WAR WORK OF Y. M. C. A. STATED AT FT. MYER

Student Officers Try Out New Bayonets—Two Hurt.

The first Y. M. C. A. building to be erected for war work in more than twenty years is rapidly nearing completion on the south end of the drill field of the Officers' Reserve camp at Fort Myer.

Yesterday morning the student officers tried out their new bayonets for the first time. Only two received cuts which necessitated hospital treatment.

Leut. Col. Fenton issued an order yesterday which means that any peddler caught in the confines of the camp will be sorry ever after.

Within two weeks the camp will have an ample supply of water. A long line of pipe is being laid across the Aqueduct Bridge to carry city water right to the bunkhouses.

The contractors who constructed the wooden bunkhouses have arranged a novel "vanity screen" around some of them. The rookies can't look out and the ladies can't look in. The screen is white muslin tacked on posts just about the level of the windows.

One of the most conspicuous features of the camp is the almost entire absence of maids. With the exception of a few cats, there when camp was started, the boys have no pets whatever.

Yesterday's visitors to the camp were Representative Ragsdale, of South Carolina; Col. Raybould, military attaché of the Argentine Legation, and Maj. Requin, a French infantry officer of the French mission.

Capt. Conrad Babcock, recently on duty in Honolulu, has been detailed to serve as adjutant at the camp.

Leut. Col. Fenton said yesterday that a remarkably small percentage of the men who originally came to the camp have left. These left because of physical disability.

BIG DRIVE UNDER WAY BY COMMERCE CHAMBER

Trade Body Expects 500 New Members from Today's Work.

"Rain or shine today we intend to bring in from 400 to 500 new members as a result of today's big drive," declared campaign workers of the Chamber of Commerce today. The largest number of boosters who have yet reported will meet at the chamber at 9:30 this morning and will gather at the New Ebbitt for luncheon at 12:30.

This luncheon will be unique in that seven business women of the city, all members of the Chamber of Commerce, will be present. They are Mrs. O'Toole, Mrs. Edith Bauer, Mrs. N. E. Street, Mrs. Hamilton Adams, Mrs. Maude E. Budd, Mrs. Jeanne Kalka, Mrs. Charles M. Carr, Mrs. M. Brooks, and Miss Bell Hampton.

The moving picture theater owners of the city yesterday began to show at each performance slides asking the people of the city to join the Chamber of Commerce. This action was taken to augment the liberal support that the newspapers of the city are giving to the movement.

At the meeting for the big meeting to be held probably May 29 will be discussed at the meeting today.

FREE TRANSFERS DENIED ON OLD DOMINION LINE

Commerce Commission Holds It Has No Jurisdiction in Case.

The Interstate Commerce Commission will not restore free transfers between the lines of the Washington and Old Dominion Railway and the Capital Traction Company. This was announced in a decision yesterday in the case brought on complaint by C. Elton James and other commuters against the withdrawal of transfers. The commission holds that the Capital Traction Company is not subject to the jurisdiction of the commission. The commission states, however, that transportation on the Washington and Old Dominion line is subject to its jurisdiction, and the case will be kept open for fifteen days to give the complainants an opportunity for a further hearing to attack the Washington and Old Dominion rates.

Early in the proceedings the jurisdiction of the commission over the Capital Traction Company was attacked by attorneys for the road, and the proceedings resolved itself into an issue of such jurisdiction.

E. Hilton Jackson, James T. Sherman, and R. H. Turner are attorneys for the commuters. Wilton J. Lambert appears for the Washington and Old Dominion, and G. Thomas Dunlop for the Capital Traction Company.

ENGLAND LAYS WREATH ON THE TOMB OF DEWEY

Admiral de Chair Goes to Arlington to Honor Hero.

A signal tribute to the friendship between the British and American navies was paid by Rear Admiral Sir Dudley de Chair who, on behalf of the British government, late yesterday afternoon made a pilgrimage to Arlington, across the Potomac, and laid a wreath upon the tomb of Admiral George Dewey. The massive wreath bore this inscription: "A tribute to the undying memory of George Dewey, admiral of the United States navy, with the respectful homage and esteem of the British navy."

