TEMPERANCE EXHIBITS. Victims of Strong Drink Before the Police Court. Many of the Prisoners Owe Their Arrest to One Cause—The Cases on Trial.

There were more than forty prisoners in the Police Court this morning, and Judge Kimball had to hear all the cases, owing to the absence of Judge Miller, who had been called away by the death of a friend.

When Judge Kimball made his appearance the first case called was one in which Sam McIlhenny, a young man a victim of rum, appeared to answer a charge of disorderly conduct, and he pled guilty.

Special Officer Ricketts complained against the young man, and his testimony being forth some remarks about policemen being "in the line of business," the judge said, "With this example before them," said the judge, "I don't see how they (the policemen) can still indulge in liquor."

The evidence was heard, and the court took the young man's personal bonds. The young man, named John, was charged with being in the line of business, and the judge said, "I was going in the saloon for a drink," the prisoner said. "I had money in my pocket."

"Unfortunately," said the judge, "the law permits a man to go into saloons, but he must not get drunk. It is lousy about such places. If I had my way there would be no such places."

"When I saw him," said an officer, "he was near East street and Pennsylvania avenue begging for money to buy liquor, and when two men refused his request and let him go, he followed them in the saloon and took hold of them."

The judge thought it about time that McIlhenny had learned to let liquor alone, and gave him thirty days in the workhouse. Another example of the evils of intemperance was shown when a young man named John Sullivan appeared at the rail to answer a charge of having used profane language.

His aged father appeared as a witness against him, and had a series of complaints against him. "Every time he gets paid off," said the father, "he gets drunk, and it is several days before he is able to get to work."

"John is a married man," said the father, "and his baby was left at my house under false pretenses."

"I'll keep away," said John, "and if you give me just one chance I'll take the pledge."

"What do you say to this?" the father was asked. "I'll trust him once," was the father's response.

The judge thereupon released him. Still another victim of intemperance appeared in the person of James E. Wack, who occupied a foot pavement instead of going home last night.

Obstructing the sidewalk with his person was the charge, and the usual fine was imposed.

Visit of the Orphans. Monday morning the orphans of the Masonic Home of Virginia, located at Richmond, arrived at the city, under the guidance of the officers of that institution. While here they have been the guests of the National Hotel.

AMUSEMENTS. The Bahen Testimonial.—The testimonial benefit to be given to George D. Bahen at Metzerott Hall tonight will undoubtedly attract a large audience. It is under the auspices of the law department of the Georgetown University. The best local talent will participate in the program, which will be as follows: Georgetown University March, Georgetown University Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar clubs; original songs; Mr. Hub. T. Smith; potpourri; Tuxedo Mandolin and Guitar Quartet; recitation, Mr. Ed. J. Walsh; Le Rosinard (comic solo), Mr. Condi Nash (accompanist), Mr. John Porter Lawrence; Ave Marie, Bach-Gounod; Mrs. Anna Craig Hill; v. o. obligato, Mr. Herman C. Noyes (accompanist), John Porter Lawrence; in Piccadilly, George L. Osgood, Georgetown University Glee Club.

"The Redemption" Repetition.—Last night the Choral Society repeated the oratorio of "The Redemption" at the National Church, and the audience was fully as large as on the first performance.

The performance was ably assisted by the singers, and the choruses were given with greater precision of attack. The soloists were: Mrs. Annie Craig Hill, Mrs. W. E. Miller, Mrs. Mattingly, Miss Jennie J. Brown, Miss Mary McKee, Miss Charlotte Andrus, soprano; Mrs. W. E. Miller, alto; Mrs. Mattingly, contralto; Mrs. W. E. Miller, tenor; Messrs. Henry M. Paul, Jos. S. Thomas and Eugene E. Stevens, basses. It was intended that Mr. Frank P. Reaside should sing the role of Jesus last night, but the death of a relative prevented his appearance, and Mr. Paul stepped into his place.

Tuesday night. All the other soloists did well. As Prof. Pearman was suffering from a cold the burden of the tenor work fell on Mr. Skerrett. The success of the musical performances has added largely to the reputation of the Choral Society, and has firmly fixed in the minds of the public the name of the Choral Society. To Prof. Joseph Kasper, the musical director, is due high praise for bringing the society up to its present standard of work.

Final Concert.—At the final concert of the National Lyceum course, last evening, at Metzerott Hall, the following were the soloists: Mr. James Mahoney, Mrs. Kitty Thompson-Berry, Mrs. Clara V. Flint and the Columbia Lyceum Trio.

He is admirably prepared, having lived several years among them, has studied them, and has himself become their literary interpreter through his work in the Century.

The Bischoff Concerts.—It will be seen by the announcement in the amusement column that the fourth concert in the Bischoff course will be given at the National Congregational Church. Those who have attended these entertainments from time to time before the past few days will hardly need to be reminded of the uniform excellence, while their great popularity for so long a time should readily be remembered. The program for this evening is as follows: "The Builders," by John Fox, Jr.; "The Builders," by John Fox, Jr.; "The Builders," by John Fox, Jr.; "The Builders," by John Fox, Jr.

Vagrants Arrested. There were two cases of vagrancy against four defendants tried in the Police Court today, and the four prisoners were lucky enough to get off on their personal bonds. One case was that of James E. Wack, colored, who was charged with vagrancy, while James Brady and John Sweeney appeared as prisoners in the other case.

"This morning about 2 o'clock I found these colored men asleep on the grating in front of the Corcoran Hotel, where they were enjoying the warm air from the engine room."

The men denied that they were vagrants, and said they were down in the city late that they did not want to go all the way home.

"I had been over at Jackson City working," said one of the men. "Are you sure you did not go over there to play policy?" the judge asked.

"Well," said the court, "the next time you are down town late you had better go home and not near this building. You are discharged."

The white men are strangers in the city, and last night they were trying to leave the city on a freight train when a special policeman arrested them.

"What are you going to do?" the judge asked the men. "We want to leave town," one of them responded.

"You can't leave on a freight train," the judge told them. They gave their personal bonds and departed.
