

COMMITTEE ASKS MISS GORMAN TO ATTEND PAGEANT Beauties Aspire to Wear Queen's Crown at Shore. CHARMING GALLERY Many Submit Photographs in Competition to Become "Miss Washington."

Continued from Page One the name and address of the young woman. This should be printed in ink. While Washington young women and their mothers have taken a most unusual interest in the selection of "Miss Washington" and are keenly appreciative of the high honor that goes with it, Atlantic City has been preparing for the greatest demonstration in its history.

Fair representatives of the greatest cities in the country will rule the city for the three days of the pageant as members of the court of King Neptune, who will reign in state. "Miss Meet Celebrities."

Each "Miss Meet" will be entertained after the same fashion as "Miss Washington." The latter will be the center of a brilliant circle of society girls, movie stars, celebrities, artists, writers, and statesmen. The three days of her visit will be filled with a continuous round of dinners, dances, pageants, banquets, and balls.

Chaperoned by a matron prominent in Washington society, "Miss Washington" will occupy a palatial suite facing the sea in one of the greatest of the Atlantic City boardwalk hotels. She will be met by a committee of welcome and will be given every possible sort of hospitality during her stay.

In fact, "Miss Washington" will have to ask her chaperone to help her select which of a dozen teas or luncheons will be the most enjoyable, for she will be swamped with invitations. King Neptune, who will arrive with pomp and circumstance on the morning of the seventh, will appear far out at sea and will be escorted to shore by a flotilla of gay craft. He will assemble his court of beauties and will march for two days.

Bathers' Revue Scheduled. Immediately after his arrival the brilliant pageant of events will begin. Bathers' Revue, which promises to eclipse anything ever attempted at Atlantic City, will feature a variety of costumes, highly competent part in the pageant will form a monster parade of rolling chairs, headed by the queen of the beach—"Miss Washington."

On the last night of the celebration Governor Edwards of New Jersey will give a ball at which the most beautiful of the young women will be selected by a board of judges, and will be presented at the 12,000 mermaid which was captured by "Miss Washington" last year. In order that "Miss Washington" may have every opportunity to be the supremely charming beauty of Atlantic City local merchants are co-operating to supply her with the smartest possible wardrobe.

One of the most important features in the selection of "Miss Washington" will be the method employed. A board of highly competent men, most of them artists or representatives of organizations interested in the artistic development of Washington, will make the final award after personally viewing the young women. Artificial beauty will not be sufficient. The young woman must not only have exquisite features but must possess artistic grace and refinement.

The judges are: Henry E. Stringer, president of the City Club; Herbert Francis Clark, Benson B. Moore, and A. H. O'Rourke, of the Landscape Club and the Washington Society; Isaac C. Gans, vice president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce; Lawrence Beatus, managing director of Loew's Palace theater; Nelson Bell, publicity director of the Kendall theater; A. H. Shields, manager of Moore's Rialto theater; and Watson B. Miller, department commander of the American Legion.

These judges, and The Herald, will make an effort to select the "Miss Washington" and to make her stay at Atlantic City a triumph.
