

THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1889. CROSBY & NOYES, Editors.

THE EVENING STAR has the largest local circulation of any newspaper published in Washington.

New York Office Room 83, Tribune Building.

Georgetown is deprived of communication by canal, wheat and limestone. The Baltimore and Ohio road will afford a bold step of the kind, and if the temptation presented were sufficiently strong to cause it to desire to build for Georgetown's accommodation a railroad line along the canal bed, duplicating in Montgomery county, at least, a part of its present system, this line could be promptly supplied. But in the present circumstances of the Baltimore and Ohio the prospect of this form of relief is shadowy. The reasonable alternatives for Georgetown are, on the one hand, the service of the Baltimore and Ohio over its present line, with an extension at some time, perhaps, bringing it still nearer to the doors of the Georgetown business men than the present freight depots of the Baltimore and Ohio, and on the other hand, the service of an independent railroad substituted for the canal as a rate-cheaping competitor with the Baltimore and Ohio, interested especially in increasing the trade of its terminal, Georgetown, and with no motive to cause this trade to shift to some more favored point along its line, like Baltimore, which through enterprise has hitherto absorbed nearly all the commerce and trade for which the situation of the capital adapted it. There is no room for doubt concerning the choice which the capital, desiring to develop the use of the water-power and commercial facilities of the Potomac, would make between these alternatives if the choice were open to it. But as matters now stand the capital has much less to say concerning the form of substitute for its lost canal than the B. & O. railroad, with its quarter million of repair bonds, and while the District has a fairly distinct notion of what it wants in the matter, it will probably have to be satisfied, according to its custom in railroad matters, with what it can get.

For an example of a pour law administered to its own destruction commensurate to the statute prohibiting the importation of foreigners under contract to perform services here. It is a vicious and entangling measure, easier to violate in ways not contemplated by its framers than to enforce in the field which it was expressly designed to cover. Its original purpose was to prevent the introduction into this country of a vast horde of ignorant, besotted foreigners to be the places of our native or naturalized workmen in mining factories. In this respect it seems to have failed, as the foreigners continue to pour into the country and to be employed in many places to the exclusion of men already on the soil; whereas the clergyman brought over to minister to the spiritual needs of Holy Trinity parish in New York, the Swiss manufacturing expert who was to instruct American working people in a new handicraft, and other strangers who were to be most valuable acquisitions, are ruled out on technical considerations. The latest victims of this absurd legislation are the eminent scholars whom it was proposed to bring over from Europe as instructors in the University near this city. Why America should be robbed of the services of the cream of Europe's civilization by a law which was intended only to protect her against being over-run by the scum does not appear. The statute evidently needs some energetic overhauling. As it stands it raises no barriers to the incursion of a low class of immigrants who do not stick at perjury as a means of evasion, but shuts out persons of character whose finer sensibilities revolt at the idea of sneaking into the country under the cover of a falsehood when the truth would shut the door in their faces.

The secular censor of the British press has been given food for a lively controversy by the reported action of Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain in quitting the table of a distinguished hostess because the talk of her fellow-diners was too broad for her taste. The merits of the case will not be fully understood, because there was no reporter present to give to the world a faithful transcript of the conversation. It may be taken for granted, however, that Mrs. Chamberlain, whose refined associations in America are a sufficient warrant against her being anything of the sort for sensational purposes, was really shocked by what she heard and did not wish to subject herself to further shame for her surroundings. Our English cousins often laugh at us for the restrictions we place upon our polite converse, and to some extent they are justified. The mock modesty which refuses to recognize distinction of sex in the lower animals, classing all members of the canine family as male and of the bovine as female, which confuses all the natural conditions of the human frame in the sweeping category of "limbs," and which treats all the natural conditions and incidents of motherhood as topics only fit for muffled tongues, deserves nothing but contempt. There is, however, a marked distinction between such vulgar prudery and that finer sensitiveness which draws the line at the revealing of family scandals in all their minutest details, for instance, not for the purpose of discovering how a fellow-being in misfortune can be helped back to a fair place in the world, or how sorrowing friends can be comforted, but purely for the enjoyment of a moral wallow, it is infinitely worse. The leper who has a sufficient regard for the sensibilities of other men to draw a robe over his sores is to be commended above him who exposes his loathsomeness needlessly. What the old cynic said about society's growing no better, but only more decent, has some point. But who will say that society is not actually better for its greater decency? And is the woman to be blamed who is brave enough to face criticism by uttering her protest against letting both virtuous go, when the lesser one, at least, can still be retained with profit?

Score another point for Mayor Grant. As a member of the New York board of apportionment he has announced his intention to vote against the proposed appropriation for the Museum of Art until the trustees throw open the doors of the institution on Sundays, so that the people who have to work all the rest of the week can have a chance to enjoy the galleries they are taxed to support. Nobody in Congress has yet taken an equally righteous and popular stand about the Congressional Library and the National Museum, and why not?

All is quiet along the Potomac at last. The Washington Monument stands firmly, secured in a broad foundation-bed of concrete. No serious apprehensions are felt that any excess of water will ever come to Washington from the new reservoir.

The Republicans of Norwich, Conn., are feeling sore over the fact that the democrats swept the town on election day. They may congratulate themselves on having a town that is swept by anybody, even once a year. The District health officer is respectfully recommended to open negotiations with the Norwich democrats and see if he cannot get them to sweep some of the neglected alleys of Washington before the hot weather comes on.

There is general concord among the British newspapers as to the powerful influence exerted upon the masses of the people by Henry George during his platform tour. And yet that influence does not seem to have extended to the point of inducing any of the great landowners to offer their property to the state in the interest of a new dispensation.

ROBINSON'S REASONS. THE principal ground on which we claim our patronage is the all-important fact that we carry in stock the goods you want. Everything in the line of Boy's Apparel that has a good claim to solid merit and correct style is represented in our incomparable stock of Boys' and Children's Clothing.

OUR styles are acknowledged to be always in advance. Why shouldn't they? We have no other interest to claim our thought or our labor. Boys' and Children's Clothing is our business—and one that will be appreciated by Ladies—away our Home has become the favorite shopping place of Mothers of Boys. It is that our clerks are MEN—well-trained, courteous salesmen—not half-grown boys who can't be expected to have much knowledge of the wares they sell. Cheap huck is an unknown quantity in our House. As it is with clothing so with clerks—the best is always the cheapest. No patron of our House has ever yet had the slightest cause to complain of our want of courtesy or lack of attention on the part of any of our salesmen. They are Gentlemen, and we'll vouch for it.

B. ROBINSON & CO. THE BOYS' IDEAL CLOTHIERS. 609 PA. AVE. WET GOODS. WET GOODS. We find upon examination that we got considerable stock wet by the flood of our late Sunday, which must be sold off at once, such as LONSDALE, 10-4 short length SHIRTING, and a small lot of BLANKETS, all of which will be sold off at a sacrifice. We have also a small lot of ALL-WOOL DRESS GOODS, 1/2, former price $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $4.50, $5.00, $5.50, $6.00, $6.50, $7.00, $7.50, $8.00, $8.50, $9.00, $9.50, $10.00, $10.50,
