

HOOVER ECHOES HUNGER CALL

Writes to U. S. Cartoonists Emphasizing Need of Their Aid.

The hunger call of humanity is as important as ever was the cry for food by our allies, says Herbert Hoover, Federal Food Administrator, in a letter to the cartoonists of America in which he asks for their aid.

"We must have the complete co-operation of every molder of American sentiment," Mr. Hoover wrote, "and it is with all confidence that I call upon the cartoonists of America. With liberation of peoples who have been held under the German yoke, we have millions more of mouths to feed. If Germany is to work out her own salvation, however, we must open up the German trade routes and facilitate intercourse with Argentine and other food-producing countries."

Posters Needed for Drive. Mr. Hoover went on to explain the great food drive of the first week in December and tell of the help that the cartoonists could give in forceful posters and newspaper cartoons.

In this way only, according to Mr. Hoover, can the American people be made to realize that the United States now faces its most difficult food problem.

"If Europe is to be saved," he declared, "America must send to her 20,000,000 tons of food in the next twelve months. Unless they tighten their belts and buckle down to a grim period of sacrifice and service, this country will fall in the biggest moral obligation the war has placed upon its shoulders."

The problem of the world now, according to Mr. Hoover, is to get enough fats. Wheat and sugar needs are partially met.

Oil Concerns Must Quit All Unfair Competition

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday ordered the Consolidated Oil Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, and two of its officers, Nathan Weisenberg and Aaron Bernstein, and the Eastland Linsed Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, and David Bernstein to cease and desist from unfair methods of competition, admitted by them.

Among the prohibited practices was the using of stationery and letter-boards bearing pictures of extensive manufacturing plants, which do not, in fact, exist, adulteration of linsed and other oils with low-grade mineral oils and acids, and publication of representations that the Ohio Fuel and Drug Commission had made a ruling requiring that all linsed oils, spirits of turpentine and the like not used as fuel must be labeled "adulterated."

Indictments ranging from grand larceny to assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill were reported in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

DEATH IN CRASH ACCIDENTAL

The coroner's jury found that Samuel McDaniel's came to his death at Emergency Hospital Sunday because of a lacerated wound in the leg and the infection and shock caused by being struck by an auto at Eighth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. They gave the verdict of unavoidable accident.

When McDaniel was struck by an oil truck Friday it was not believed he was dangerously injured.

PUNKS FOR PIE ARE PILED HIGH

Several Carloads Reach Local Market for Holiday Feast.

Yellow mounds of Thanksgiving pumpkins, piled in front of the produce stands of the wholesale fruit market foretell the many pumpkin pies that will be served on the Washington dinner tables on Thursday. Several carloads of these vegetables were received yesterday in time for the early market.

While nearby farming districts are sending in plentiful supplies of the more substantial fruits and vegetables, such as Irish potatoes, turnips and cabbages for the Thanksgiving table, the delicacies of the Thanksgiving table are coming from a greater distance.

Baskets and buckets of beans and lettuce were received yesterday from Florida. These will be sold at a holiday price, one basket of beans weighing slightly over twenty-five pounds bringing $4.50 in the afternoon market. The local stalls show none of the hot-house vegetables, which prove that Washington is still isolating.

There were no artichokes nor fresh peas, or ripe strawberries, which are found at this time in the produce markets of other cities of the country, visible at any of the local stands.

Live turkeys were selling at Saturday's price of 22 and 23 cents per pound, much to the disappointment of more than one turkey vendor. Dressed turkeys, however, had crept up a cent a pound, over Sunday, due probably to an added wage increase of the poultry pickers who are held responsible for the present high price of the dressed bird.

An International Service Built on Tiny Profits Per Pound

Some industries have been able to get in step with war demands more quickly than others.

In many cases mighty plants have sprung up—but at a prodigious cost.

The packing industry was able to adapt itself to unheard of demands more quickly, perhaps, than any other industry. And this was because the vast equipment of packing plants, refrigerator cars, branch houses, etc., had been gradually developed to its present state of efficiency, so that in the crucial hour it became a mighty international system for war service.

And how had this development taken place? Not by making vast inroads into the capital wealth of the country, but largely by using, from year to year, a portion of the profits, to provide for expansion.

Swift & Company's profits have always been so tiny, compared with sales, that they have had practically no effect on the price of meat, (amounting to only a fraction of a cent per pound).

And yet the owners of the business have been content with reasonable returns on their capital, and have been able, year after year, to put part of the profits back into the business to provide for its expansion.

These fractions of tiny profits have been repaid to the public many fold in the form of better service, and better and cheaper meat, and made it possible for Swift & Company to meet, undaunted, the sudden cry for meat for overseas.

Could any other method of financing a vital industry involve less hardship to the people of the country? Could there be a better instance of true "profit-sharing" than this return in added usefulness and in national preparedness?
