Sunrise.

BY WALTER ANONYM.

Morn standeth at the eastern gate! And with his burnished lance Marshals the glowing hours, which wait The ardent sun's advance.

Before his glance of fire! And the young sentinels of even With trembling steps retire.

Night hideth in the azure heaven

Fading, and fainting, one by one Vanish the spa kling spheres; While calmly, like a sainted nun, The pale moon disappears. He bids the willing hours fly
O'er hili-side and through dale;
Smiles on the small cloud flitting by,

And tints the far-off sail! He broidereth, with golden hand,
The meadow and the plain;
He scattereth sunbeams o'er the land,
As a sower scattereth grain.

He crumples broken rays of light Within the crisping surge; He danceth on the breakers white, And driveth dim and dusky night To the horizon's verge.

Behold! at his electric word Day's banner is nnfurled! A soft, sweet orison is heard, And whispering tree and joyous bird, Chant to the waking world!

Aurora comes! her glowing zone Circled with flowery bands; And lo! upon his crims in throne Phæbus exulting stands!

Sunrise! God's smile! as radiant now As at creation's prime; When first it sparkled on the brow Of unrecorded Time!

Gentle Words. The sun may warm the grass to life

The dew, the drooping flower, And eyes grow bright and want the light Of Autumn's opening hour; But words that breathe of tenderness And smiles we know are true, Are warmer than the summer time, And sweeter than the dew.

It is not much the world can give, With all its subtle art;
And gold and gems are not the things
To satisfy the heart; But, oh! if those who cluster round The altar and the heart, Give gentle words and loving smiles, How beautiful is earth.

THE JOINTED STEAMSHIP .- A short time ago a vessel of very novel description appeared in the East India Docks. She was of iron, built in compartments or sections, with this remarkable peculiarity, that each section, instead of forming part of an ordinary rigid, indivisible vessel, as in the Great Eastern, was a vessel, complete in itself, and con-nected to the other sections by a moveable joint of nected to the other sections by a moveable joint of extreme simplicity and immense strength. The joints were constructed by giving to the after end of each section a concave form, enabling it to contain and overlap the convex bow of the adjoining section. Through the overlapping parts, at the sides of the vessel, were inserted massive iron bolts, resting in stout wrought iron sponsors, firmly attached to the ship's sides and frame work. These bolts, which constituted the pivots or centres of the joints, were attached to powerful levers under the decks, by means of which they could be drawn inwards for disconnecting, or pushed outwards for connecting the sections. The vessel was, in fact, a "jointed ship," capable of bending at the joints both upwards and downwards, accommodating herself to the rise and fall of the waves, and fitted with powerful gear for instantaneously detaching one or more of her sections when required. We understand the following desiderata are attained by this new system of naval construction.

Vessels of exceedingly light draught, and of length far greater than hitherto, carry ng the largest car goes, may be used without the danger of breaking goes, may be used without the danger of oreaking their backs, or even straining; the yielding of the joints obviating that liability. The great length, light draught and narrow midship section permit the attainment of unprecedented speed, whilst the facility for detaching part of the receal in case of facility for detaching part of the vessel in case of collision, fire, sudden leaking, or grounding with a falling tide, affords a means of saving life and a portion of hull and cargo, when otherwise all would be lost. In steam shipping a great economy of time lost. In steam shipping a great economy of time and expense is effected. One section carries the engine and screw; all the other sections are appropriated to cargo. On the arrival at its place of desti-nation of a "jointed ship," the engine and screw section is immediately detached, transferred to another jointed vessel of same guage of joint, and despatched at once without incurring the delay of unloading one cargo and loading another. The detention of marine engines during the repair of sails is also avoided by this system. The sections of jointed vessels can load at inland ports, proceed separately, by canal or river, to the nearest seaport, there connect with the steam section, and take their cargoes direct over sea, avoiding the delay and expense of transhipment. The Joint Ship Company, of Rood Lane, are going to run an iron screw collier, as a pioneer vessel, in the London coal trade. Her coal-laden sections, when detached from the steam section, will act as lighters, and deliver their coals direct to all waterside premises, docks, canals, and creeks of the Thames; avoiding the expense o coal-whipping and loss by breakage of the coals. — Illustrated London News.

