolutely necessary.

Peter S.—I think your idea of a potato farm in Connecticut is good. I am always very much interested in intensive farming.

Kato Canno—Your description of the new venture in pictures in Tokio interested me greatly. I have appeared in several Mexican pictures with the old Biograph Company. Write out your plot in synopsis form and submit it. It is very good.

Answers to Correspondents. Major K. G.—Many thanks for your letter. It is impossible for me to answer all personally, much as I would like to. If you will tell your sister to write me direct, I will send her the address asked for, although I think she is far too young to go alone.

Allison L.—I think the correspondence course would certainly give you a start toward your goal, if you could follow it up with practical experience. I do not think Miss Adams has made any arrangements so far to appear in pictures.

What Is the Answer? Kato Canno—Your description of the new venture in pictures in Tokio interested me greatly. I have appeared in several Mexican pictures with the old Biograph Company. Write out your plot in synopsis form and submit it. It is very good.

Bryan Will Start Drive For Dry U. S. During War

William Jennings Bryan told friends last night that he is planning to push his prohibition propaganda from a new angle.

He stated that he intends shortly to start out on a lecture tour in which he will make nearly a hundred speeches declaring that the distilleries' output must be cut off entirely or at least curtailed in order that distillers' grain may be used for food instead of drink.

The former Secretary of State takes the position that grain is more valuable to the nation as a food than in any other form, and he believes that restriction of the liquor output constitutes a necessary war measure.

SHILOH BAPTIST CHURCH TO HAVE TWO RALLIES

Patriotic Services and Financial Campaign Tomorrow.

The Shiloh Baptist Church, "Strangers' Home," will hold a patriotic service tomorrow at 8 o'clock. The choir and congregation will sing patriotic songs, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. Waldron, will preach a special sermon on the subject, "The Call of Our Country."

The auditorium will be decorated with flags, and seats will be reserved for government officials, several of whom have been invited to make addresses.

In order to increase the attendance and finances of the church, "A Bench Rally" will be held tomorrow. A pew has been assigned to each one of 100 persons who are to fill the pew with attendees and contribute 25 cents each, and collect the same amount from each person who occupies the pew. The members are enthusiastic, and feel sure they will fill the house and raise at least $200 from this effort.

Dr. Waldron will preach the second sermon in the series at 11 o'clock on "Working for God and Working With God," using the subject, "Do All to the Glory of God."

SCHOOL DAYS By DWIG

I can't see any use in such downright foolishness—that's just a sheer waste of good salt!—teaching the boy wastefulness—all I can do to make him mind! Law! If I wasted salt like that I never hear the last of it—HARRY, stop that nonsense now and take up that cross—
