For the Master of Beards.

It was in the early days of the war that President Wilson said that one year of war had done more to hasten the United States into the United Nations League than all the years of peace would do.

It is not too much to say that this internationalism, this world-wide recognition of the principle of the brotherhood of man, which is the hallmark of the treaty, has now reached the very core of our national life. It is the very foundation on which the treaty is built. It is the very foundation on which the United States is standing.

It is true that the treaty has been signed by a great many countries, but it is also true that the treaty has been signed by a great many peoples. And it is because of this that the treaty has been signed by a great many peoples that the treaty has been signed by a great many countries.

It is not too much to say that the treaty has been signed by a great many peoples because it is the only way to save the world.

For the Master of Beards.

It was in the early days of the war that President Wilson said that one year of war had done more to hasten the United States into the United Nations League than all the years of peace would do.

It is not too much to say that this internationalism, this world-wide recognition of the principle of the brotherhood of man, which is the hallmark of the treaty, has now reached the very core of our national life. It is the very foundation on which the treaty is built. It is the very foundation on which the United States is standing.

It is true that the treaty has been signed by a great many countries, but it is also true that the treaty has been signed by a great many peoples. And it is because of this that the treaty has been signed by a great many peoples that the treaty has been signed by a great many countries.

It is not too much to say that the treaty has been signed by a great many peoples because it is the only way to save the world.

For the Master of Beards.