How to GET to Congress.—The following story is told by the Mobile Tribune of Judge Hawkins, the present representative to Congress from the State of Florida—a man, by the way, brimful of genuine wit. During the war with the Florida Indians he commanded a volunteer company. On one occa-sion they fell upon a party of the enemy concealed in a swamp. The captain sprang upon a log, (with more valor than discretion,) waved his sweed, and cheered his men to the charge. Just then he was shot down. One of his officers ran to ask if he was much hurt. "Not very badly," said Hawkins, "just about enough to send me to Congress!" The p ediction has now been verified.

RALEIGH, N. C., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1857.

ROMANCE OF REAL LIFE.—There was at fine old General once, who having spent most of his life in the field of Mars, knew very little about the camp of Cupid. He was one of those rough and hones spirits often met with in his gallant profession; in-nocent as an infant of almost every thing save high integrity and indomitable bravery. He was nearly fifty years old, and his toils were over when master Dan brought him acquainted with a widow Wadman, in whose eyes he began to detect something that made him feel uneasy. Here was the result of

New Hampshine,

Vereboot,

Museuch meets

At length, however, the blunt honesty of his disposition rose uppermost upon his conflicting plans, and his course was chosen. At school he had once studied "Othello's Defence" to recite at an exhibition, but made a failure; he now recollected there was something in this defence to recite, very much like what he wanted to say. He got the book immediately, found the passage, slapped on his hat, with a determined air, and posted off to the widow Wadman's with Shakespeare under his arm.

"Madame," said General Uncle Toby, opening his book at the marked place, with the solemnity of a pleader at the bar-Madam-

"Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the set phrase of peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years pith
Till now some nine months wasted they have used Their dearest action in the tented field; And little of this great world can I speak, More than pertains to feast of broil and battle; And therefore"—

Here the General closed the book, wiped his forenead, looked up at the ceiling, and said with a spasmodic gasp, "I want to get married!" The widow laughed for ten minutes by the watch before she could uter a syllable, and then she said, with precious tears of humor rolling down her goodnatured cheeks, "And who is it you want to marry, General ?" "You," said Uncle Toby, flourishing his aword-arm in the air, and assuming a military attitude of defence, as if he expected an assault from the widow immediately.

"Will you kill me if I marry you?" said the widow, with a merry twinkle in her eye.
"No, madam!" replied Uncle Toby, in a most serious and deprecating tone, as if to assure her that such an idea had never entered his head. "Well, then, I guess I'll marry you," said the widow. "Thank you, ma'am," said Uncle Toby, "but one thing I am bound to tell you—I wear a wig!" The widow started, remained silent a moment, and then went into a longer, louder, and merrier laugh than she had indulged in before, at the end of which she drew her seat nearer the General gravely laid her hand on his head, gently lifted his wig off and placed it on the table.

General Uncle Toby had never known fear in bot battle, but he now felt a decisive inclination to run away. The widow laughed again as though she never would stop, and the General was about to lay his hat upon his denuded head and bolt, when the facetious lady placed her hand upon his arm and detained him. She then deliberately raised her other hand to her own head, with a sort of military precision, executed a rapid manœuvre with her five fingers, pulled off her whole head of fine glossy hair, and placing it upon the table by the side of the General's, remained scated with ludicrous gravity, in front of her accepted lover, quite bald!

As may be expected, Uncle Toby now laughed along with the widow, and they soon grew so merry over the affair that the maid servant peeped through the key-hole at the noise, and saw the old couple dancing a jig and hobbing their bald pates at each other like a pair of Chinese mandarins. So the two very shortly laid their heads together upon the pillow of matrimony.

A woman recently appeared before a magistrate to complain of the ill usage she received from her husband. "What pretext had he for beating you?" enquired the magistrate, "Please, sir, he didn't have no pretext," replied the woman; "it was a
