

THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON, October 10, 1892.

CROSBY S. NOTES, Editor.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent circulation in Washington three times larger than that of any other paper in the city.

New York has become again the recognized battle ground. Its importance to both parties is great.

The republicans by holding the other states carried in 1888 and the usually republican north-western states, even allowing for the certain loss of a few electoral votes in Michigan, can do without New York.

But there is hardly the slightest possibility of their preserving their 1888 line intact in view of the tremendous assault upon so many weak and wavering points at once.

In view of the indications of recent elections, the loss of New York would reduce them to a desperate plight, and all that can be said is that they might possibly squeeze through as victors in spite of this loss.

As the democratic case would without New York be hopeless. Hence arise the strenuous efforts made by both parties to carry the electoral vote of that great commonwealth whose vote, often decisive, is always an important factor in presidential elections.

Hence also spring those complexities in the situation so apparent at the moment—complexities not confined to either party, but nearly evenly distributed between the two organizations.

The fact of democratic unity in the counties below Harlem river is now well recognized, notwithstanding the attitude of some of the minor "anti-smugger" leaders and the decision of their committee to keep up their organization.

To meet and, if possible, overcome the large majority to be anticipated in these counties, composed of the most thickly settled communities in the state, committed under favorable circumstances to the democracy and embracing elements thoroughly under the control of the managers, the republicans are endeavoring to secure a vote in the rural parts of the state and the interior cities.

There have been able nearly always to command magnificent majorities. In view of the benefits claimed to be conferred by the existing tariff on the small farmers along or near the Canadian border they expect an increased vote there, and they also have for some time been endeavoring to get all. As well as any party that ever existed in any country the republicans know the supreme value in a great crisis of thorough organization.

This availed them in 1888, along with the defects of their enemy's line of battle. This year there is less to look for in the way of democratic weakness, the democratic being the assailable. The reported approaching meeting of the republicans to discuss their plan from all over the state is a recognition of the necessity on the part of the republican leaders of greater efforts in order to succeed.

The large vote of 1888 must be increased if the electoral vote of New York is secured for that party, and since there is risk of losses in the west it is deemed wise to spare no pains to obtain the empire state. From this time until the polls close the conflict will be waged with all the energy and ability of which the two parties are capable.

A special feature of the Columbus celebration is the religious services of the Hebrews and the Catholics. The latter honor the discoverer specially because he, a member of their communion, represented at the moment of the discovery of the continent, the Catholic of all the powers of the earth, the States of the Church alone excepted.

The Hebrews take particular note in the commemoration because the new world has been the one spot on the earth where for many years they have enjoyed personal and religious freedom. Other special honors are paid to Columbus by Italians and Spaniards.

But in this anniversary these features are merely parts of the grand whole in which all the people of the republic and the lovers of progress throughout the world are proud to take their places to honor the man and the event.

A schoolmaster in Ontario who was humiliated beyond endurance by a number of young ruffians who had rebelled against her authority, ended her trouble by suicide.

Great writers are pictured with intense pathos the tyranny of schoolmasters over sickly, small boys, and at other phases of the relation of pupil and teacher, in which some frail woman, compelled to seek a living in the schoolroom, is bullied by mothers of her class until life ceases to be worth while, has not been so clearly presented.

It is a theme not altogether unworthy of the novelist who writes with a purpose.

Mr. Stevenson declares that should he be elected he will, to the best of his ability, cooperate with Mr. Cleveland in giving practical effect to his views. This in this expression some indication that he rather over-estimates the active possibilities of a vice-presidential career, especially in association with a President whose confidence in his own judgment is as great as Mr. Cleveland's is. It is altogether possible that moral support would be more in the vice-presidential line than active co-operation.

The four hundredth anniversary of Christopher Columbus' discovery of a new world will be celebrated by a portion of Washington's citizens on the 12th instant, the old date, while the public schools will honor the event on the 21st of October, the new style. This gives variety and a chance for all to commemorate the most important discovery of modern times. The flag raising, declamation and singing will be patriotic objects of high value to the young. Honors at once to the republic and the man whose faith, skill and courage led to its founding and to the civilization of the hemisphere are appropriately paid by the youth of that republic—the hope and bulwark for the future.

The largely increased first day's registration in the interior of New York shows lively interest in the presidential struggle and presages a larger vote than usual. So far as it has a real sense of importance, the increase in the vote is favorable to the republicans, who are generally in the majority above Harlem river. But the big registration in Elmira, Senator Hill's city and stronghold, is a pointer in the opposite direction as indicating that the Hill men outside of New York as well as in that city will be loyal.

The enterprising Buffalo News printed on Sunday, October 2, a finely illustrated forty-page paper, exhibiting the present greatness and future prospects of Buffalo. This is the age of notable journalistic achievements.

Having public indignation behind it, Mayor Grant's veto flattens out the trolley in New York. Public indignation should use the weapon of the municipal veto in all other cities.

Chicago must not make the mistake of confounding Bandmaster Sousa with the Marine Band. That organization was famous before Sousa, led it, and still exists in Washington with undiminished reputation and musical capacity.

The populists should observe the cyclone, which did a good deal of injury in a very spectacular manner, but is conspicuously deficient in staying powers.

Perhaps it might be a wholesome idea to induce August Belmont to postpone his dramatic tour long enough to deliver a few political speeches in the egg-throwing districts.

It is remarkable to note how much life Philadelphia infused into the campaign when it bestowed David Martin on New York.

These are the days when the partisan vigor temporarily to the patriot, the presidential impatience to the Columbian celebrant.

People who are oppressed by the quickness of politics might move into Texas.

THREE-DAY SALE.

MILLINERY AND CLOAKS.

Our Millinery and Cloak trade has started with a crash, and no wonder. Here we have the Largest Stock.

Best Assortment. Lowest Prices.

A trio of facts which are hard to equal.

If you have not visited our Millinery and Cloak Department you can't afford to miss the extraordinary sales which we are offering at this Day Sale.

You should take the first steps toward them—away from the HEAVIEST WEIGHTS right away.

COMFORT in your first duty. That will "sell" off the light underwear—and even if you don't go into the HEAVIEST WEIGHTS right away.

At the same time you might as well buy the others while you are about it.

There is such a difference in UNDERWEAR—such a difference in seeing folks' ideas of what is best—and what the best is worth. They make us carry on to suit almost everybody.

They have the reputation of being the best fitting—most honest cost there are. There are the trashy kinds that are too cheap to be good—and there are our kinds that we ask only moderately for. It is those we want you to depend on. Do, because we can touch for their satisfaction—giving.

You see we keep to provide all wants—men's, women's—and child's.
