The new air motor that is to be run over the Eckington railroad arrived yesterday, and was at once put on a trial run. It was first charged at the power house in Eckington and then taken up the road to the north, where there is little or no habitation, and the doings of the car could be practically free from all observation. The car, it is stated, ran well enough for a distance and then stranded on the hill that leads to the Catholic university gate. It refused to make the trip to Brookland, and had to be towed back to the power house by one of the trolley cars.

This new motor is described by one who has seen it to be sort of compromise between the Hoadley motor, such as has been in use here for the past three months, and the Hardie motor, which has been undergoing tests in mechanics, and has in place of fire pot to heat the air as it is used a storage boiler filled with super-heated water. This is one of the distinctive features of the Hardie car.

The new motor is accommodated by a JBroadway car body.

The New Steamer Ericsson.

The large and handsome passenger and freight steamer Ericsson, constructing for the Baltimore and Philadelphia Steamboat Company (Ericsson line), was successfully launched Saturday at the shipyard of Neafie & Levy, Philadelphia. A large crowd witnessed the launch, including a number of Baltimoreans. The new steamer was christened by Miss Harriet E. E. Wallender of Philadelphia, daughter of the president of the company. The Ericsson is 230 feet long, 24 feet wide and has a depth of 10 feet 6 inches. She will be handsomely fitted up.

The "American Ambassador."

Wm. E. Curtis in Chicago Record.

Col. Hay has been criticised because he calls himself "the American ambassador," and refers to the United States embassy as "the American embassy," as if there were no other nation on this continent. It is suggested that such an assumption is offensive to the republics of Central and South America. On the contrary, the people of those countries are in the habit of using the same term. Citizens of the United States are known as Americans all over the world. Even in Mexico it is a common phrase in the newspapers and in conversation and often in official documents. In South America it is common for the officials of the government to address communications to "the American minister," and Col. Hay has only adopted a conventional form of speech.

Street Improvements.

Surveyors were at work yesterday on lower 37th street between Prospect avenue and P street marking out the lines for what were given out as future improvements for the thoroughfare. This news was greeted with much pleasure by the residents of the street, who at last see some chance of having the highway placed in good enough condition to be used for traffic.

The work of improving the alley opening into the south side of Dumbarton avenue between 31st and 32d streets, which was begun several weeks ago by the District government, has been stopped. The alley is left in a very bad condition, much worse than it ever was, and considerable indignities are expressed over the matter by property owners interested. It is claimed that some of the property extends over the alley line, hence the delay.