The British admiralty had issued instructions for the placing of the wreath on the Dewey tomb and the Britishers said it should be interpreted as a genuine and sincere token of the friendship existing between the navies of the two governments. It also was recognized as an expression of British gratitude over the arrival of United States destroyers in British waters.

Admiral de Chair was accompanied to the cemetery by Commander Lefebvre and other naval officers of the mission. Admiral Benson and several other high ranking officers of the United States navy were present at the ceremonies.

The ceremony was held at the fact that when Admiral Dewey fired across the bows of the German squadron which attempted to enter Manila harbor after it had been blockaded, Admiral Crichton, of the British fleet in those waters, pledged the American commander the co-operation of the British fleet.

Admiral de Chair was accompanied to the cemetery by Commander Lefebvre and other naval officers of the mission. Admiral Benson and several other high ranking officers of the United States navy were present at the ceremonies.

SIX-FOOT-SIX GIANT JOINS AVIATION CORPS

Clyde Carley, Not High Enough, Declines to Fly.

The tallest recruit that has yet applied for enlistment at the army recruiting station, Seventh street and the Avenue, was accepted yesterday morning by Clyde H. Carley, 6 feet 6 inches, who stands 6 feet, 6 inches unshod. Serat, William C. Hunt, recruiting officer on duty at the tent station, stated that Carley was taller by several inches than any applicant who has applied for enlistment since the station was established.

Despite his great "length" Carley only weighs about 175 pounds. Although originally from North Adams, Mass., he has made his home in Washington for several years. As he had had considerable experience with gas engines, he was assigned, at his own request, to the aviation section of the Signal Corps.

Enlistments at the various stations dropped back to normal figures yesterday after the banner number had been reached on Monday. Seventeen recruits were accepted. First Lieut. R. L. McKernan, Medical Corps, U. S. A., examination officer at the station, stated that within the past few days the navy has been getting a better class of men both physically and mentally, and that they are of a type to do creditable service.

The age limit of applicants for enlistment in the regular army has been raised from 17 to 35 to 38 to 40. Pay for enlisted men in the army will be practically doubled on June 15. The more liberal changes are believed, will aid materially in winning recruits.

HAM DENIES PROMISE TO RECOGNIZE UNION

W. R. & E. Co. Official Repudiates Testimony of Utilities Official. Fetal denial was made last night at the strike hearing before the Senate committee by Vice President W. F. Ham, of the Washington Railway and Electric Company, that in signing the 1916 agreement with employees of the railway officials had stated that recognition would be made of the union in an agreement in 1917.

It had been previously testified by J. H. Blackburn, of the Public Utilities Commission, that such was the understanding between the respective parties when a strike threatened in 1916. District Commissioner Newman would not admit that an understanding of this kind existed when he testified before the committee, but he did not deny that he had gained that impression.

When the hearing was resumed last night George A. Wilbur was recalled to the stand for cross-examination. He was asked concerning the wrecking of a car. He gave it as his opinion that it was "stage play."

Attorney Hoover attempted to read into the record the indictments that were returned against the men held responsible for the outrage, but the committee refused to allow it, saying that an indictment was not evidence of guilt. The purport of the attorney's efforts was to show that the strikers were not "careful of either the public or property" as Wilbur had testified to previously.

Vice President Ham was then called. His testimony related mainly to a description of the relief association of the railway, the pension fund of the system and the keen interest exhibited by President King in the men's welfare. He declared that the officials of the company were always willing to discuss questions with the employees and that when the present trouble was brewing they had hoped that the same spirit which exhibited itself on the men's part in 1916 would be evident in 1917.

BRITISH AVIATOR LECTURES.

"The purpose of my coming to Washington with the British War Commission is to give our aviation experts the benefit of England's two and one-half years of experience in flying," said Major Z. W. B. Rees, of the Royal Flying Corps, in relating his experiences before the Cambrian Society which met last night in the Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, to tender him a reception.

Supported by a cane, he graphically described his experiences in bringing down seven out of ten German aeroplanes and of driving the other three away, for which he was awarded the Victoria Cross, after having been wounded.
