

The Beautiful And Damned

By F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Gloria was scornful when he returned to Marietta. Why had he not forced his way in? That was what she would have done!

Between them they drafted a letter to the old man and after considerable revision sent it off. It was half an apology, half a manufactured explanation. The letter was not answered.

Came a day in September, a day flushed with alternate sun and rain, without freshness. On that day they left the gray house, which had seen the flower of their love.

"What are those?" she demanded, pointing to some books piled upon one of the crates.

"That's my old stamp collection," he answered sheepishly. "I forgot to pack it."

"Anthony, it's so silly to carry it around."

"Well, I was looking through it the day we left the apartment. When I saw it, I decided not to store it."

"Can't you sell it? Haven't we enough junk?"

"I'm sorry," he said humbly. "With a thunderous rattling, the trunk rolled in front of Gloria. She shook her fist defiantly at the four walls."

"I'm so glad to go!" she cried, "so glad, Oh, my God, how I hate this house!"

So the brilliant and beautiful lady went up with her husband to New York. On the very train that bore them away they quarreled—her bitter words had the frequency, the regularity, the inevitability of the stations they passed.

"Don't be cross," begged Anthony piteously. "We've got nothing but each other, after all."

"We haven't even that, most of the time," cried Gloria.

"A lot of times—beginning with one occasion on the station platform at Redgate."

THE SLEEVELESS GOWN

Morning, Judge

By Rudolph Perkins.

One night Lucy Wilkerson rushed out of her bedroom to the corner grocery to answer the telephone. Her husband Tom was all primed when she got back.

"Woman," he began, "aincha got enny more disrespect fo' yohself than to go into the street in yo' nightgown?"

The woman started to explain the difference between a nightie and a Mother Hubbard, but before she said two words, it was testified, Tom loosened six of her teeth.

That little mistake cost him $20, besides the dentist bill.

Chile, apparently, has sent a representative to this country to study the fruit industry here and produce a market for Chilean fruits.

On how to make arms fit for public appearance. Can't you imagine the skeletons that will be out now? And the opposites?

The Dash of Savagery. Going home up Fifth avenue, there was a window bearing the official stamp of the sleeveless gown for day wear, in black canton and gray, and beige and brown, on waxen figures, hatted and necked, ready for the new occupant to step out of a midday where'er her fancy led her, gloved or gloveless, according to taste.

Any new departure like this naturally starts on first appearance but given a month or two everybody is following. Undoubtedly ere many new moons arms will be projecting themselves wholesale in true,athing' out fashion except, perhaps, for a dash of savagery in brackets encircling both upper and lower arms.

Funny sector of the so-called human race, we witness here! Since fashion decrees practically no hostry to the view mutiny breaks out in untrammelled arms. Which should teach fashion dictators that you cannot keep even the best of women too covered up. For the beauty of the landscape maybe it were better to have let the fourteen-inch skirt hem remain!

The Blow to Romance. The short skirt is ancient history now, however, and the sleeveless frock most certainly upon us. If not totally bare, the arm projects its too grossness or too leanness through a filmy layer of transparent cloth, leaving arm shapeliness as much to be desired.

I got a blow the other night," said I, with moon engendering sentiment enveloping me, "as you proposed to me."

"Say, dear," replied my adorer of that other night, "it seems to me your arms are getting awfully fat."

Fat arms are destructive of sentiment, awfully! There is such an ugly flabbiness about them, as liberate looking piling up of grossness that is not to be pitied, for the simple reason it can be worked off, though perhaps not with the ease with which it was laid on. Simply enough, if one does not wait until the upper arm resembles the companion piece of a well ordered pot of cabbage.

Soft, Deep-Pile Fabrics—Fashion's Foremost Vogue in Fall Tailleurs for Women and Misses

Marleen, veldyne, bolivia and pandora—by name—beautiful, soft-surface fabrics that beautifully lend themselves to the naturally graceful, youthful lines of these newer tailleurs.

How effective the fine tucks, the slim, snug-fitting sleeve and shoulder lines—the narrow bias strappings, the heavy tailored stitching and perfect tailoring all meet in these handsome tailleurs must be seen to be realized.

Sketches picture two of the models in autumn brown and black.

Misses' Tailleurs $59.50 to $75 Women's Tailleurs $59.50 to $95 Women's and Misses' Apparel Section, Third Floor.

An Unusually Varied Showing of Coats of Rich Fabrics and Soft Furs, $95 and up

The beauty of these newer coats is not all in their colors—Genoese red, kit fox gray, Hawaiian blue and the wonderful browns—their soft materials, fashiona, marianna, marvella and gena, too, express the graceful tendencies of the new mode. While becoming trimmings of wolf, platinum and taupe fox, caracal, beaver and squirrel complete the beautiful ensemble.

And—since the market news tells of an acute scarcity of such coats—an advancing of fur prices—and since we offer you a complete selection of high-grade coats from which to choose (many of which we will not be able to duplicate), we urge the point of choosing now for entire satisfaction in months to come.

HOROSCOPE

AND OF GREAT IMPORTANCE TO ALL IN WHICH TO SETTLE BUSINESS MATTERS. WHILE MERCURY IS IN KINDLY ASPECT, JUPITER IS STRONGLY ADVERSE.

There is a menacing sign for men of affairs and is read as presaging many great anxieties. While all the planetary influences will be toward great development of business along co-operative or profit-sharing lines there is to be increase of corporation control that is menacing at this time.

Community movements will multiply and there will be a growing solidarity among the people that should benefit small cities. Messages of great import to the nation will be received before another month passes, it is prognosticated.

Success for many least conspicuous in the present political campaign is indicated, but few women will attain the goal of ambition. While many women candidates are to be disappointed at least one will attain high place.

For several years the seers have foretold that the churches of the land are to become more identified with every day affairs and now again the seers declare that radical changes are to be made in the scope of their work. The West is to be the scene of many great activities, if the stars are read aright.

Naval movements on the Pacific coast are to develop a surprise, it is forecast. Farmers and fruit-growers will suffer losses that will be repaid by big returns for their produce, it is prophesied. Again the prices of food will become the subject of national discussion.
